CREDIT BUREAU

So many letters of approval have been received regarding The Cash Box plan for a Coin Machines Credit Bureau that it is now the general belief that this Bureau should be put into operation as soon as possible so that while this industry is smaller and more highly concentrated the Credit Bureau will be able to get into efficient action and therefore be properly set up for the post-war era.

References, names, business associates, general dealings, background, etc., etc., will have to be set up and a complete file kept for the members of this industry with any changes in general status recorded as they occur. (Those men who believe that the Coin Machines Credit Bureau should get under way immediately are invited to write us their opinions and also give us whatever information they think we shall require for their own welfare.)

We frankly admit that The Cash Box is not yet fully geared to handle the Coin Machines Credit Bureau. Many changes and clarifications will have to be made as we go along. But, time will help, and we do believe that by placing the Coin Machines Credit Bureau into action now we shall have the nucleus for the greatest recognition medium the trade wants.

The Coin Machines Credit Bureau under the impartial auspices of The Cash Box will act as the necessary financial sounding post for this industry. It will eventually be able to arrange for general credit information for all members of this industry. Many have already availed themselves of the personal knowledge of the trade which The Cash Box has and a great many phone calls and letters are received each week asking actual "Credit Bureau" questions.

The financial information which you will give the Coin Machines Credit Bureau will be completely confidential and most definitely to your advantage. It will react with profit in your regard. The Credit Bureau will be able, by this information, to guide any sales or purchases and also any other business transactions as well as offer complete information in regard to the general questions the other firms would like to know about you. In this fashion you are gaining the type of recognition that will prove most beneficial.

We therefore extend an invitation to those men thruout the trade who have asked that the Coin Machines Credit Bureau be started now to give us all the information they feel we shall need for their best interests. The Coin Machines Credit Bureau as conducted by The Cash Box will be an impartial and non-profit organization.

LIQUOR RATIONING

Sometime ago The Cash Box advised that liquor rationing was under way on a voluntary basis by agreement among the larger distillers with their wholesalers thruout the country. We also advised that the beer brewers were also considering rationing because WPB had rationed malt. This is something which everyone engaged in the coin machines industry should take under advisement.

Beer and liquor rationing will no doubt cause coin operated equipment to be most important to each one of the retailers who feature these items. But, at the same time, it is bound to effect play on all types of equipment located in these establishments. People will not patronize those locations where unwise rationing has tightened to the point where no drinks are obtainable.

Already thruout the country it is noted that retail liquor dealer's associations are for earlier closing hours so that with beer and liquor rationing in effect they will still be able to handle their business during the hours that they are open. Shorter hours mean less play.

This will have some effect on volume collections. Yet, it must be remembered that with shorter hours in effect in these retail spots and with less play action, the equipment will be able to outlast the war on the theory that less play means longer life for mechanisms generally. (At the same time, less play means less profits, unless the 30% commission basis, so much urged by The Cash Box, is placed into instant effect in those locations where such action will be most necessary.)

Beer and liquor rationing will not have a disastrous effect on this industry. In fact, it may even act as a sobering agent upon certain members of the trade to better align them for finer business practices and generally better understanding for the necessity for financial reserves as well as bettering conditions for all concerned with this business.

POST WAR

Every outstanding industry in the country has a division planning for post-war business. The general belief is that so large a backlog of orders will have accrued by the time the war is over that each industry will need someone to help them back into speedy and necessary sales action.

The war is acting as a purge. It is clearing away much from this industry that was unnecessary. It is removing this waste matter to better benefit those who insist on continuing in the coin machines business. It means that very soon this industry will find itself with a nucleus of the best men left. This nucleus will help put this industry back into speedy action after the war is over and manufacturers gradually start production again.

There is also no doubt that many new manufacturers will appear on the coin machines scene. Many of these are now watching this industry and have been carefully watching it for sometime. This also means that the men who are now engaged in the coin machines business will need to be prepared to meet the competition and the new merchandising and general business which will naturally come to this industry.

The very first and best thing that everyone engaged in this industry today can do is to set aside a "post-war reserve". Not only for the purchase of new equipment but, also for the competition that is bound to develop and the growth that is necessary. Many businesses have been cut down to the bone. These will once again want to expand to their former size and perhaps even to a larger size than they formerly enjoyed. All this can only be made possible with a proper financial reserve.

There is no doubt that as many manufacturers enter this industry the problem of credit, distribution, sales, etc., will once again enter into the general industrial equation which comprises all enterprise of this character. To handle such divisions of merchandising which will arise, and for which each man feels himself best suited, the men with the proper financial reserve will be those who will be first and best favored.

It is therefore for the better welfare of those now engaged in the coin machines industry that The Cash Box urges a reserve be set aside as a "post-war fund" to help get this industry back into the speediest possible action when the war is over.

WPB ORDER L-41

Many engaged in the coin machines industry haven't paid too much attention to WPB's Conservation Order L-41, which limits construction for any amusement place to but $200. The penalty for disobeying this order can be a $10,000. fine, 1 year in jail, or both. If you are therefore planning to open an arcade it is well to remember this Conservation Order.

PAT-ON-THE-BACK DEPT.

"Our ad in The Cash Box has shown great results and we feel certain it will continue to do so. We are 100% in favor of the policies of The Cash Box and enclose our check for the next six months." This letter was sent to us this past week by B. Siegel of P. & S. Machine Company, Chicago, Ill.

The following letter from Bill Marmor of Sicking, Inc., Cincinnati, Ohio speaks for itself, "I am more than ever sold on The Cash Box as it really gives me what I want when it comes to finding out just what good and bad equipment is being sold for, and at the same time it gives us an idea of just what equipment is in demand, and a lot of other information that we could not get from any other source."

HONORABLE MENTION

This week Harry Rosenthal of Automatic Amusement Co., Pittsburgh, Pa. is being given our Honorable Mention Award for the work he has done with the Victory Fund Committee in his city. Harry has also interested himself in much other charity work and has won the plaudits of many outstanding leaders in his community. Because this work was done unselfishly and because it reflects with honor upon all this industry he is most deserving of the Honorable Mention Award.

Also this week our Honorable Mention Award is being given to Earl E. Reynolds of Walbox Sales Company, Dallas, Texas, for his efforts in behalf of all the operators in his state. Earl is one of the few men in this industry who feel that time and effort and energy should be given freely and unselfishly to help better conditions for all concerned with the coin machines industry.

MANPOWER

The manpower problem continues to grow more acute for many engaged in this industry. In some cases it has become so acute that some have been forced to cut down their routes below the point they figured on cutting. This is all part of the larger problem of the war which has now begun to make itself felt even into the most remote parts of the country.

The manpower problem in the coin machines industry is being solved in larger communities by the coinmen themselves and the solution which they are practising is helping to bring about greater cooperation and general understanding. Those men who still have mechanics available and allow their mechanics to help fellow operators in their own and surrounding communities are helping to bring all coinmen closer together, creating better understanding and assuring the industry generally that by such closer

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records and the role of the auditor in this process. It highlights the need for transparency and accountability in financial reporting, particularly in the context of public sector organizations. The text emphasizes that the auditor's primary responsibility is to provide an independent and objective assessment of the financial statements, ensuring that they are free from material misstatements. This involves a thorough examination of the underlying transactions and supporting documentation. The document also touches upon the ethical considerations that govern the auditor's conduct, such as the requirement to remain impartial and to avoid conflicts of interest. Furthermore, it discusses the communication of audit findings to the relevant stakeholders, including the board of directors and the general public, and the importance of providing clear and concise explanations for the audit opinion. The text concludes by reiterating the significance of the auditor's role in promoting trust and confidence in the financial system.

The second part of the document focuses on the specific procedures and techniques used by auditors to identify and assess risks. It describes the process of risk assessment, which involves identifying the areas of the financial statements that are most susceptible to misstatement and evaluating the likelihood and potential impact of such misstatements. This process is often guided by the auditor's professional judgment and the use of risk assessment tools and models. The document also discusses the importance of understanding the client's business and industry, as this knowledge is essential for identifying the specific risks that are most relevant to the organization. Furthermore, it highlights the need for the auditor to maintain a high level of skepticism and to be alert to any signs of fraud or other irregularities. The text concludes by emphasizing the importance of documenting the risk assessment process and the results of the audit procedures, as this provides a clear and concise record of the auditor's work and findings.

The third part of the document discusses the various types of audit opinions that an auditor can issue and the implications of each. It explains that the auditor's opinion is based on the results of the audit procedures and the extent to which the financial statements are found to be free from material misstatements. The document describes the four main types of audit opinions: unqualified, qualified, adverse, and disclaimer. It also discusses the factors that can lead to a qualified or adverse opinion, such as the discovery of material misstatements or the presence of significant uncertainties. Furthermore, it highlights the importance of the auditor's communication of the reasons for the opinion and the implications of the findings to the relevant stakeholders. The text concludes by emphasizing the need for the auditor to maintain a high level of professional skepticism and to be prepared to issue an adverse opinion if the financial statements are found to be materially misstated.

The final part of the document discusses the role of the auditor in promoting transparency and accountability in financial reporting. It highlights the importance of the auditor's independent and objective assessment of the financial statements, as this provides a clear and concise record of the organization's financial performance. The text also discusses the need for the auditor to maintain a high level of professional skepticism and to be alert to any signs of fraud or other irregularities. Furthermore, it emphasizes the importance of the auditor's communication of the results of the audit procedures and the implications of the findings to the relevant stakeholders. The document concludes by reiterating the significance of the auditor's role in promoting trust and confidence in the financial system.

"The Coin Machines Merry-Go-Round"

brotherhood we shall all eventually better profit.

Therefore, even with so acute and puzzling a problem as that of the manpower shortage, which is extremely serious in this industry, there is still a silver lining in the fact that the men engaged in this industry have been brought closer together for their own protection and welfare, and will eventually work out between themselves the solution for a great many problems which now beset the trade.

A letter from L. Helen Cusson of the Portland, Ore. office of Jack R. Moore Co., bears out one contention of The Cash Box (first made many, many months ago) that the gals are fitted for servicing coin operated equipment. Miss Cusson writes, "We believe out here in the Northwest that we, the Jack R. Moore Company, not only pioneered in this matter of having young ladies out on the servicing of phonograph equipment, but also in the fact that these young ladies have for transportation, motorcycles. Not only are the operators now coming to us and requesting information as to where we were able to secure these young ladies, but also the motorcycles, and if we could secure some for them, too. However, when this War is over, these young gals will not be taking the place of a boy who left our organization to enter the armed services, but rather, we expect to have a bigger and better company that will not only embody those who entered the service and who wish to return to us, but also those who kept the fires burning at home while these boys were out fighting the war."

In Linden, N.J., we discovered a very small operator who has but one service gal at work for him and who maintains that she has outshined everyone of the men he formerly had in this position. He praises her work so highly and comments so grandly as to the respect she has won from all his locations that he has encouraged many of the other operators in his community and surrounding territory to try this "service gal" angle for themselves.

It must also be remembered, that with this manpower problem has arisen one fine effort on the part of the owners of many routes who have once again started out for themselves to do their own servicing, collecting and repairs and have come again into closer contact with their locations. There is nothing in the world for better contact and understanding like the owner of the route himself covering his own stops. This, too, the result of the manpower shortage, has helped bring about a better understanding of all general problems in regard to this industry.

We admit further, that many other solutions will come about to help solve the manpower problem in this industry. Routes that have been cut down have helped others in the trade with the equipment they purchase from these routes. This, too, has a healthy effect upon all the industry for it is continuing to bring equipment to market that is absolutely essential for a profitable continuance of this business.

Much good and some harm has been the result of the manpower shortage. Owners of routes who imagined they needed a very large force have since discovered that they are getting along fine with a much smaller force. This has opened a new line of thought for these men and will help to bring about larger operations in the future.

We believe that the manpower problem is gradually solving itself. We also feel that it has harmed some it has done the majority much good and that this majority looks at the industry with far greater understanding than ever before.

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

This past week's issue (May 4) carried a feature page on "Juvenile Delinquency" and we hope that everyone of our subscribers removed it from that issue and posted it in a most prominent place so that all might see and read it.

As we have explained from time to time the problem of juvenile delinquency grows with each passing day. The Associated Operators of Los Angeles County, Inc., thru their energetic and enterprising director, Samuel "Curley" Robinson, long ago realized that this was one problem which the coin machines industry would have to fight. The grand battle which they have put up already and which they are fighting each day was reported in the May 4th issue and has won the commendation of everyone of the leaders in this industry. The problem of juvenile delinquency has reached an extremely acute stage.

This past week in the staid Newark Evening News (Wed., April 28) a front page feature story appeared captioned, "A Night with City's Young Delinquents". It was sub-captioned: "Tour with Boy Gang is Typical". It was written by John C. Davies, Jr., one of the best investigators for this most noted evening paper. Part of his lengthy feature reads:

"In a brightly lit slot machine arcadia in Market Street two 'teen age girls were playing a basketball game with pennies, and turning levers which made a pellet hop about. They were dressed alike; they wore the same hair-do; they looked to be 16, at most. They said they were twin sisters waiting for 12:30 A.M. because they had a date at a "hamberger jernt" with two soldiers. As they twisted the levers two dapper youths stopped beside them, and one said, "You push the lever too hard, sister, Here, watch me". He plunked a penny into the slot, very snappy like, and nudged the levers with a flourish. Bells clanged. Lights buzzed. The score hit into the thousands. A number of visits to these 1-cent and 5 cent amusement halls revealed that youngsters heavily outnumbered adults in the play of the bell-ringing, lightflashing slot machine games."

We leave the rest of the thinking to you. Do you or do you not believe that this is the time to absolutely eliminate minors at whatever cost to your take?

Introduction to Quantum Mechanics

The first part of the course will deal with the basic principles of quantum mechanics. We will start with the wave function and the Schrödinger equation. We will then discuss the uncertainty principle and the measurement process. The second part of the course will deal with the applications of quantum mechanics to atoms and molecules. We will discuss the hydrogen atom, the harmonic oscillator, and the spin of particles. The third part of the course will deal with the applications of quantum mechanics to solids and semiconductors. We will discuss the band structure of solids and the properties of semiconductors.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the general theory of the subject. It is shown that the theory is based on the principle of least action, which is a fundamental principle of physics. The principle of least action states that the path taken by a particle between two points is the one for which the action is a minimum. This principle is used to derive the equations of motion for a particle, which are the same as those obtained from Newton's laws of motion.

In the second part of the paper, the theory is applied to the case of a particle moving in a potential field. It is shown that the path of the particle is determined by the potential energy function. The path is a curve of constant energy, and the energy is conserved throughout the motion. This result is consistent with the conservation of energy in classical mechanics.

The third part of the paper discusses the relationship between the theory of least action and quantum mechanics. It is shown that the theory of least action is a special case of the more general theory of quantum mechanics. In quantum mechanics, the path of a particle is not deterministic, but rather probabilistic. The probability of a particle taking a certain path is given by the square of the amplitude of the path. This result is consistent with the uncertainty principle in quantum mechanics.

Finally, the paper discusses the implications of the theory for the foundations of physics. It is shown that the theory of least action provides a unified framework for understanding the laws of physics. It is a powerful tool for deriving the equations of motion for a wide variety of physical systems, and it has been used to derive the equations of motion for particles, fields, and even the universe as a whole.

NOTICE TO PHOTOMATIC MACHINE OWNERS

This is to advise the trade that our reserve supply of Mutoscope metal and cardboard frames is now exhausted. We wish to thank our many friends and customers for the orders we were favored with. Refund checks are being mailed to cover orders received to date which we have been unable to fill. We have no more metal or cardboard Photoframes for sale regardless of price offered. Therefore please do not wire, telephone or mail inquiries on Photoframes as this will save both you and us time and money answering inquiries. We are buying Photoframes for our own operations and have none for sale to the trade whatsoever.

WANTED

Sandy or International Metal Photoframes; also late round corner cardboard frames. Will pay top dollar. Price no object. Wire collect how many available, age and price; also date you guarantee to ship.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records and the role of the auditor in this process.

It is essential for the auditor to understand the business operations and the accounting system used by the client. This involves a thorough review of the financial statements and supporting documents.

The auditor should also be aware of the risks associated with the business and the potential for fraud. This requires a high level of professional skepticism and a commitment to ethical standards.

In addition, the auditor must maintain clear communication with the client throughout the audit process. This includes providing regular updates on the progress of the audit and addressing any concerns or questions that may arise.

The final part of the document outlines the steps involved in the audit process, from the initial planning stage to the final reporting stage. Each step is described in detail, including the specific tasks and responsibilities of the auditor.

Overall, the document emphasizes the importance of a thorough and professional audit process. It provides a comprehensive overview of the various aspects of auditing, from the initial planning stage to the final reporting stage.

The document also highlights the role of the auditor in providing an independent and objective assessment of the financial statements. This is a key responsibility of the auditor and is essential for the integrity of the financial reporting process.

In conclusion, the document provides a detailed and comprehensive overview of the audit process. It is a valuable resource for auditors and other professionals involved in the financial reporting process.

The document is a clear and concise guide to the audit process, providing a thorough overview of the various aspects of auditing. It is a valuable resource for auditors and other professionals involved in the financial reporting process.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD
FROM: [Name]
SUBJECT: [Subject]

[Faded text follows, including a list of items and a summary of findings.]

It is noted that the results of the analysis are in good agreement with the theoretical values. The data indicate that the reaction proceeds quantitatively under the conditions studied.

The following table summarizes the experimental data obtained during the course of the study. The values are given in arbitrary units.

Run No.	Concentration	Yield (%)
1	0.1 M	95
2	0.2 M	98
3	0.5 M	100

The results of the study are consistent with the proposed mechanism. The reaction is first order with respect to the reactant and zero order with respect to the catalyst. The rate of reaction increases with increasing temperature and decreasing concentration of the reactant.

Very truly yours,

IMPORTANT

The Confidential Price Lists are to be read as follows: First price listed is lowest price for the week; Second price listed is highest price for the week; Where only one price appears this should be considered lowest price.

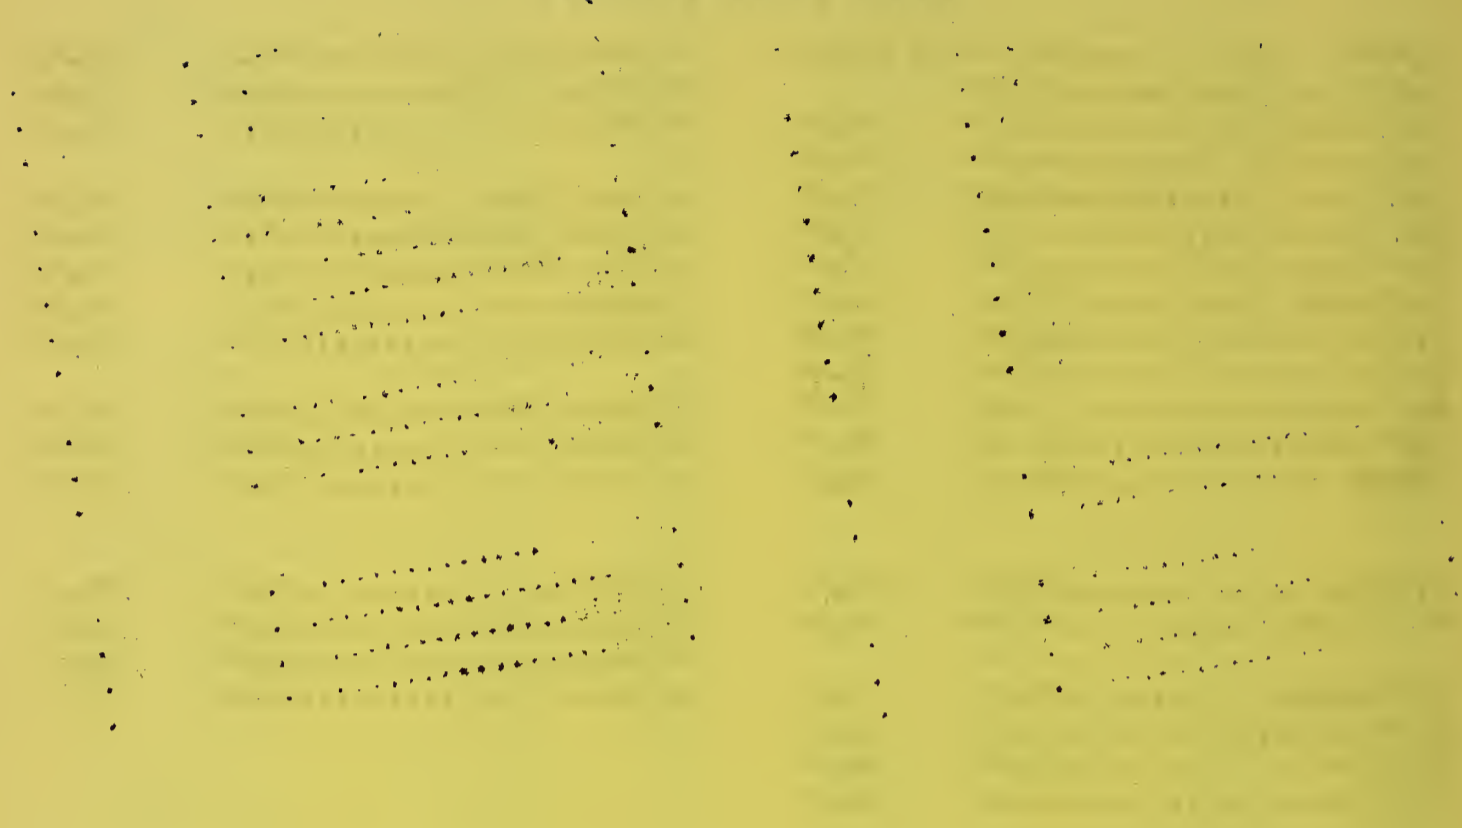

Many times, wide differences appear in the high and low prices of certain equipment. Like any true reporter The Confidential Price Lists can only feature the market prices as they are quoted. The Confidential Price Lists act exactly the same as the market quotation board at the Stock Exchange—posting the prices exactly as they are quoted for each week, regardless of how much they may seem to be out of line. Some machine prices do not change for months. The Confidential Price Lists, rather than show no price for the week, retain the last known quotations for such equipment so that the subscriber at least has the last known quoted prices as a basis to work with. Prices continue to be very widely divergent these days. Someone on the West Coast may feel a certain machine worth $150.00 whereas someone on the East Coast may think it worth but $75.00. Of course, condition, serial, appearance, demand, territory, quantity, etc., must all be taken into consideration. The Confidential Price Lists report each quotation exactly as it is made and depend on the subscriber to make average price adjustment to fit the peculiarities of his own territory.

COMPARISON OF TWO

STATISTICAL INFERENCE

This section discusses the principles of statistical inference, including estimation and hypothesis testing. It covers the concepts of population parameters, sample statistics, and the distribution of sample means. The text explains how to use sample data to make inferences about the population, and discusses the importance of confidence intervals and p-values. It also touches on the concept of statistical significance and the role of the null hypothesis in hypothesis testing.

The text is written in a clear, concise style, suitable for a textbook or lecture notes. It provides a solid foundation for understanding the basics of statistical inference, and is accessible to students with a background in introductory statistics. The use of simple language and clear examples helps to make complex concepts easier to understand.
