LIVE FROM THE USA

Practically everyone who's anyone exhibits at the summer Consumer Electronic Show in Chicago. It's the time and the place where all of the games publishers reveal early versions or news of their Christmas biggies – and hardware manufacturers woo the games makers with hush hush previews of their new machines. This year's show was a roaring success and we'll be telling you what to watch out for in our massive 16 page spesh.

For two reasons the show was a little smaller than usual this year. Firstly, pretty well all of the software houses claim that they'll be releasing fewer but better games over the next 18 months. Secondly, none of the public were admitted because the money men and women were busy tying up deals to publish software on the new machines.

Sega seemed to feel that with this Christmas' release of Mega Drive 32-X it's got everything in the bag. Its stand was smaller than even some of the lesser software houses. But Nintendo, which has been a bit left out of the hardware war, went for maximum overkill with show-stopping demos of its new Ultra 64 machine (formerly tagged as Project Reality) and the truly wonderful and hitherto-unheard-of SNES game, Donkey Kong Country. 3DO games were in abundance on Panasonic, Goldstar and Sanyo machines, with the quality of 3DO software coming on in leaps and bounds.

Also on the machine side, two new, more affordable CD-i units were announced in time for a Christmas release, and Atari's CD add-on for the Jaguar was unveiled, along with a brace of brand new Jag games.

However, this time round there were fewer new big-name coin-op and film licences doing the rounds, with notable exceptions such as Mortal Kombat II, True Lies, Lion King, Flintstones and Shadow. God knows how many film licences Ocean has done. More than anyone, certainly. But even the Manchester lads will be doing far fewer of them in future.

The standards set by the up-and-coming machines will mean that games will be bigger and more expensive to produce and will take so long to make that there's less chance than ever of anyone tying together the release dates of films and games.

Overall this was a show of few shocks and spills which nonetheless had more than enough good, interesting games on offer. There was plenty of news about SNES releases, but a further drop in the number of new Mega Drive titles. PC CD-ROM seems to be the big winner now...

USA

WHEN I'M 64

Last year it was 3DO. This time round, the event that had everyone talking was Nintendo's 64-bit venture. Formerly known as Project Reality, Nintendo unveiled the ultra 64 to the press...

Nintendo played the waiting game as journalists wondered whether they'd be allowed to see the machine in action. But the number of invitations rose steadily through the show and we were bussed off to a hotel suite where Nintendo staff had been polishing up their best PR spin.

After waiting in a courtesy room we were led into a curtained-off area about six yards long and four wide. A Nintendo rep spoke to us. He needn't have used the microphone that made him sound like Ronald Reagan — it was corny, but his easy charm and hard sales techniques built up expectations even more.

He shouldn't have bothered. When the curtains were pulled back and we were left looting on the machines the sheer power of the Ultra 64 games was enough to bowl us over.

There were just two games on show: the Nintendo/Williams beat-'em-up Killer Instinct, and Cruisin' USA, a race game from the same team. They both play well in these early versions and look fabulous, Killer in particular. This is a blood-splattered Mortal Kombat-style fighting game which features fully ray-traced space that are a dream to control.

Ultra 64 will appear in the arcades before moving into the home. Both of the games we saw were inside coin-op cabinets, but Nintendo insists that the home versions will be exactly the same.

That point is key. Killer Instinct and Cruisin' USA are two notches above anything in the arcades — but if they make it into the home intact they may well knock the spots off anything Nintendo's rivals put on offer.

Meanwhile Acclaim announced that it is the first third party developer to sign up for the system. Its currently working on a game based around characters from the Voyager comic books — the publishers of which Acclaim bought up earlier in the year during another massive spending spree.

VR32 SCOOP!

A top — and we mean top — source has revealed details of Nintendo's VR32 machine that finally puts paid to speculation.

The new VR32 system from Nintendo, exclusively revealed in issue 151, will NOT be an upgrade for the SNES, but will be a portable machine with a built-in VR headset, according to a source close to the head of Nintendo Of America. We're told that at the moment it can only display in black-and-white, although that shouldn't detract from the genuinely new experience it offers, claims our source.

Apparently Nintendo's research & development boys are doing further research before the company makes a final decision on whether or not to release the machine. "It's so different from anything else that the public will either love it or drop it like a stone," claimed the source.

WILD IN KONG COUNTRY

USA

Kong needs to employ the help of other jungle dwellers to help him in his quest.

Nintendo practically stole the CES show with its imminent launch of a Donkey Kong game – but it's like nothing you've ever seen before on SNES!

Clickin' in at 32 Meg – this is also the biggest SNES platformer of all time. Carl Nintendo has excelled with this game – it's easily the best looking SNES game ever.

You'd have thought that Nintendo would have plenty to shout about at CES, with its new machine, Ultra 64, wowing everyone who saw it. The Big N did have a product worthy of the size of the stand – but it's not their new games machine. It was a real cracker under wraps to all but a select few. The product in question was a new SNES game, Donkey Kong Country – and CVG is the first magazine anywhere to bring you screenshots of this show-stopper!

No prizes for guessing it's a platform game (alright then, maybe a bag of sweets) but what's got those in the know enthusing about Donkey Kong Country is the graphic style: the programmers have abandoned conventional sprites, in favour of rendered computer images to give the characters an ultra-realistic look. Using a technique called Advanced Computer Modelling (ACM), programmers Rare Ltd – formerly Ultimate of Knight Lore fame and later a big performer on the NES stage – have come up with certainly one of the best-looking SNES games for a long, long time, nailing even some of the things we've seen on more advanced systems!

Donkey Kong joins forces with a new sidekick, Diddy Kong, in a journey across a variety of magical worlds chock-full of goodies – and baddies. There's no firm release date for Donkey Kong Country in the UK as yet, although with a US launch in November it's a fair bet that the game will appear before Christmas on this side of The Pond. Nintendo reckons that this one will put Mario to sleep for the next five years. A number one Yuletide chart position for Nintendo, perchance?

SNES attack

USA For everybody the consoles market is supposed to be in decline; but that hasn't stopped a glut of new releases for the Super Nintendo.

Big names rubbed shoulders with the lesser-known titles, but only you can decide what will do well and what won't...

DONKEY KONG COUNTRY

Out: Winter '94
The biggest SNES game yet at $24.99, the cart needs as much money as it can get to hold all those incredible rendered graphics. $7 million is being spent in the US on promoting this platform romp, so you can be sure it'll sell by the bar rest-load come November.

WARIO'S WOODS

Out: Autumn '94
Up until now the staple diet of the Game Boy owner, SNES fans can now join in the Tetris-style puzzling fun with this game based around Mario's arch enemy, Link together like-shaped objects to score points and clear the screen - simple but highly addictive.

SUPER PUNCH-OUT

Out: Autumn '94
An upgraded version of the popular boxing coin-op of a few years back. Those with long memories will remember Frank Bruno's Boxing on Spectrum, which was very much based on this game. More characters and new moves feature this time around.

TETRIS 2

Out: Autumn '94
The sequel to the most popular puzzler ever comes to SNES! More of the same, but this time the blocks come in a multitude of shapes and sizes! The Game Boy version's great, receiving 84% in issue 152; the SNES game should be just as much fun.

UNIRACERS

Out: Autumn '94
Take the speed of Sonic, the Hedgehog, slap it onto a SNES cart and swap the central character for a unicycle and you've got the basic gist of Uniracers. Frantic one or two player action across over 100 different tracks!

TINSTAR

Out: Autumn '94
Don't worry, Super Scope owners; Nintendo hasn't forgotten about you as is proved by the forthcoming release of TinStar, a seven-level blaster set in a futuristic Wild West where the cowboys are robots!

POPEYE

Out: Autumn '94
The spinach-munching sailor makes an appearance on SNES in a fairly run-of-the-mill platform game.

MIGHTY MORPHIN POWER RANGERS

Out: Winter '94
The surprise kids' TV hit becomes a videogame, during which you're bound to run into all manner of enemies in a platform-based setting. Hope it's better than the telly show.

THE FLINTSTONES

Out: Autumn '94
Licensed from the record-breaking new Spielberg movie starring John Goodman and Rick Moranis, The Flintstones features really big sprites, and the characters look like their on-screen counterparts. Unoriginality reigns supreme, though.

JELLY BOY

Out: Autumn '94
Designed and programmed by Mortal Kombat boys Probe, you control Jelly Boy, a young feller who's able to morph into all manner of objects, such as hammers and even a helicopter, with hilarious results.

THE SHADOW

Out: Winter '94
Ocean has crossed Street Fighter with puzzle sections in its conversion of the comic book and radio show. It looks good, but does the SNES really need another beat-'em-up?

STARFLEET ACADEMY

Out: Autumn '94
Want to learn how to fly like Captain Kirk? You'll be able to soon, when Interplay releases its starship simulator on the Super Nintendo.

LORD OF THE RINGS

Out: Winter '94
The Super NES plays host to some surprisingly good RPGs, and Interplay's conversion of the classic Tolkien adventure epic should hold its own nicely in such venerable company as Zelda.

CLAY FIGHTER II

Out: Winter '94
More characters! More combos! More clay! Yes, the Clay Fighters are back, in yet more gripping Street Fighter-ish antics.

BLACKTHORNE

Out: Winter '94
Nothing to do with cider, Blackthorne is a platform-based, rotoscoped slash-'em-up, a bit like Flashback but in bygone days. Great graphics and sounds abound.

ULTIMATE FIGHTER

Out: Winter '94

With Mortal Kombat II and Super Street Fighter about to burst on to the scene, it seems a strange time to launch a pretty standard beat-'em-up.

WCW SUPERBRAWL WRESTLING

Out: Autumn '94
It may be the poor relation to WWF, but this game based on WCW looks mighty impressive. It remains to be seen how it'll stand up against its better-known counterpart in the gameplay stakes, though.

VORTEX

Out: Winter '94
Super FX games are taking off in a big way, and this one from Electro Brain has a distinctly Battletech look about it.

INDIANA JONES' GREATEST ADVENTURES

Out: Autumn '94
The man in the hat is back! It looks quite similar to the Star Wars games on SNES, which shouldn't surprise you since it's been created by JVC, who released both Super Star Wars and Empire Strikes Back, and are soon to show off Super Return Of The Jedi!

WOLVERINE: AN X-MEN TALE

Out: Winter '94
Going solo for a while after a long stint with the X-Men, Wolverine stars in his own platform game! Look out for this one, probably on the Acclaim label.

IMPOSSIBLE MISSION 2025

Out: Autumn '94
Doing the rounds on the Amiga at present, the SNES conversion of the upgraded C64 mega-hit should do well when it's released, especially considering it's got the original game included on the cart as well as this new remix!

PAC-MAN 2: THE NEW ADVENTURES

Out: Winter '94
Pac returns in a sequel to the brilliant, if slightly dated, Pac Land coin-op! There are more monsters, bigger levels and, hey, a warm nostalgic feeling too.

REX RONIN: EXPERIMENTAL SURGEON

Out: Autumn '94
From the people who brought you the truly desperate diabetes blaster, Captain Navarin, comes Rex Ronin: Experimental Surgeon. The title on its own is probably enough to steer you away from a likely purchasing error.

ASP: AIR STRIKE PATROL

Out: Winter '94
Have a guess what the programmers have been hooked on while creating this forced perspective action wargame? The reek of Desert Strike is almost nauseous!

THE DEATH AND RETURN OF SUPERMAN

Out: Autumn '94
There's never been a Superman game on SNES yet, and this one from the

SNES attack NES

STREET RACER

Out: Autumn '94
This two-player racer from UBI Soft actually doesn't look that bad at all. The Mode-7 graphics work well, and there seems to be quite a challenge here. The split-screen option doesn't suffer from noticeable slowdown, either.

Sun Corporation does have a good 'un, with big sprites and frantic gameplay. It looks a bit Final Fight-y, though.

THE JETSONS: INVASION OF THE PLANET PIRATES

Out: Autumn '94
Join George Jetson and the rest of his future family in a 90s videogame representation of the popular, Hanna Barbera '70s cartoon.

SAMURAI SHODOWN

Out: Winter '94
Why buy an expensive Neo Geo when you can soon get the best beat-'em-up for that machine on your SNES?

SUPER GODZILLA

Out: Autumn '94
What makes this beat-'em-up stand out from the crowd is the huge sprites. They're a bit wiffy in the animation department, though, and the action's hardly up to Street Fighter II quality.

SHIEN'S REVENGE

Out: Winter '94
It's been a while since we've seen an Operation Wolf game on SNES. Apart from Lethal Enforcers. Mind you, this one does have some big, chunky sprites. Hurrh.

MICKEY'S ADVENTURE IN NUMBERLAND

Out: Winter '94
It's a platform game! Guide Mickey through the many levels of Numberland, picking up, erm, numbers as you travel. Sounds a hoot and a half.

DOUBLE DRAGON V: THE SHADOW FALLS

Out: Winter '94
If you're not fed up to the back teeth of Double Dragon games by now, then here's one that should keep you happy for at least a few minutes. Look out for its release at around the same time as the Double Dragon movie.

FLINK

Out: Autumn '94
Receiving a fair amount of attention on Game Drive, Psygnosis' latest platformer looks the part, but can it compete with the likes of Donkey Kong Country?

MICKY MANIA

Out: Winter '94
Where would the SNES be without its Mickey Mouse games? It's been a while since MM's been seen on console, and this one could be the best of the bunch.

USA The 8-bit NES continues to hang on in there, despite Nintendo's best efforts to get you to upgrade. Again, there are some big titles on the way, although it's likely that this is the last time we'll see the NES at CES.

BEST OF THE BEST CHAMPIONSHIP KARATE

Out: Autumn '94
It went down a storm on Amiga, SNES and PC Engine, and it's about to repeat the success on 8-bit Nintendo. Those sprites are awesomely animated, and the gameplay's pretty sharp, too.

MICKEY'S ADVENTURE IN NUMBERLAND

Out: Winter '94
It's a platform game! Guide Mickey through the many levels of Numberland, picking up, erm, numbers as you travel. Sounds a hoot and a half.

RESCUE RANGERS 2

Out: Winter '94
Capcom takes time off from its Street Fighting ways to produce the sequel to Rescue Rangers. That cute duo, Chip and Dale, make a welcome return in a platform which looks a lot like Super Mario Bros III. Hope it plays as good.

THE BLUE MARLIN

Out: Winter '94
Jack Charlton's Match Fishing take a hike! The NES brings you sea-fishing at its most exciting! Sit for ages! Wait for a fish! Catch it! The fun never ends...

TURTLES TOURNAMENT FIGHTERS

Game Boy

USA Nintendo concentrated more on the launch of the new Super Game Boy add-on for SNES than announcing new titles for the handheld, but that didn't stop a clutch of third party softcos from airing their wares.

STAR TREK: THE NEXT GENERATION

Out: Autumn '94
Let's hope that this is a different version to the one currently doing the rounds on SNES. Because that game, quite frankly, isn't very good.

MEGA MAN 5

Out: Autumn '94

RIDDICK BOWE BOXING

All the talk at the moment is of Lennox Lewis and Riddick Bowe climbing back into the ring together, so this boxing sim couldn't be timed better.

BLACK BASS LURE FISHING

We're not sure why these fishing sims are so popular in the States, but they obviously are because at least four appear every year.

Better known as PC Kid II, the little, bald prehistoric one returns to Game Boy in a conversion of the top PC Engine game.

STOP THAT ROACH!

Lovers of puzzle games and horrid

Konami looks to have created a pretty accurate conversion of the 16-bit battler, let's hope that it plays more like the SNES game than its Sega forebear.

CHAMPIONSHIP POOL

Out: Autumn '94
It may not be Jimmy White's in all its 3D glory, but this top-down pool sim won high praise on SNES, and this is an almost spot-on convert.

REN AND STIMPY: BUMPKINS

Out: Autumn '94
Cat and dog duos don't come much stranger than these two, and they're about to strut their stuff on 8-bit.

Steven Spielberg's low-quality TV show becomes - you guessed it - a horizontally scrolling underwater shoot-'em-up. In a submarine, naturally.

DAFFY DUCK

Out: Autumn '94
Daffy becomes Duck! Doodles in the 2nd (and a half) Century on Game Boy! And owners of Super-Colour, too!

TIP OFF

Out: Autumn '94
Originally appearing on Amiga, Ubi Soft has converted this not-bad basketball sim to the Game Boy.

CASINO!

Out: Autumn '94
Everybody likes a bet, especially when they don't lose. And you can't lose with Interplay's compilation of casino games - there's nowhere to stick the cones!

SEGA strikes back

With Nintendo currently stuck on the grid in the 32-Bit technology race, Sega claims that next year it will put its position on the shelf for good, and here's why...

Names, it's had a few. Mars, MD-32 and now Mega Drive 32-X. The latest addition to the Sega range promises to revitalize the flagging Mega Drive market. With the Saturn conspicuously absent from Sega's stand it was left up to the firm's new wonder peripheral to draw the crowds. Everything about the 32-X had an air of being rushed. There wasn't a completed version of the machine on show, no finished games either. The packaging for it and the games are still at the mock-up stage and look more like Kodak film boxes than traditional Sega branded material. Even so, for something which was just a rumour a few months ago, Sega seems to have moved mountains to get it and the games up and running for a Christmas release. And there's one overriding fact - it's going to be good.

As you probably know, it plugs into the cartridge slot of the Mega Drive, but once it's in that's it, there's no need to take it out again. All existing Mega Drive games should run through it. Also, despite rumours to the contrary, the 32-X also works with the Mega-CD, with four CD releases planned in the first batch of games.

The demo of Virtua Racing Deluxe on 32-X was running opposite Virtua Racing on Mega Drive. The 32-X version runs with twice as many polygons, tons more colours, a faster frame rate and added tracks and cars. With a provisional retail price of just £150 you can't argue with the power-to-price ratio. But should you wait for the Saturn? We'll have to see when the machine hits these shores in November.

Golf's Great 36 Holes

Sega

Well, you can hardly go wrong with a golf game, so it looks as though Sega is on to a safe bet here. Realistic graphics are what's on offer, but even with 32-Bit power behind it, topping PGA Golf won't be easy.

Fahrenheit

Sega

Bringing the Mega-CD into play comes the 32-X's first TruVideo game. Basically it's an FMV adventure, but unlike previous games of that ilk on Mega-CD, the graphics will be almost video quality.

Star Wars Arcade

Sega

With the coin-op's future in the balance, one thing's for sure in Virtua Star Wars' life - that'll be converted to 32-X. Anything with Star Wars attached to it is a big seller these days, and from what we've seen this won't be an exception.

Shadow Of Atlantis

Sega

Of all the initial 32-Bit games, this looks like being the most original. It's an aquatic adventure which makes full use of the machine's extended colour palette to produce some excellent rendered images.

Ecco The Dolphin

Sega
Although Sega hasn't announced this as a 32-Bit release, it would be surprising if Ecco didn't surface in the near future. Especially as Sega has had a full-colour Cinepak demo featuring the game's logo on show.

Virtua Racing Deluxe

Sega

As far as we could tell all the Deluxe refers to in the title is that the game will be almost arcade perfect, with a similar number of polygons on screen and the same ultra-fast speed. A few extra tracks wouldn't go amiss, though.

Virtua Fighters

Sega

Although Sega's official 32-X press packs don't mention Virtua Fighters, it's hard to see them not converting it from this coin-op version - especially with Virtua Racing on the way.

Mortal Kombat II

Acclaim

This is one game which holds so much potential on 32-Bit. While the standard Mega Drive version promises to be good, you might as well be playing the coin-op when you play this.

Alien Trilogy

Acclaim

Although Acclaim is keeping pretty quiet on this, it looks as though this will be one of the first third party 32-X games to make use of the Mega-CD. We've seen it running on a development machine and can honestly say this is going to be a landmark title. We've never seen anything quite like it before.

Super Motocross

Sega

Putting the 32-X's scaling hardware to use will be this dirt-track bike race game. There aren't many details yet, but it will be one of the first releases. Chances are Sega will push the boat out with this, especially when you look at how well titles such as Super Hang-on have worked for them in the past.

Cyber Brawl

Sega

As if the likes of Mortal II and Virtua Fighters wasn't enough, Cyber Brawl gives you one-on-one 3D combat action. This should be coming out in the first batch of 32-Bit games. Sega have yet to publish shots, though, which suggests that this game might not see the light of day until some time next year. We'll just have to wait and see what happens.

Tempo

Sega

Where would Sega be without cutesy games? Nowhere's the answer. So continuing in the tradition is Tempo, which introduces a completely new character to Sega's already vast range of marketable stars. Fingers crossed we'll also be seeing the likes of Toejam & Earl appearing on the 32-X.

NBA Deluxe

Acclaim

This will be a conversion of the latest version of the world's most successful coin-op. Again, it's hard to envisage it being anything less than arcade perfect.

Doom

Sega

All right, so you're probably sick of hearing us harp on about how great this game is, but IT IS. The 32-X version will be identical to its PC cousin, including the gore and chairsaws, thankfully.

Metal Head

Sega

This futuristic Battletech-style robot combat game is still in its early stages. Even so it still looks good with fluid polygonal graphics - and that's before any shading has been added.

32-bit fax

● CPU: 2 Hitachi 32-Bit

ALL QUIET ON THE SEGA FRONT?

Apart from the Mega Drive 32-X, Sega itself had almost no software on show other than Virtua Racing and Super Street Fighter II. The company didn't really have room for it on its minuscule stand. However, it was a different story for its third-party publishers, with plenty of new titles as well as a few new names entering the Sega market. The release dates are for America only, so the games listed should be on import around that time with the official versions following shortly after.

Boogerman

Interplay
Boogerman, the star of this forthcoming platformer, is quite unlike any hero ever to star in a computer game. To start with he's made entirely out of snot, which lets him alter his shape to avoid nasties. This should be, umm, interesting.
Out: Early '95

Rock 'n' Roll Racing

Interplay
This conversion of Interplay's hit SNES race game looks like being spot on graphically, but the real trick will be keeping the music up to scratch. If it manages it the company will have a real winner on its hands.

Out: Winter

Mary Shelley's Frankenstein

Sony
With a hot licence like Frankenstein due out the same time as the new movie, you could be forgiven for expecting something new and outstanding. Unfortunately it looks like being a platformer. Still, it worked for the likes of The Addams Family, so let's hope that Sony puts some thought into it.
Out: Autumn.

Clay Fighter

Interplay
Also on show from Interplay was the Mega Drive version of Clay Fighter. Graphically it doesn't look quite as the SNES version, but all the

Mega Drive

While Sega beaver away on 32-X games, the rest of their developers are working on a crop of potentially excellent software.

Out: Winter

Pacman 2 - The New Adventures

Namco
Don't worry, this isn't another conversion of traditional Pacman, instead it's a scrolly arcade effort, with a be-limbed Pacman flying and fighting his way through the levels.
Out: Summer

Kartoon Kombat

American Technos
Here's a game with plenty of potential. Fair enough, it's another beat-'em-up, although this one features some excellent cartoon-style graphics – so no complaints about the violence, please.

Out: Autumn

Animaniacs

Konami
Wacko, Yakko and Dot, stars of the topper Spielberg cartoon series are set to make their console debut this Autumn. Like the Tiny Toon games, Konami has done a first rate job in doing the cartoon's animation justice. It's going to be a biggie.
Out: Autumn

Viewpoint

American Sammy Corporation
Yes! Finally someone has managed to have the sense to convert this ace arcade blaster. If it's even half as good as the original it'll still be a great game. We're definitely looking forward to this.

Out: Winter

Dragon's Lair

Taito
Don't confuse this with the near-unplayable coin-op original. Instead it's a platform game which should be a hell of a lot more interactive. Whether it's going to be good or not we'll have to wait and see.
Out: Autumn

Rainbow Islands

Mega Drive

Taito
It's been a very long time in coming, but soon Mega Drive owners will be able to get their paws on one of the most addictive platform games ever programmed, that started out all those years ago on Amiga.
Out: Autumn

Mega-CD

All things considered, there was a surprising amount on show for the Mega-CD. Not all of it was brilliant, but here are some of the better discs coming your way soon.

Return to Zork

Activision
Starring Sam Jones (aka Flash Gordon out of, er, Flash Gordon) this FMV adventure received mixed reviews on PC, but is now set to become the first of the dozen or so Zork games to appear on Mega-CD. It's highly unlikely that we'll see any more, but you can try this one for yourself when it's released next summer.
Out: Early '95

Flying Nightmares

Domark
Despite losing the publishing rights for Tengen games, Domark is still gearing up with a range of console software. Flying Nightmares, out next year, is a flight simulation featuring some of the world's most fearsome attack aircraft.

Out: Early '95

Gunfighters

Konami
The follow-up to Lethal Enforcers is due to hit the shelves just before Christmas '94. If you've already got the light guns they should work with this, otherwise you'll have to shell out for a set. Check out the coin-op review on page 102.
Out: Autumn

Space Ace

Readysoft
Not content with unleashing Dragon's Lair on the unsuspecting Mega-CD public, Readysoft is now gearing itself up for the launch of Space Ace - it's equally uninteractive follow-up. Don't hold your breath now will you?
Out: Summer

Myst

Sansoft
This excellent adventure scored a hefty 90% CVG Hit when we reviewed the PC version back in issue 151. It manages to combine stunning graphics with some of the most taxing gameplay ever encountered in an adventure game.

Out: Early '95

Game Gear

There's not much happening on the Game Gear at the moment that we haven't told you about. Keep an eye out instead for some hot official releases heading your way in the coming months.

Popeye's Beach Volleyball

American Technos
Making the most from its Popeye licence, American Technos has shovelled the Spinach devouring muscle man out onto the volleyball court in this Game Gear title. It looks interesting enough and the graphics are nice and clear. Let's just hope it plays well too.
Out: Autumn

Bubble Bobble

Taito
Yes! Yes! Yes! Finally all you Game Gear owners are going to be able to get your mitts on a version of this classic coin-op. This version sticks pretty much to the original version, although it features a massive 226 levels as opposed to the 100 of the coin-op.
Out: Autumn

Barbie Super Model

Hi Tech Entertainment
Oh yes this looks truly wonderful. Just what we've been waiting for. Another Barbie game. Whoop-ee-doo. In a bid to get more birds, girls, wooters, females to enjoy the delights of the Game Gear we have to put up with this sort of licence. It's educational though. Woo bleedin' wee.
Out: Autumn

Masterlink

Innovation
Sick of having to buy the same game twice just to go head-to-head with a mate on a Game Gear? Well Innovation has come up with a joypad adaptor which lets you connect a Mega Drive pad up to the Game Gear so two people can play on one machine. All we need now are some games to go with it.

TeeV Golf

Sports Sciences
CES always throws up some interesting gadgets, but this has to be one of the strangest. Basically it's a specially adapted club with a built in transmitter which determines what kind of stroke you play in your favourite golf game. It should be available over here in a matter of months priced at around £100.

ACCLAIM — BIG GAMES, BIG CLAIMS

Money bags Acclaim has the year's biggest names tied up...

Never the sort of company to miss out on the really BIG licences, Acclaim was more than happy to show off what could well be the biggest box-office hit of the year — True Lies. Starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, True Lies involves Arnie taking on nuclear terrorists around the world, getting into all manner of shooting, people-related scrapes — while his family and friends believe he's got an ordinary, 9-to-5 job! Sounds a bit of a cracker, and the game is due for release in October across all formats.

But what's even more exciting, certainly for those of you looking to upgrade to one of the new range of CD machines appearing between now and Christmas, is a new graphics programming system devised by Acclaim's US-based research and development arm, which allows the creation of FMV-quality sprites that are, in actual fact, entirely computer generated! What this means for the gamer is that, whereas full-motion video graphics are impossible to take control of with a joystick, this new system allows 100% interaction. Characters are created by first building a wire-frame model of a character, then texture-mapping computer scanned features over the top of this digital skeleton to give a totally realistic-looking character which you can control instead of just watch.

The first example we've seen of this new technology in action is a demo called Duel, which shows a human character and a massive alien battling it out across a rendered 3D landscape. You can judge the quality of the graphics for yourself by taking a look at the screenshots on this page, but stills really do not convey the quality of the animation: we are talking MOVIE QUALITY, 24 frames-per-second movement, with a full range of moves for both characters — the alien character even mutates into an even bigger beast!

The scope for this system is huge: Duel, for example, paves the way for a brand new breed of beat-'em-up. And because features such as skin, hair and facial structure are texture mapped on to the skeleton, there's no need to draw a massive amount of different bodies, which cut down on memory usage. Indeed, as you can see from the shots, alien battles can be turned into ice hockey players with ease. We've had a sneak preview of this system in use in a game that's actually being released on Sega Saturn and Sony PlayStation in May, it's a huge movie licence and, if everything goes according to plan, it'll be the best game ever seen! Details are hush-hush at present, but rest assured, CVG will bring you the full SP on this fantastic new breakthrough — and the first games to use it — very soon indeed. Stay tuned — this is going to change the face of videogaming as we know it!

duel

Not an actual game, but a demonstration of the capabilities of Acclaim's new graphics programming system, devised by the firm's US-based R&D department, ATG (Advanced Technologies Group). Using 'digital actors', the game creator can now produce FMV-quality characters which are fully interactive. Look out for news on a couple of new movie licences which exploit this incredible system soon.

true lies

SNES, Mega Drive
Here is the first ever shot of True Lies. The VideoGame! The game follows the movie plot closely, so expect such occurrences as car chases, chopper rescues (as shown) and blasting of baddies ahoj!

mortal kombat II

SNES, Game Boy, Game Gear
You can check out the Mega Drive version in our Work In Progress on page 40 — here, however, you can delight at the first shots of the SNES, Game Boy and Game Gear versions of the game that's sure to be number one for ages when it appears. As we said earlier, the battle begins.

stargate

SNES, Mega Drive
Stargate is being tipped as one of the big moves to see over the next few months. The plot revolves around time travel and aliens having created the pyramids and such like, and the game is predominantly left-to-right scrolling with 3D flying sections built in for good measure.

wwf raw

SNES, Mega Drive
WWF Raw is based on the popular Monday Night Raw programme on Sky and features all your favourite wrestlers from Lex Luger to Doink the Clown. Don't expect a vast difference between this and the others though, apart from new characters.

USHRA monster truckwar snes

USHRA stands for United States Hot Rod Association, and what you get is Mode 7-biased monster truck thrills and spills on your SNES! Set in the early stages, USHRA nonetheless looks promising.

nigel mansell's indycar racing

SNES, Mega Drive
Acclaim seems to have got its timing all wrong with Nigel Mansell's IndyCar Racing — it's looking increasingly likely that our Nigel will be back with the Williams F1 team soon. Still, the game looks good on SNES and Mega Drive, with 2 player split-screen action being an obvious pull.

VIE-ING FOR THE TOP WITH DISNEY AND LUCAS

USA

With LucasArts now finally under its belt, Virgin announces a fab new Star Wars game - but it hasn't turned its back on its console roots, grabbing the rights to the brand new Walt Disney movie!

the lion king

SNES, Mega Drive. Become Simba the Lion, as well as a host of other characters, in VIE's game-of-the-month-to-be blockbuster Disney movie. Over 2000 frames of animation are used to make the sprites move as elegantly as they do in the movie version.

mech commander

PC. There seems to be a bit of interest in Battletech games lately - Acivision plan to release one soon - and VIE's thrown its hat into the arena with an impressive-looking robot warfare game. Texture-mapped Mechs patrol the landscape in all their massive metal glory should go down well with fans.

cannon fodder

PC. Sensible Software scored a hit with its action war game on Amiga, and Virgin are hopeful of the same success from the PC version, which also features a stack of rendered cut scenes and the like.

star wars: dark forces

PC. If you can't beat 'em, join 'em! Star Wars gets the Dozen treatment, but who's complaining? Take on the wrath of the Empire, battling with Storm-troopers, rescuing captured Rebel prisoners and generally blowing things up. Expect this one to sell by the Civilian cruiser-load.

links

Mega-CD. Originally on PC, the acclaimed golf game has been Mega-CD'd it to go up against EA's Magic Drive smash PGA Tour series. It looks good, car fairly, but it'll have to go some gameplay-wise to win against PGA.

the dig

PC. Steven Spielberg's first attempt at game design is looking, er, a bit weird really. You play the role of a space explorer on a mission to knock a massive asteroid out of its collision course with Earth, only to be confounded by alien trickery. You may be interested to learn that this is the first videogame to incorporate effects created by none other than Industrial Light & Magic, of Jurassic Park computer dinosaurs fame.

serious soccer

PC. Amiga and Mega Drive owners know this game: it's a conversion of Dino Din's Goal! All the original features are here, including the Sensi small screen view and the horizontal and vertical playing options.

full throttle

PC. Another LucasArts product, full of plot and packed with action and high-quality graphics. A raggedy Mad Max-esque storyline sets up the player for third and first-person 3D taking, and battling in a futuristic scenario. The pundits are talking this one up big-time - look out for more info as it comes in.

kyrandia III: malcom's revenge

PC. Continuing on from the excellent Legend of Kyrandia, comes this riveting tale of wizards and warriors. Number three surpasses the previous pair in the graphics department - this one features 3D Studio-rendered pics galore!

NASCAR racing

PC. From the creators of the stupendous IndyCar Racing, comes another graphic-heavy 3D racing sim, this time for all you fans who watched Days of Thunder on the telly lately and want to become the real Cole Trickle. A must for stock-car buffs and lovers of quality car-based software.

Bestest third-party software house at CES had to be Virgin Interactive Entertainment (VIE), whose forthcoming series of releases could keep you happy for a good few months on their own! The biggest news from the VIE booth has to be the company's taking over of UK distribution rights of LucasArts - formerly Lucasfilm Games - from US Gold. What this means to you is that, not only will TIE Fighter, the follow-up to X-Wing (and reviewed next issue) now be released by Virgin, but so will all forthcoming LucasArts product, including the absolutely brilliant Dark Forces!

Looking similar to Doom Dark Forces is a first-person 3D blasting extravaganza in which you play a Rebel Special Forces operative, gunning after the Empire as you battle through Star Destroyers and enemy planets. There's sound from the movie, Gourdard's shaming glare and the only bad thing is it isn't out until around November time!

And then there's VIE's success in securing the rights to produce the game of Disney's next big movie, The Lion King. On this page and you'll see the first shot from this impressive-looking title, in which you control four characters - a young and an old Simba, Timon and Pumbaa. Mostly platform based, but sporting the increasing obligatory first-person special levels, it's claimed Disney's animators worked closely with the programmers to get the characters just right - apparently 2,000 frames of animation are used.

It was mainly PC product on show from VIE, which shows the dramatic move the company has moved away from consoles over the past few months. VIE does have console software on the horizon - titles such as Jimmy White's Snooker and Super Bomberman II, for instance - but it was more interested in demo-ing its more groundbreaking product.

STREETS OF RAGE

It's an all out turf-war featuring MORE weapons, MORE moves and MORE outrAGEous action than ever before. Mr X has hatched the ultimate evil plot - but what he didn't count on was a bone-crunching counter-attack from Blaze, Axel and Skate, together with an all-new character, Dr. Zan... and a surprise helper! It's 24-megahits full of jump kicks, power-slams and spin punches set to thrashing digital hardcore!

TAKE BACK THE STREETS...

BETTER GAMES ON 3DO

USA

The increase in the number of good games on 3DO should be great news for those who intend to buy the new machine — but let's hope that publishers here will now take 3DO as seriously as the Japanese have been taking it...

alone in the dark

Interplay
This top PC and CD-ROM adventure is getting the 3DO treatment.

escape from monster manor

Electronic Arts
A Doom-ist game with an added touch of mysticism and role playing, alongside Demolition Man this was one of the more graphically interesting titles on the 3DO stand.

dragon lore

Software Toolworks
Software Toolworks is well pleased with this RPG, and, judging by this early demo, quite rightly so. All of the usual medieval shenanigans plus top-rate presentation.

super street fighter II turbo

Paragonic
The great news for 3DO fans is that there will be the only machine to feature a genuinely accurate version of this arcade smash. It will feature all 16 characters, special "Super Combo" moves, and Gouki, the most powerful enemy in the Street Fighter II, will be making his debut in the home.

megarace

Software Toolworks
Software Toolworks is well pleased with this PRG, and, judging by this early demo, quite rightly so. All of the usual medieval shenanigans plus top-rate presentation.

VR stalker

Morpheus Interactive
Flight sims rarely promise to be so packed with soundtrack effects and 3D animations as this flight sim-cum-tale-of-espionage. You're a spy in the sky off to recapture a piece of hot property stolen from the Yanks. Looks promising.

samurai shodown

Crystal Dynamics
The first of two beat 'em ups shown at CES, the premise is that this, like conversion of Super Streetfighter II Turbo, will feature all of the characters, levels and moves from the arcade original.

way of the warrior

Universal Interactive Studios
Although Mortal Kombat is planned for conversion to 3DO, Universal has snuck in first with a Kombat clone that looks nice, but which of this stage seems to lack enough aggro.

kingdom

Interplay
Dragon's Lairish antics abound in this soon-to-be-released game from Interplay, a company that is gearing up for a number of releases on 3DO, including Out Of This World, which is Interplay's attempt at Another World.

KITTEN'S GOT CLAWS

Atari revealed a number of new plans for the Jaguar. As well as demoing its CD-ROM drive it also unveiled an awesome 32-player simultaneous network game system and a range of new titles. If Atari can get more hardware and its better games into the shops in time, the Jaguar could win new fans this Christmas...

cd-rom update

The much-awaited Jaguar CD drive had a limited showing although, disappointingly, its showpiece video didn't feature any games. The drive will be compatible with Cerech, which is the FMV system employed by Mega-CD games, although in this case the graphics will be in 24-bit colour and high resolution. It also has a built-in on-screen light show, written by Tempest 2000 programmer Jeff Minter, which plays alongside audio CDs. Finally, Atari is working on an M-PEG compatible cartridge so the Jaguar will be able to play CD movies.

Data Voice Modem

Whereas most consoles can offer up to five players at once crammed around one machine, Atari's new Data Voice Modem for the Jag lets up to 32 players go head-to-head with each other. It works pretty much like a conventional modem, but with an added communications headset which lets you talk to the other players while playing the games.

wolfenstein 3D

ID Software
Atari has finally managed to release shots of this 3D blaster — and it looks great. The graphics see streets ahead of the PC version — most notably, the character graphics don't lag on me when you get close.

pinball fantasies

21st Century
This game has proved popular on floppy formats, so it seems logical that it should be heading towards a console. It shouldn't be a hard game to convert, all we want is a few extra features adding to the tables for this version.

syndicate

Ocean
Bullfrog's ace futuristic strategy game should go down a storm when it hits the Jag. This version will have an even darker, meaner look to it than the others.

ultra vortex

Beyond Games

Beat-'em-ups are an inescapable fact of consoles, and here's the Jag's answer to Mortal Kombat. Ultra Vortex features digitised character and backdrops and loads of special moves. It's still at quite an early stage, but it's already looking good.

double dragon v club drive

Williams Entertainment

Another beat-'em-up, but this one's coming out on more than just the Jaguar. It could be the first real chance to compare the Jag to its rivals. However, it turns out that this is the kind of big name game that Jag needs to put it up there with the major league consoles.

club drive

Atari
As if Chequered Flag wasn't enough, Atari have a second driving game on its corporate shelves. Club Drive is a more serious game, combining polygon graphics with sprite-based scenery. It looks dead smart.

rayman

The number of cutesy platform games slated for release on the Jaguar are so far few and far between, but this one from UBI soft sure looks pretty, although it needs a few tweaks before it's finished.

A PC OF THE ACTION

PC games are getting bigger and better – that's official! Well, it must be seeing as everyone seems to be producing PC floppy and CD-ROM at the moment...

With the growth in CD-ROM sales it wasn't too surprising to see the move towards publishing CD-ROM games, as was evident at this year's show. Psygnosis in particular has targeted the CD-ROM market with all its new titles destined for the silver disc.

Elsewhere, there were the inevitable Doom rip-offs in one form or another and, if those didn't pull the crowds, there was certainly a trend towards smart rendered graphics to attract those eyeing the new machines from Sega and Nintendo. Watch out for the spectacular Ecstasia from Psygnosis.

Action games appeared to be the in, coming as a welcome change from the usual adventure romps – Psygnosis' Scavenger 4 easily proving that CD-ROM games can be fully action orientated.

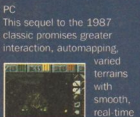

The PC featured one of the most diverse range of games on any of the formats on show – and with rumours of SEGA converting some top titles across to CD-ROM in the near future, PC owners could be happier.

armoured fist

PC
Nova Logic, the publisher of Comanche, was showing off Armoured Fist, its new tank simulation. With all guns ablazing on the action angle, it could be a lot of fun with some highly detailed imagery.

dungeon master II

PC
This sequel to the 1987 classic promises greater interaction, automapping, varied terrains with smooth, real-time scrolling.

May possibly include some complex animations, too.

cyberia

PC-CD
Interplay's lush and lavish press do for the lush and lavish press was an opportunity for the company to demo this sexy-looking, Rebel Assault-ish number. Wow.

novastorm

PC-CD
Known as Scavenger 4 on the FM Towns Marty, NovaStorm is the enormously improved sequel to Psygnosis's Microcosm. This CD-ROM-only game serves up head-on shoot-'em-up action sprinkled with pixie dust from the Silicon Graphics machine and will be appearing on Sega CD as well as on PC.

buried in time

PC-CD
Published by Sanctuary Woods, this is a Mac conversion which certainly looks smart and has much in common with EA's Myst game. Superb graphics help it stand out from the crowd.

Doom II: Hell on Earth

PC
Lucky old US Gold has snapped the rights to publish the Cacodemon-ridden sequel to a game that proves that gore is great. Id software popped into the show to explain about Doom II's new nasties, the new weapons and the massive 30 new levels. We can't wait!

the psychotron

PC-CD

Merit software is offering one of the first Reelmagic releases for yonks. Also available for standard CD-ROM, this Windows adventure game is a yam of weird events and extra sensory perception.

bios fear

PC
From ASG, another of those graphically impressive futuristic adventure games. This one's steeped in moody graphics. Conversions are planned for 3DO, Jaguar and Mega Drive 32X CD.

colonization

PC
Microprose's sequel to Civilization was up and running. Although the standard of graphics remains pretty much the same, the strategic gameplay has greater depth and explorative elements. One of the few games at the show capable of running on a 286!

Lands of Lore II

PC-CD

Appearing on the Virgin Interactive stand as as a work in progress, this gobsmacking dungeon number looks very very special. There's no doubt that with software such as this on the horizon, late '94 and early '95 are going to be great for PC fans.

NEW MACHINES REVEALED!

Plenty of new machines were unveiled at the CES, but, sadly, there were no surprises. Console yourself with six new consoles instead...

Four new CD-i's!

Philips really pushed the CD-i boat out at CES, unveiling no less than three new versions of the machine. From Magnavox comes the CDi450 and 550 consoles. These forsake the video look of the existing machines for something which resembles a PC Engine Duo. The 450 will sell in America for $299 (£199), while the 550, which has a built-in Digital Video Cartridge costs $499 (£350). Philips plans to launch its own versions of the machines in the UK before Christmas, although import taxes may affect the prices.

Meanwhile Goldstar, which is more used to producing low-cost videos and TVs, has also unveiled two machines. The cheaper machine is aimed at Joe Public as a games and general entertainment system, while the second, more expensive, CD-i will be a portable system possibly aimed at businesses.

Not to be out done, Philips announced the launch of two more systems. One is the long expected hi-fi midi system with built-in CD-i, with the other being a TV and CD-i all-in-one unit.

More 3DO!

We might still be waiting for the first official 3DOs to arrive in this country (Panasonic reckons it could have its version out as early as September), Goldstar has jumped on the bandwagon with yet another variation on the console. Its version will come with built-in FMV capabilities to run video CDs - something which the other machines lack.

However, this will make it the most expensive one of the lot, so whether it will be a hit or not remains to be seen.

GoldStar

Goldstar is set to launch its own 3DO. Will it be like the screen-shot? Out of This World?

Sony keep schtummm

According to Jeffrey Fox, Director of Communications for Sony USA, the number of people who've seen the new 32-bit Sony PlayStation running games and who haven't been impressed can be written on a matchbox. Opinions on any new machine become more divided as time goes by - but that hasn't stopped certain software bosses from claiming that they'd seen stuff on the PlayStation to make you weep with joy.

Sony isn't showing anything to the public ... yet. They claim that if too much interest is generated too soon software publishers will be persuaded into releasing early dud games.

FUTURE'S SO BRIGHT...

The Summer Consumer Electronics Show has finished in Chicago (as you may have gathered from the 16-page CES special preceding this page), and if there were any thoughts of this industry sinking under a pile of unoriginality, then they can be cautiously dispelled. For, despite a sprinkling of platformers and beat-'em-ups, there was a goodly amount of new and exciting software and machines on show at CES. It seems software producers are getting the message that the public will not get what it's given; mind you, looking at some of the sales figures of the past six months can also lead me to believe that they've had matchsticks wedged under their eyelids and been forced to look. Sure, originality continues, but you have to give the games biz its due: having been gifted with the greatest leap in technology yet seen, it's trying to come up with something new.

Most impressive is a new development system that puts players in a supposed FMV environment that's computer generated, allowing for almost movie-like graphic realism, as well as freedom of movement and interactivity anywhere in the game world. I've seen the first game to use this new system, it's a huge movie licence and it's gone a long, long way to restoring my confidence in this genre.

The thing is, you're going to have to spend more on the new technology than the £100 you're used to spending on consoles. The point is, which type of person are you going to be - one who goes 'too expensive' or the other, who reaches for the future of gaming, knowing tomorrow's games are going to deliver? I know which side of the fence I'm sitting on - especially when I know that this 'future' is closer than most people think. Happy gaming.

OUR REVIEWS POLICY

Here at CVG we're independent of any hardware manufacturer, so we'll let you know whether a game is available on other formats, whether there are better examples of the game on that system, and most importantly whether it's any good. Unlike other magazines which base their scores on the views of one person, our ratings are arrived at after lengthy discussion between the CVG team about each title's good or bad points, with the overall score being a separate mark based on the quality of the game - NOT an average of the other marks. For the sake of those who want to refer to back issues, if we recommend an alternative game we'll keep its original score, but obviously times change and what may have been a great game a couple of years ago, now may be a bit passe. However in the past five years alone we've reviewed around 1,000 games, so you can be sure that our recommendations come with an accumulated wealth of gaming experience.

If a game scores more than 90% we'll award it a sought-after CVG HIT!

You won't be seeing many of these only games scoring 95% or over will be granted this accolade.

NEWS

IT'S PLAYTIME!

More and more news is emerging on Sony's new 32-bit PlayStation. After CVG exclusively revealed first pictures of the machine last month, we can now confirm that there are over 80 titles currently in progress from worldwide signings of over 160 third-party developers. Big name games which will be making an appearance include arcade smashes such as Super Street Fighter II from Capcom, Ridge Racer and Cyberseed from Namco, Raiden 1 and 2 and the coin-op version of Parodius from Konami.

As far as non coin-op games are concerned ORA-194, which is a horizontally scrolling shoot-'em-up, and Zero Device, which is a robotic beat-'em-up, seem to be the titles causing the greatest excitement in Japan.

Rumours are now starting to circulate as to what games will be bundled with the machine. Sony isn't dropping any clues as yet, but a couple of developers working on the machine have told us that there's likely to be three to four games bundled with the system, of which Raiden 2 is highly likely to be one of them. There's also a nice little story doing the rounds about Psygnos wanting to put Lemmings on the PlayStation, but Sony has apparently said 'no'.

Judging by the developers' list there certainly seems to be a bias towards shoot-'em-ups on the Sony console, but don't let that put you off. Although we were disappointed to find out that the PlayStation only uses a double-speed CD drive (like 3DO and CD32) its 32-bit RISC chip and custom graphics chips are believed to offer a staggering combined speed of 500mips (millions of instructions a second), which leaves everything around at the moment standing. There's also a facility to link up two machines for modem-type multi-play.

So there you have it. Here is a machine which seems to offer programmers the power to do what they like. So isn't it about time we saw some revolutionary games rather than just evolutionary ones?

▲ Featuring a 32-bit-RISC chip, the Sony PlayStation measures 25 by 20cm and will include S-VHS and RGB output sockets.

▲ If you're wondering why the joystick plug is so thick, it's because the slot above the joystick fits a RAM card for saving games etc.

NEO-GEO CD EXPOSED

Recently revealed at the Tokyo Fair was the new Neo-Geo CD system from SNK. Now fully CD-based the latest system isn't compatible with existing carts, but has an enhanced spec thanks to a new RISC chip which allegedly positions it on par with the likes of Sega's Saturn. Apparently the launch went down so well that Sega held an emergency meeting afterwards to discuss this new threat.

Sporting a newly designed arcade joystick, the Neo-Geo CD should make it to our shores soon, with a price tag of £300-350. As for existing Neo-Geo owners, there's no need to worry as SNK has no plans to discontinue its cartridge-based platform which may even receive a further price cut.

Sonic 3 solved

Titan Books has released the official Sonic 3 players' guide, featuring over 4,000 screen shots, solutions and tips from the creators of Sonic. Every zone in the game is mapped and all bonus stages and secret rooms are revealed. At £7.99 it's perhaps a bit steep, but it's well put together with 97 tip-packed pages.

SATURN AIMS TO BLOW PLANET EARTH

The most anticipated item on show at this year's Tokyo Fair has to have been the Sega Saturn. However, punters still didn't get a chance to actually play any games on the system and had to make do with another of those Sega video walls. A more complete version of Virtua Fighters was on display, featuring sprites with most of their facial features and body texture added, but they still lacked the resolution of the coin-op - worrying. Word has it that Fighters on the Saturn will also incorporate extra moves not found on the coin-op to make it more playable, since the coin-op hasn't been as popular as it was hoped it would be, apparently.

Elsewhere on the Sega stand was a first look at a Saturn joystick, looking surprisingly large. We could not actually find out if this will be the bundled Saturn stick, but our guess is that it'll be sold as a luxury extra.

DOUBLE DRAGON MOVIE FOR XMAS

▲ Unknown actors and actresses abound in Double Dragon, although there is a big name in there - Robert Patrick, who played the T1000 in Terminator 2.

Take a look at the first on-set shots from the Double Dragon movie due out on November 4. An $8million marketing spend for the movie will no doubt focus heavily on the Double Dragon V game scheduled for an August release on SNES, MD and Jaguar.

Predictably the movie is about rival gangs and the battle of the Double Dragon Duo as they try to prevent a magical medallion from falling into the wrong hands. Could it be worse than the Super Mario Bros movie? Surely not. Watch this space punters.

One of the Lee brothers, ▶ from the new movie Double Dragon, opening in November.

Dragon's moving on up

The release date for VIE's Dragon has now been put back to October, following the decision to add an amazing 15 extra moves to the game and include blood in the American version. We gave Dragon on SNES 84% in issue 152, and these extra enhancements could well tip the beat-'em-up into 90% territory. Well done, VIE, for responding positively to criticism.

Super! FX from NEC

NEC, creator of the popular Japanese 8-bit console the PC Engine, has also entered the 32-bit race with a new system provisionally titled 'FX'. The machine contains most of the circuitry from the PC Engine Duo, but enhanced to run full-screen animation at 30 frames per second. The FX also uses JPEG rather than MPEG for video compression, which should mean sharper pictures too. NEC predicts a November launch, but no details on price have been announced as yet.

GAME BOY GOES COLOUR!

Super GAME BOY™

CVG pops up with another first this month - we've actually got our hands on Nintendo's Super Game Boy adaptor for the SNES! And a couple of games too (one of which is reviewed on page 70). It's actually turned out to be a very smart little gadget, not only offering colours but sampled speech too. By pressing the L and R buttons you bring up a menu from where you can select your colours and even design a background. It's also possible to assign key layouts to your SNES joy pad. Nintendo is hoping to get the Super Game Boy into the shops by early September with a price tag of £49.99. The American and Jap versions are out already but the British one will work through a converter.

Other Super Game Boy games to look forward to soon include the promising Bomberman (reviewed next issue) and Aladdin from Virgin. Also keep a look out for the colourised version of Mighty Morphin Power Rangers from Bandai.

CD32 KEYED UP

MicroBotics is to release the SK-1 expansion module for CD32 which allows connection of a disc drive and A4000 keyboard to CD32, turning it into an A1200. No price as yet, but think about the back catalogue you'll have access to.

Not to be confused with the animated movie which is out now, the proper Super Street Fighter film is being directed by Steven de Souza, whose past credits include smash-hits such as Die Hard 2, Commando and Beverly Hills Cop 3. The budget for the movie is now $34.4 million, which will go some way to paying for the big name cast. The Muscles from Brussels, Jean Claude Van Damme, will play Guile, Raul Julia (Gomez in The Addams Family) is to be cast as Bison, Roshan Seth (of Ghandi fame) will play the part of Dhalsim, Eric Schweig (from Last of the Mohicans) will be T. Hawk and apparently Kylie Minogue is cast as Cammy! Sadly it doesn't appear that there will be any major special effects in the film, certainly no fireballs and teleporting.

The plot centres around Guile leading a United Nations strike against Bison, who will be an evil overlord, trying to take over a land called Shadowloo. T. Hawk and Cammy will be Guile's military side kicks. Chun Li is a journalist and Honda her cameraman. Sagat is a gangster and Vega fights his battles for him. The movie is being shot in the Far East, around Australia and Thailand and should feature backdrops from the coin-op, like Guile's airport and Vega's Spanish cafe. Expect a PG-13 rating and some elements of the movie to find their way into the forthcoming Street Fighter III coin-op.

TEE TIME

Innova Products has launched Tee V Golf for the Mega Drive. Using the supplied 26-inch club you perform swings realistically over a special receiver pad with the action being transmitted to your golf game - it's compatible with PGA Tour 1 and 2 from EA. The kit costs £99.99.

- ALIEN BREED - TOWER ASSAULT
- AMIGA
- TEAM 17

The third instalment in Team 17's Alien Breed saga is another update rather than a true sequel. As before, it has you and a buddy blasting aliens in a series of top-down viewed mazes. It's not an original concept and the aliens look more than a might familiar, but in this version you get a whopping 50 new stages, improved graphics, better sound and new creatures to fight. Best of all, it's coming out at the budget price of £10.99. Time will tell whether this will be enough to set it apart from its predecessors.

- ALIEN BREED CD
- CD32
- TEAM 17

Hot on the heels of Tower Assault on the Amiga comes Alien Breed's CD32 debut. It will feature an enhanced version of the latest Alien Breed game with plenty of CD speech bolstering the sound effects. Essentially, though, the basic format will be the same - sticking to the tried and tested Alien Breed top-down gameplay formula. As a bonus the disc will also feature the original version of Alien Breed 2, so you get two games for the price of one. Unlike the disk version of Tower Assault, this will be coming out at full price. Still, if it turns out to be good, who's going to complain?

- ELECTRONIC ARTS

Following a major revamp of its graphics and a few gameplay changes, the Mega Drive version of Bullfrog's utterly excellent Syndicate will be hitting the shops in November. It's widely regarded as one of the most violent games on home computer, largely down - the massive civilian body count your posse of killer cyborgs rack up. If it sticks closely to the other versions, this could easily prove to be the best strategy game ever for the Mega Drive. Meanwhile, the PC CD-ROM version has just hit the shelves, which combines the original game with the American Assault data disk.

▲ Mega Drive Syndicate is coming along nicely, and should sell by the binful come its release at around November time.

- ON THE BALL
- AMIGA
- DAZE

While we're currently flooded with footy action games, Daze is lining up a managerial sim which it reckons will be the best looking yet. Up to four players can adopt a league team, then get to grips with tactics, finances, sponsorship deals and slapping down stropic French players. Unlike other managerial games which tend to consist of plenty of text screens and almost no graphics, On The Ball packs a weighty 45 minutes of visual action, including free kicks, penalties, goals galore and faked injuries. It comes out in time for the start of the new season with up-to-date statistics, players and teams.

▲ Daze's On The Ball is a graphical extravaganza, unusual for football management games. Let's hope the gameplay hasn't been forgotten about.

Making the most of its Tiny Toons licence, Konami has shoved the minuscule heroes out on to the sports track for some fitness related japes. It features 10 events from the sprint to hammer-throwing, all the toons from the cartoon series and liberal doses of humour. If what we've seen is anything to go on, this could be a real cracker. One thing's for certain, this is going to be the best looking Tiny Toons game yet with massive graphics and superb animation.

While the SNES gets a dose of track and field toon action, Mega Drive owners will be able to take to the footy field with Toon All-Stars. It sounds like a bizarre Instead Konami is going for the out-and-out arcade-style gameplay of titles such as SNK's Soccer Brawl, where you don't even have to like football to enjoy the game. Each team is made up from a selection of toons, and it also features a two-player mode, which is an essential feature in any sports game.

The greatest cartoon cat-and-mouse duo since the Naturally it's going to feature the same amount of gratuitous cat-and-mouse antics that have made them a regular feature in The Simpsons. Acclaim is relying on a platform format to convey the action but are including massive graphics and special stages to break the action up. So far their only computer game appearance was in one of the better levels in Acclaim's last Simpson's game, Bart's Nightmare. It'll be interesting to see how this one turns out.

This is shaping up to be one of the biggest games this autumn, as Spiderman teams up with mortal enemy Venom in what could be the best scrolling beat-'em-up on console. It's based on the hugely successful Spiderman: Max Carnage comic and will feature all the key characters from the story, including Captain America and Shriek. The game's at quite an advanced stage now, and the large graphics seem to have captured the feel of the comic, right down to the 'pows' and other assorted comic book sound effects which appear when a villain is slapped around. Best of all you can play the part of Venom as well as Spidey, which is great as his outfit is much better than web-head's.

Following the success of the excellent flight-sim TFX, Digital Image Design (DID) is currently putting the finishing touches to its next big release, Inferno. The game uses an enhanced version of the TFX 3D engine to create some amazing visual effects. The game's basically a futuristic flight sim, but instead of merely whizzing past objects and blasting them, you get to fly inside them - negotiating cramped tunnels while fending off other craft. The action is backed up by a host of animated cut scenes which serve to update the storyline. Providing nothing goes drastically wrong, this could well be the number one CD-ROM game at Christmas.

September CD32 owners will be able to get their hands on a game which could be the hottest thing to hit Commodore's console yet. We've seen the game up and running and it really is something else. The graphics are amongst some of the best we've ever seen on the Amiga, with hi-res 256 colour sprites, parallax scrolling and amazing backgrounds. It still sticks to the original gameplay though, with Asteroids-style levels punctuated with awesomely fast tunnel stages. That worked seriously well first time, and with the improved graphics we just can't see this failing to make a big impact.

The simplistic gameplay of Super Stardust disguises a thoroughly enjoyable, highly addictive game which CD32 owners can indulge in come September. ▼

Games based on films have been raking it in for softcos for a decade, but are these licences really up to scratch? Paul Rand delves into the cash-crazy world of the film tie-in...

Batman. Rambo. The Terminator. What have they got in common? They've all made the jump from the big screen to the small games screen. The movie game business is one of the biggest money-spinners in the market – but is it reaching the end of its life?

The film licensing game took off in a big way with Activision's release of Ghostbusters way back in those 8-bit days of 1984. It caused a sensation, despite carrying one of the hottest price tags around at that time – an enormous £9.99!

WE NEED A HERO

The gamesplaying public were hooked, though – for the first time you could become a movie hero and fight the bad guys, just like the real actors did on-screen. That was the idea, anyway. What you actually got on your monitor, though, was a pretty unappealing time, riding around a map screen to a variety of similar-looking locations and trapping ghosts using a laser-style weapon. The graphics were shoddy, the music offensive and the gameplay limited, to say the least. But the game went down a storm, creating in its wake a new market for software companies eager to cash in on the computer boom.

Ten years on from then and little seems to have changed in the film licensing market. The technology has improved beyond all recognition – you can actually understand what people are saying these days – but the basic nature of movie-licensed product remains annoyingly consistent.

THE MOVIE

MOVIES COME TO LIFE

With the arrival of new videogame systems, software developers are now able to incorporate a variety of new techniques into the production of film licences. Some companies, such as Virgin with its forthcoming Demolition Man game, are digitising real actors – in this case, Sylvester Stallone and Wesley Snipes – on green-screen chromakey backgrounds. The developer then simply swaps the green-screen background for a conventionally-drawn background and hey presto – Sly 'n' Wes come to life on your machine. On the other hand, take a look at SCI's Lawnmower Man. The firm took advantage of the movie's virtual reality storyline and stuck the whole game in a computer-generated VR environment, allowing the use of some incredible graphics thanks to the storage capacity of compact disc, as well as the ultra-powerful processors of today's sophisticated games systems.

ROBO, BRUCE AND ARNIE

There have been some very good examples of film-based games – anyone who's owned an Amiga for a couple of years will remember just how good Ocean's conversion of the (just released) Robocop 3 movie was. One of 3D specialist DID's first products, Robocop 3 had you immersed in a polygon-based three-dimensional extravaganza. In most instances, however, you get a basic platform engine with a couple of barely recognisable sprites running around, which the software company purports to be either Arnie, Willis or others of their ilk. But no matter how rough and ready these titles are, many of them sell by the bucketload.

Why is this? Alison Fennah of Acclaim, publisher of True Lies (the licence of Arnie's latest film) is adamant that it's an aid to shifting quality product. "If a game is good to start with, the awareness it has because it has been released as a movie brings it to the forefront, garners a higher profile, allows it to benefit from additional marketing and contributes to its success."

Simon Alty, Marketing Manager of Ocean, a firm with strong links to the movie licensing world, is under no illusions as to the success of this type of product. "The whole strategy behind securing a movie licence is to purchase predetermined consumer perception. Or, in other words, if you've seen a major movie, say Jurassic Park, you will subconsciously attach a set of positive emotions to the name." Which, in layman's terms, means that film tie-ins work because people think that the game is going to be as good as the film. And as we already know, that's very rarely, if indeed ever, the case. But hey, if there's money to be made...

LAME LICENCES

With blockbuster film rights running to upwards of £1,000,000, it's little wonder that only the big

"Original product does not get the intense time constraints put upon it that a movie licence does"

Simon Alty
Marketing Manager

boys can afford to dabble in what can be a very lucrative area of the market. Sure, the smaller softcos can play in a smaller way by buying up the rights to TV programmes, where the costs are considerably lower. But it's the Hollywood smash-hits that make the most money, since they can be converted to almost every format imaginable and still be recognised in Europe, Japan and the USA as well as the UK. But with the sort of money that has to be ter make sure that the film they're staking their wedge in is going to be a sure-fire success.

And if the movie does turn out to be a flop, you're in it deep; imagine, for instance, the faces down at Sony HQ when they a) read the reviews of Arnie flop Last Action Hero then b) saw the finished version of the game.

Considering that the budget for an original game isn't subject to the demands of the huge cost of film licences,

LICENCE EXPLORED

the jurassic parks...

JURASSIC PARK SNES/Amiga/PC By Ocean

A solid, enjoyable title, with an impressive first-person 3D shooting sequence. One of the biggest sellers of last year. (On other formats it was a different game altogether).

ALIEN 3 Mega Drive/SNES Game Gear/Amiga By Acclaim

An action-packed blast with you taking control of Ripley in an all-out battle against the aliens. The movie link is questionable, but the game's ace.

PREDATOR C64

By Activision
One of the first Amie licences, with the Predator following you all the way through the game using his triangular sight, adding that elusive movie atmosphere.

ROBOCOP 3 Amiga By Ocean

DID's 3D spectacular, consisting of a variety of different types of game. The game also beat the movie to the screens by nearly three years.

then you can assume that a hell of a lot of cash, which could otherwise go towards effective game design and programming, is being spent on little more than a film name – the movie's plot is seldom adhered to, and images of actors from the movies are almost never used because it costs extra, as does the right to use a film's soundtrack. So really, the consumer isn't getting a videogame version of the film at all, is he? Says Fennah, "Sometimes a movie's storyline must be altered so that it will unfold into a great playing game." And, as Simon Atty points out, "Original product does not get the intense time constraints put upon it that a movie licence does when we are striving to coincide game and film release to maximise exposure in the media."

THE MOVIE GAME

Arguments have been put across in the past that film tie-ins are a disappointment because the machines of yesterday – and indeed today – simply haven't got the power to handle them.

Of course, there's always the counter-argument that if the machines can't carry a decent film game, then firms shouldn't be attempting to fob the punter off with platformers and beat-'em-ups with the name of a film being the only thing to

"Advanced technology will provide unsurpassed realism, so players will feel as if they're controlling the actual film"

Alison Fennah,
Marketing Manager

link the two types of media together. But as we're now moving rapidly into the age of 32-bit CD, with all the promise that these new systems possess, is there any chance that we'll see a movie-based game that gives you the same levels of awe, excitement and plot that you expect from the flicks, as well as the levels of playability expected from the top games?

Alison Fennah cannot be more optimistic; "Instead of feeling as if you're controlling an adaptation of a movie, advanced technology will provide unsurpassed realism, so players feel as if they're controlling the actual film. Acclaim is developing an award-winning motion-capture technology that will allow designers to scan actors' images while on movie sets, and create digital actors with realistic movements from those scans. It is a groundbreaking technology that Acclaim sees as impacting on interactive entertainment as well as a variety of entertainment industries."

And as for the genre itself; are we witnessing the end of the movie licence, or the start of a new era for this exper-sive corner of the games market? Simon Alty is adamant: "From Ocean's point of view movie licences will grow less and less in the medium term. Games on the new formats demand a development cycle much longer than before, and this lessens any impact of simultaneous game and film release unless we get involved in a movie project at script."

Alty adds though, "Movie licences have helped bring Ocean tremendous success over the years. They provide maximum press coverage and cross over into all media. They have accounted, however, for only 10-15% of our product releases and I would make an educated guess that this carries across to all game releases over the past 10 years. So original product reigns supreme - it just doesn't get the front page of the specialist press as often!"

Fennah, on the other hand, is more bullish: "Movies will continue to provide exciting themes for videogames. Acclaim's agreement with James Cameron's Lightstorm Entertainment, for example, provides us with rights to his movie properties for interactive entertainment and we look forward to working with him."

It looks like the cameras will keep rolling for some time to come.

...and the last action heroes

THE LAST ACTION HERO SNES By Sony

The film was bad enough; the game, an incredibly ropey Final Fight rip-off with appalling graphics and gameplay, is even worse. Nice one, Sony.

UNIVERSAL SOLDIER Game Boy By Accolade

Nothing more than Turrican with this Van Damme/Lungren licence tagged on. An all right enough game, but nothing whatsoever to do with the film.

NAVY SEALS Amiga By Ocean

A very shoddy platform shoot-'em-up, full of bugs and based on a low quality, star-free movie that did little at the box office anyway.

WAYNE'S WORLD SNES By T-HQ

How do you turn a smash film into a hit game? T-HQ obviously hadn't a clue when it produced this tedious, tenuous platformer.

SNES, PC, GAME BOY, GAME GEAR, AMIGA, MEGA
32, SONY PLAYSTATION VERSIONS PLANNED

What's going to win in the battle of the beat-'em-up sequels - Super Street Fighter or the follow-up to Acclaim's biggest-ever hit?

If we asked for the name of the game that became one of the biggest-selling videogames of all-time, you'd have a hard time guessing what we're after. If we said it was the goriest beat-'em-up ever seen, then you'd have no problems working out that we're referring to Mortal Kombat.

And if you take a look at the headline on this very page, you'd be in no doubt that we're bringing you a good, hard look at the 16-bit Sega conversion of the even bloodier sequel, Mortal Kombat II!

Developed on Mega Drive, Game Boy and Game Gear by internationally renowned development house Probe, the firm which also produced the record-breaking prequel, Mortal Kombat II boasts some big improvements - more characters, more death moves, certainly more blood and a host of secret surprises. If you thought the furore over the original was bad enough, wait until the newspapers and MPs get a look at this! With all 12 coin-op fighters squeezed into the Mega

Drive version, and a very impressive eight featuring in the hand-held games, Mortal Kombat II is streets ahead of its predecessor in the quantity stakes, and when you bear in mind that Probe has managed to shoe-horn in all the babalities, friendships and death moves into a 24Meg MD cart, you can appreciate the sort of work that's gone into making Mortal II one of the most accurate coin-op converts ever seen. There's going to be another big-name brawler to rival MKII, in the shape of (as if you need telling) Capcom's Super Street Fighter II (and if you turn to page 58 you can see the reviews of Mega Drive and SNES versions) and it'll be interesting to see which of the two comes out tops with the punters. In the meantime, take a butchers at these extremely impressive Mega Drive shots and go wild with delight!

Sub-Zero gets his own ▶ back on Baraka with a well-placed blast of his special ice weapon. That'll teach him, the big-toothed git.

Why slaughter your opponent when you can be his friend, like Liu Kang's attempting here?

GORE BLIMEY! SNES IN MKII BLOOD SHOCK!

Mega Drive AND SNES versions of MKII are both looking likely to receive 17 ratings in the controversial new videogame classification system because we're informed that, unlike the prequel, SNES Mortal II includes ALL the blood and death moves of the coin-op! Not only that, you won't have to mess around with joypad combinations to activate the gore like you did in the Mega Drive version of the first game - they'll be there the second you switch on. Rivers of blood, warping kids' minds, society down the pan etc....

▲ Kitana's forceball is useful for wearing down an opponent's energy from afar.

IS IT JUST ANOTHER MORTAL MONDAY?

◀ You move further up the mountain the more enemies you take apart. Johnny Cage is just starting out on the road to Mortal immortality here.

▲ I'd duck out of the way of that dangerous-looking fireball if I were you!

◀ To prove that all the death moves are in there, here's Liu Kang in Dragon mode. And yes, he does bite his oppo in two - one for the MPs to whinge about there.

▲ Jax isn't having his leg pulled by Shang Tsung - he's having his arms nearly ripped out of their sockets!

▲ See, she's not all bad, is she? The friendship moves are a welcome inclusion in the Mega Drive game.

▲ A new special move is Sub-Zero's ability to drop a pool of ice on the floor, causing his enemy to slide around and giving Sub an open shot.

▲ Kung Lao's hat is one of the most dangerous implements in the entire game. And his death move is easily the goriest of the lot - he slices his enemy right down the middle using his tiffet.

▲ We're not completely sure that Raiden should be bringing his off-spring into the arena, especially when he's taking on someone like Scorpion! Mind you, the balm seems to be enjoying the show...

▲ Don't get involved with Kitana - she really has got a kiss of death!

PLAYSTATION TOO! MEGA-CD BOO-HOO

So you're thinking of buying one of the new breed of games machines, but you're a bit worried that all you'll be able to buy for it is terribly high-brow RPGs and stupid encyclopaedias. Well worry no more! For Probe has informed us that it is definitely looking to convert Mortal Kombat II to the likes of the Sega Mega 32 and Sony's PlayStation, and if they go well then more converts could follow. What won't be available, though, is MKII for Mega-CD. Not from Probe, anyway, who have no plans to convert it to Sega's flawed CD format.

SNES, GAME BOY GAME GEAR

Handheld owners are in for a pleasant surprise - we've seen the Game Boy and Game Gear versions of MKII and they're looking excellent! Probe has managed to squeeze EIGHT of the original 12 characters into the little Sega and Nintendo games, complete with death moves. Obviously, some features have had to be dispensed with - you won't find friendships or babalities, for instance - but you'll find that they're both very nippy, extremely responsive and geared up for two players using the respective link-ups.

And what about the SNES game? American development house Sculptured Software, a Yank version of Probe, is handling that conversion. The Probe boys have informed us that it's almost exactly the same as the Mega Drive version - same graphics, same sound, same gameplay. If that's the case, then everybody will be happy come the game's all-cartridge-formats launch on September 9.

▲ Look! All 12 characters! All complete with every move you enjoyed in the arcades!

▲ Although he plays similarly to his former self, Liu Kang's now got the excellent Dragon death move, which is a real stunner.

2023 is the year in question, and things have become so bad on Earth that a colonisation ship has been built to take people to new worlds. Which is all well and good, but while passing Saturn all contact with the craft is lost. Which is, let's face it, a perfectly reasonable excuse to send in a team of UN-sponsored hard lads to wipe out the inevitable alien threat.

The name of the game comes from the programmers' inspired use of Earth-based creatures such as ants and exotic fish as the basis for the aliens in this CD-based shoot-'em-up. the revolutionary Super FX chip for SNES, we're expecting something special when the game appears in time for Christmas.

▲ Part of the excellent intro sequence, which details the plot and also gives you the opportunity to show off to your mates just what your machine can do. You should see it moving, that's all we can say.

▲ Another shot taken from the introduction. Virgin hopes to have Creature Shock released on both CD-ROM and CD-I by Christmas – what a treat, eh?

▲ The animation of the characters is particularly impressive, as is the light-sourcing which works very well when you see it emanating from this bloke's helmet.

▲ All the enemies in the game are based on real life creatures such as tropical fish and, like here, various types of insect.

OTHER VERSIONS

Creature Shock is the first game to be released on CD-I, following Philips' three-game agreement with Virgin Interactive Entertainment. It should be a spot-on convert of the PC version, and could be just the thing to help CD-I in its quest for big sales.

When a game stars Shaquille O'Neal you'd think it would be a basketball game, wouldn't you? Wrong, get set for a fast-paced beat-'em-up...

Developed by Paris-based Delphine, the original plan was to make Shaq Fu a basketball game, but since Shaq is also a martial arts freak, a fighting game seemed a better idea. Anyway, on with the storyline...

While touring with his team, Shaq is spirited off to a new dimension. Once there, he has to stop the ruler — an evil mummy — from grabbing himself a new body and taking over the real world. You, as Shaq take on, one by one, 11 fighters each with their own special moves (at least 60). Shaq's specials include a fireball and a circular saw which whirls around his head and can be hurled at the enemy or used defensively; then there's Wolfman whose bite is worse than his bark and The Mummy who ties victims in his deadly bandages and then moves in for the kill. In Tournament or Dual Mode, play Shaq or any of the other fighters in a duel to the death. Interesting stuff — watch this space for further updates.

Killer bees and a virtual reality super-villain, it can only be the return of the Lawnmower Man.

Lawnmower Man, the movie, is generally considered a bit 'cultish', but that hasn't stopped it raking in a massive $145,000,000 in the two years since it was released. Roughly translated, that means licence fodder, and now that Time Warner has it, it's not going to let go.

Despite Warner releasing the game, it's still being programmed by SCI - the team responsible for the SNES and PC versions. In fact, it's the SNES game that Mega Drive version is being based on. There are some changes, though. The programmers have obviously listened to the criticisms that were lobbed at the SNES original and cut down the number of platform stages, and have also increased the excellent VR sections. Not only this but the animation has also been vamped up some what, so we could be looking at a much improved game.

◀ Thankfully the rather dull platform sections have been cut down for the Mega Drive version of the game.

▲ This tunnel flight level rotates through 360 degrees at an even faster rate than in the SNES version! Here you can control the rotation to line enemies up in front of you.

◀ Mode-7 ahoy! This excellent flight section has super fast Mode 7-style graphics, a first on the Mega Drive. They said it couldn't be done!

Another year, another hockey game from EA. Same old game different wrapping? Let's see...

Whenever the top games software people come to see us with their hot new products there's always a big fight to see who will take the first look. When Electronic Arts came in a couple of weeks back, though, with the latest in a hockey series that stretches back nearly five years, there wasn't exactly a rush to see it. Why? Primarily because the last two versions changed very little from the definitive NHL '92.

This time round, though, the news is much better. EA has listened to the criticism and has radically overhauled the game engine. The most noticeable difference is in the graphics which now have a lower viewpoint and larger player sprites.

Add to this the ability to play a full season, a player trading option, a create-player option and new player moves and EA could well have programmed a hockey game to rival the brilliance of the original. Look out for the review in a couple of issues' time.

Players can get injured, but not from fighting. The but option from the original EA Hockey is still missing.

Players can now be bought and sold on the transfer market. Teams can also be created from scratch so you could, for instance, have a team made up of CVG staff. (Saddo.)

It has to be said that the graphics were starting to look a little dated, after remaining much the same in the previous four games, so finally they've been given a Nineties gloss.

NHL '95

The new lower viewpoint and larger player sprites make for more realistic player movements, but thankfully the great game play will be untouched.

In NHL Hockey scoring has never been the easiest of things until you're a pro and with improved artificial intelligence expect it to require even more talent.

A two-on-two practice mode will let you try out all the new moves without the stress of a real game.

One of the new player moves will entail the defenders diving down to stop an opposition team's slapshot going anywhere near the goal.

Arcade Zone hopes to create a legend with its first game: a horizontally scrolling beat-'em-up with an unfeasibly large sword...

Perhaps the most obvious reason for Golden Axe never making it on to the SNES was that it was created by Nintendo's arch enemy, Sega. It seems strange though, that something similar has yet to make an appearance.

Newcomer Arcade Zone is set to change that, and from what we've seen so far it looks like being something of a blinder. If you're not familiar with the genre the idea is to walk across numerous horizontally scrolling levels mashing to a pulp anything which gets in the way. Although Legend doesn't really offer anything new, it's great fun to play, as anyone who's familiar with the Streets of Rage series will testify.

See for yourself when we spill its pint and give it a good seeing to around September time.

▲ It might be a computer game but the preliminary ideas are still sketched out on paper. For instance, here's a look at your typical baddy, le someone who's going to do to you what a shredder does to paper.

▲ Another brilliant effect is seen in this section. The translucent glass is breathtaking to behold as you walk through it.

▲ There's some great technical touches in this game, like these smart effects you can see in the foreground scenery. The flame effects later in the game are especially good.

▲ It'll be worth keeping an eye out for keys because the chests which they open will be chock-a-block full of bonus items.

▲ It's not frustrating but the difficulty level is quite high so keep an eye out for food to top up your health level.

▲ Here's an example of one of the typical bosses you can expect to come across during your journey. It's best to save your magic for these guys because they're tough cookies.

▲ Arcade Zone is clearly into lots of detail. Here you start off in daylight, but once inside the building the light gently fades to dark.

Get into gear with the latest driving game from those Sheffield-based boy racers at Gremlin!

Perhaps the most novel aspect of Top Gear 1 and 2 on the SNES was that the programmers didn't resort to using Mode 7 graphics, something that's almost unheard of in SNES racing games. Add the fact that Top Gear 2 is a fine game and it sounds like the perfect conversion material for the Amiga.

And cor blimey here it is! Prepare for all the usual racing game features, like full screen one-player option or split screen two-player mode, nitros and a prize money option so that you can buy better equipment. With the Lotus games starting to show their age it seems only fitting that it should be Gremlin who releases an even smarter title. With any luck Top Gear 2 should be hitting motorway CVG in the next issue.

▲ Like Titus' Lamborghini game, prize money is on offer for when you do well in a race. Use this to customise your car and hopefully make things even easier for yourself.

◀ Look out for some great ways of mashing up your car which include jumps, spins and spectacular flips when you crash.

▲ All the usual weather conditions are thrown at you: rain, fog and snow, as well as a little sunshine.

▲ Backgrounds and trackside scenery are looking very detailed and are a considerable improvement over Gremlin's earlier Lotus games.

◀ Use prize money to improve tyres, gearbox, engine and armour which limits the damage from crashes. You'll need plenty of upgrades if you hope to stay in the leading pack over all 64 courses.

Thankfully there's no noticeable slowdown in the split screen two-player version, unlike Virtua Racing on Mega Drive. ▼

King of the sports game, EA Sports turns its attention to tennis at last...

Although EA Sports has a superb record it shouldn't get complacent since this is Wimbledon season, and there's plenty of competition out there in videogame land, most notably the ballsy Pete Sampras Tennis from CodeMasters (CVG 151 - 84%).

To challenge the competition, EA Sports Tennis will feature 16 venues and singles and doubles play. OK, so that's nothing new but the rotoscoped players who have a similar look and feel certainly are.

And to that you can add realistically simulated court surfaces, a coaching mode and plenty of attention to detail including chalk puffs, squeaking trainers, arguing with the umpire and of course compatibility with the 4-Way-Play adaptor. See for yourself whether it plays like a British nobody or a Wimbledon champ in a couple of issues time.

EA SPORTS TENNIS

Like many golf games, EA Sports Tennis will have a serve meter to allow for variation in the power of shots.

EA is spending a lot of time in making sure the court dynamics are recreated faithfully. For instance the ball will bounce a treat on the hard court, while not bouncing much on a clay one.

Apart from the grass court there will also be clay, indoor and hard courts too.

It wouldn't be an EA Sports game without a decent crowd and you can be assured of a wildly animated bunch in the final version.

The 4-Way Play adaptor seems like it was designed for a game of doubles and EA Sports Tennis will probably see its best implementation yet.

This chirpy little presentation number pops up before the start of every match to let you know where you're playing, and on what type of court.

The practice option is brilliant and takes you from the basics, right up to being able to pull off really difficult edge-of-court shots that are nigh-on impossible for your opponent to return.

The sprites in EA Tennis will be rotoscoped, which should lead to much more realistically animated characters than if standard sprites had been used.

MEET THE CREW

So the World Cup is all but done and dusted, and even though England weren't there it's been a good 'un. What were the team's high points of the four-yearly soccer marathon this time round?

PALU Being the only true footy fan on the team (Patterson is, after all, an Arsenal supporter), Rand's obviously the one who can comment on the general quality of the proceedings. 'It's been a cracker', remarks the ardent Liverpool (or whoever's doing well at the time - Mark) fan, 'featuring everything that's best in the game. The thrills, the spills, Klinsmann's dives - perfection. And England didn't do too badly either, although why they changed their name to Ireland I'll never know.'

GARY Gaz isn't what you'd call mad on our national game, preferring to watch a couple of overpaid characterless types knock a ball over a net for an hour-and-a-half. But there must have been something in the month-long festival of footie that caught the eye of the Lord? 'The electric carts were a good laugh', comments Gary. 'It just goes to show how lazy these so-called 'professional' footballers are, eh can't be bothered to walk off the pitch.' What a miserable sod, eh readers?

DENIZ Deniz's favourite bit of the World Cup is the same every time it's on. 'I always have a good laugh when the winners actually receive the Cup.' Pray, tell us why. 'It's just the obviously pretend love of joy they have on their faces when they receive it. I mean, it looks nice and everything, but it's a bit small and the players don't get a big, fat cheque like other sportsmen do. And anyway, you'd think Germany would be sick of walking up those steps by now, wouldn't you.'

RIK You'd think that, with all the drama, controversy and goals displayed during World Cup USA '94, footie fanatic Rik would have been on his seat for the entire month, able to spout forth his feelings on the game we all know and love. But Rik isn't a happy man, the reason being he's a Tottenham supporter, and quite apart from the fact that he can never understand the manager when he's announcing the team, his lot have been deducted a massive twelve points for financial irregularities. Ha.

MARK Mark's a big fan of triumph over adversity. He is an Arsenal supporter, after all. So the dramatic first round game between Italy and Norway really caught the miniature Gooner's attention. 'I didn't particularly want Italy to win, but those Norwegians were appalling, even when they had a three-man advantage.' It's just a pity that the Norway goal was disallowed - the way it trickled through the goalie's hands would have reminded Mark of 70s North Bank hero Bob Wilson. On a good day.

JULIE Typical woman, Julie. 'When it's finished' was her response when we asked her what she likes best about the World Cup. Frankly, that's not good enough, if only because we have to write the same amount of copy for hers as everyone else's to make it balance out. I mean, what about the things that all girls like about football, such as the big hunky guys showing their muscly legs off in those skimpy shorts? Wait a minute... this bit fits properly now. There, finished.

PETREA 'Yeah, the footy's been marvellous, hasn't it?' enthused 'Trea. 'It's quite difficult to get to see the games, but when I do they're a treat. I mean, did you see that one the other day when the forward dribbled the ball nearly forty yards around at least five defenders, then picked the ball up and chucked it to his team-mate, who lobbed it into the net to win 2/13 to 1/9? Ripper!' When we told her we wanted to hear her thoughts on the World Cup and not stupid, crap Aussie Rules Football, she shut up.

STEVE Mr James is the spawniest get out of the lot of us, as he's just been to Chicago during the World Cup! Not for him the Mexican Wave, painting flags on faces and keeling over in 100 degree-plus heat, though - Steve visited the Summer Consumer Electronics Show, bringing back a whole heap of exclusives which you can check out in our 15-page special starting on page 6! And anyway, he knows as much about football as Deniz knows about not wearing woolly hats.

Roll up! Roll up! It's all the fun of the fair in Bullfrog's most eagerly-awaited game yet!

It's summer again, and no doubt many of you are looking forward to a well-deserved break from school/college/work/the dole queue and a couple of weeks away on your hols. If that's the case, then it's a fair guess that many of you will be visiting one of the many theme parks around the world, such as Disney Land, Disney World and, erm, EuroDisney. Of course, if you can't be had with all those blokes dressing up as Mickey and Pluto, there's a host of others to choose from. And, if you're family is too tight to take you away with them, then you could always while away the time with Theme Park, the latest from Syndicate and Populous creator Pete Molyneux and his Bullfrog team.

The aim of the game is to build your own fun-fair, including in it everything you'd expect to find in a real one. And while this may sound a very difficult task, actually building the thing is a cinch. It's making it - and keeping it - profitable that's the swine.

◀ The most impressive attraction of the lot is the roller-coaster. It costs a fortune to put up and run, but if it's a good 'un the punters will flock like sheep in pasture.

A FAIR DAY'S WORK

Could you be up there with the big fairground of this world? Follow these simple rules and you should be coining it in within months!

First, build some walkways and drop a few rides in, then open the doors and let 'em test them out.

You only start with a few rides and buildings, so plough some money into research to create new and better attractions.

THEME PARK

▲ If you want to make a bit of extra money at your patrons' expense, then why not make the burgers with a bit less beef and a touch more fat?

▲ Negotiations are all-important, since they determine how much you'll end up forking out for wage rises and the like. You negotiate by pulling the arm (seen in the bottom-left) across the screen to meet the opponent's. If the two don't touch by the time the pile of biscuits in the middle of the screen runs out, you fail to reach an agreement and the staff go on strike.

▲ A fairground can't run without staff, although in this game you can't hire dishevelled travelling types who annoy the female visitors.

▲ A fairground isn't a fairground if it's got no rides, so make sure your park has plenty to keep the customers amused. ▶

▲ Putting food bars next to white knuckle rides isn't a good idea, as the punters will eat first, go on the ride then come off and be sick on your nice, clean paths. Not exactly a crowd-puller, is it?

Your park is running nice and smoothly now, with most people happy enough to spend a fortune. So what you do now is...

VERDICT

■ PC

When Pete Molyneux wrote his first business sim in 1982, he couldn't have predicted it would evolve into a game as intricate, feature-packed and as fun as Theme Park. The amount of options is incredible, and everything you do has an effect on another part of the park or its running. The graphics are cute and work well, as does the sound. But it's the game itself that's the star; like everything else Molyneux's done, Theme Park is out on its own in the enjoyment stakes.

Another blast from the past, this time a convert of the brilliant C64 Defender clone...

This game was out 10 years ago on the Commodore 64. Back in the days when graphics really didn't matter too much because the 'gameplay' was what was so phenomenal about the product.

Most of you have no doubt played the classic Defender in one form or another, and Drop Zone is an addition to that list. It's a lightning-fast left-and-right scrolling blaster in which your task is to save men from invading aliens and drop them off at the nearest moonbase. A radar at the bottom of the screen plays a tactical part in planning rescue attempts and apart from air-bound aliens there are ground dangers like erupting volcanoes to keep clear of.

The appeal of Drop Zone is the way in which the action can switch suddenly from you being in control to everything being out of control: you know something is going to happen, but you never seem to be ready for it. Clever stuff.

You can complete a level by rescuing the pods and blasting all the baddies on screen. You get shown the bonuses that you've accrued at the end of game. You should do better than this, since only 100 bonus points is a bit poor! ▼

■ VERDICT

■ GAME GEAR

Drop Zone has managed to retain the playability which made it such a popular blaster on the Commodore 64. Sure, it's good fun to play, but the problem with playing high-speed games on a small screen is that you have very little time to react to floating bullets, especially when they're just a pixel big! As a result Drop Zone is a difficult game. By design it is also very repetitive, yet it's the sort of low-tech blast-fest that will probably do well on Gear.

▲ Like Micro Machines, Drop Zone has the facility for two players to play on the same machine.

The problem with this game is that the bullets are only a pixel big and they are very difficult to spot on the Game Gear's small screen.

▲ If you don't collect the pods then the enemy will do its best to steal them and fly away.

▲ There are also dangers that you have to avoid on the ground; these erupting volcanoes can be lethal, so steer clear.

It has arrived. The biggest release of the year. But just how many times does Capcom expect you to pay for the same great game?

It took two years for Capcom to develop the Super Street Fighter II coin-op. Recently the company churned out the newer Turbo version and naturally everyone was expecting that to end up on the new cart. Unfortunately, it hasn't; so what's new on these carts is little more than the four new characters. Of course, Street Fighter gurus will find the new combos and strategies that accompany the new challengers ample reason to buy this version. But weary of criticism, Capcom has added two new modes of play to Super, and these are Time Challenge, which gives you the chance to see how quickly you can slaughter an opponent, and Tournament Battle which is a sort of musical chairs with up to eight characters - winners fighting winners and losers pitched against losers.

Super Street Fighter II shouldn't be considered as a new game because it's really just an upgrade. It's just that it happens to be an upgrade to an awesome game.

SUPER STREET FIGHTER II

■ SNES

▲ Cammy's Cannon Drill is a great way to catch opponents by surprise. Best used as a follow up move in a combo.

■ MEGA DRIVE

▲ Out of the new characters Cammy is probably the strongest thanks to her great special moves like this back breaking throw.

■ SNES

▲ Cammy's thrust Kick is very powerful and can be done from close or long range.

Cammy's Spinning Knuckle is a great move to use in the corner and delivers a double hit. It can also shield you from fireballs etc.

Despite weighing in at an astronomical 40 megs, the graphics in the Mega Drive game are not quite as good as those in the SNES one. All we can say is why?

SUPER BIG CARTS HIT THE STREET

Dee Jay's projectile is very similar to Gille's Sonic Boom. Good for keeping opponents back. ▽

▲ With a joystick T Hawk's Storm Hammer throw is even more difficult to pull off than it was in the arcades.

THINGS ARE NOT AS THEY SEEM

Ok, so you've already got Street Fighter II Turbo and you want to know what differences there are in SUPER. Here's what we've spotted in the two versions, apart from the new characters and their backdrops:

- * All new instruments making up the same music.
- * The sample 'fight' is missing at the start of a round.
- * New colour schemes on many of the backdrops.
- * Difficulty settings: easy is easier and harder is harder.
- * Honda's laugh has changed to something much more sinister.
- * On Ken's boat stage the cheering crowd is joined by cheering birds. Strange.
- * You can now hear the elephants during a match on Dhalsim's stage.
- * Different endings.
- * New Dizzies.
- * Change the colour of your character from an eight-strong selection.
- * Play in Tournament Mode.
- * New Time Challenge Mode.
- * New win pose for Gille.
- * New bonuses for combo attacks.
- * Dhalsim has a quicker teleport.
- * Ryu can now do a fireball.
- * Ken can do a flaming Dragon Punch.
- * New look 'Vs' screen.

▲ Although Super Street Fighter II is excellent, we reckon it's only worth buying if you haven't got the original since it's far too expensive, and you tend to only play the original characters anyway.

▲ Bar a few movements in the background characters the graphics are arcade perfect.

▲ With the Mega Drive's crap sound chip you'd expect the sound to be poor; and with ruff samples and muffled sound it certainly is.

▲ Dee Jay's Hyper Fist works well in combinations.

▲ Hawk's Power Dive is a great long distance attack move.

▲ Fei Long's Rekka Ken is a smart triple combo which forces opponents into the corner as it hits them.

'I'LL HAVE TO SAVE UP'

At present Super Street Fighter II is only available on import in Japanese format which is why it costs so much. The Mega Drive version should be out officially around the end of July for £60. As yet, Nintendo has no plans for a UK release. Both versions should also be out soon on American carts which'll be cheaper.

▲ Dee Jay's Double Dredd kick produces devastating double hits knocking opponents to the ground.

VERDICT

SNES

Annoyed that Capcom hasn't converted the TURBO version of SSFII? Me too. £80 or more for four new characters isn't worth it. I mean do you ever see people playing as the new characters in the arcades? Rarely, because everyone knows Ken is still the best. Still, SSFII is an exceptional conversion and let's not forget that part of the high cost is because this is the biggest SNES game ever at 32 megs. Still, I have to admit it's still the best game on the SNES.

As PC owners wait expectantly for a FIFA release, Empire manages to slide in with a substitute...

There have been more soccer games this year than ever before, and unless you've been hanging out with a load of Outer Hebridians (or you're an American) you'll be able to guess why. Yes, the World Cup, tallied with the fact there are more formats than ever means there's a plethora of footy games. Even PC owners are suddenly spoilt for choice, and in the case of Empire Soccer it's actually appeared on the PC before any other planned formats. The problem though, is that every game seems to be emulating a previous release in terms of features offered, and softcos are making brasher claims on the box to the effect of 'more of this' and 'more of that'. So, when you actually get to play these games as often as you can pick out the problems immediately - usually.

Empire Soccer was a strange one though, first we hated it, then we liked it, but the more we played it the less we liked it. So just what did we think of it? Read that final verdict...

▲ Here is the option screen where you select player formation. Notice the 'special move' option which gives a choice of six skills, like improved tackling and banana shots.

▲ We've printed this picture so that you can see just how big the sprites are! There's hardly anything else on screen.

▲ Here the opposition prepares to block a free kick at the goal. Isn't it annoying that you can't actually see the goal itself.

▲ When you start flashing it means you've activated the special move shot as set in the options screen. It's a bit difficult to see what you're doing when this is happening.

▶ Scoring goals is actually quite easy because the goalies are basically crap.

▲ One of the novel features of this game are pop-up animations which show player and spectator reactions to goals and so forth.

PC

These are the biggest sprites in any footy game; which would be OK if the play perspective wasn't a bird's eye view. The problem is you don't see much of the pitch at any one time, which limits play to close-range tactics. The animation is also quite 'frameless' and the players don't look real when moving. Apart from these niggles, Empire Soccer is a comprehensive sim of the sport covering all the options you're likely to find in any other soccer game.

Racing legend Mario Andretti runs out of petrol as he crawls into the Mega Drive garage...

Bearing in mind that Mario Andretti's Racing is from EA, have you noticed something familiar about the graphic engine? In case not let me tell you that it looks mighty similar to the Road Rash one that's since turned up in Road Rash 2 and more recently Skitchin'.

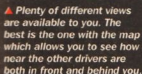

They say first impressions count and I have to say I was disappointed to see this game engine crop up yet again, but maybe this game has some redeeming features? Well, quite neatly there's more than one game on offer here with Indy car, Stock and Sprint (slow buggies on a muddy track) racing all catered for. There's a training feature seen in games like Nigel Mansell where Andretti himself guides you round the track, plenty of different views, including a two-player split screen option and the ability to use slipstreams and more realistic breaking than we've seen in any other race game.

▲ There's a two-player option which improves the gameplay somewhat, but it's still not a patch on that in Virtua Racing.

▲ Plenty of different views are available to you. The best is the one with the map which allows you to see how near the other drivers are both in front and behind you.

MARIO ANDRETTI RACING

Amazingly enough Mario Andretti racing is a 16 meg racing game. Plenty of memory must have been used up on these grainy pit-stop sequences because the in-game graphics are very weak.

▲ Like the Nigel Mansell game, Mario Andretti's Racing features a tutorial from the man himself. And the tips are just as useless as they are in the Gremlin game.

▲ Mario has three racing games in one (so at least you get value for money; the) and they line up as follows: Indy (like Formula One but not as good), Stock (racing about in an old man's car) and Sprint (crappy slow cars on dirt tracks).

VERDICT

■ MEGA DRIVE

Mario Andretti's is full of neat ideas like the slipstream and realistic braking effects, but sadly the game is a bit cack. The graphics are some of the worst I've ever seen on Mega Drive and I reckon they'd even feel embarrassed on Master System. Sound couldn't be much worse either. And game-play sucks, with no feeling of speed, control or the sensation of driving a real car. Looks like another case of all the money being spent on the licence instead of the gameplay.

Following the success of Thunderhawk Core comes down to earth with another CD corker...

When you sit down to play this you can't help but think that if only Sega had got its act together and produced games of this quality early on in the Mega-CD's life, things would be very different now. Instead they've had to rely on third-party developers such as Core to deliver the goods – acons too late.

Battlecorps is based on an improved version of the one that powered Core's other Mega-CD hit, Thunderhawk. This time, though, you're at the controls of flippin' massive Battletech-style robot death machines tramping through various post holocaust-type landscapes. No puzzles, no brainwork. Just you, 200 tons of extreme hardness and plenty of things to kill. Bliss.

▲ Battlecorps lacks one essential ingredient, people to squash. It's not fair, really, you've got this massive robot and nothing too squishy to stamp on.

▲ The battle robots are kitted out with machine-guns, missiles, mortars and flamethrowers. More than enough to complete the task at hand.

BATTLECORPS

▲ Even better news about this game is that rumour has it Core is producing a version for the Mega-32, which will really be something special.

■ VERDICT

■ MEGA-CD

Core has once more proved itself as the top Mega-CD developer. I know it sounds like I'm crawling – but I don't care because this is great. Technically and from a gamepoint of view. Different tactics can be applied, or you can just wade in and stamp on everything. The control system is over complicated, which severely messes you up if you panic. But aside from that I don't see a better Mega-CD release on the horizon.

So it seems we're not rubbish at cricket after all. Mind you, that's easy to say when we're playing sad sides like New Zealand. But even so, you can't knock Graham Gooch's terrific double-century in the First Test, only the second time he's achieved such a feat. And you can't knock Audiogenic either, for dusting down its Goochie licence, giving it a coat of paint and shoving it out on PC.

You can choose to play any of the world's recognised Test cricket teams, from the West Indies to poor old Sri Lanka, with each one made up of the real sides' current players. And as for the aim of the game? Stripping away the gobbledigook like Silly Mid-Off (what does that mean?), you've got to score loads of runs with your bat, then try to bowl the other side out before they amass a better score than you. There, simple. So why can't our players do this more often?

▲ The fielders must be positioned in such a way that they can reach a ball quickly.

The mechanics of the game are basic, but you can control some of the more technical areas such as organising your own field placings. # SHADOW OF THE BEAST 2

Another disk-to-disc conversion which, shock horror, isn't all it's cracked up to be...

Flippin' hell, this is the computer game equivalent of digging out an old pair of DM's and finding three-year-old dog dump festering in the soles. It's as equally unexpected and unwelcome.

The original Mega Drive cartridge version of the game wasn't a total disaster, although it came pretty close. Somehow, though, they've made the CD version even worse. Included now is a full load of CD speech, which is badly acted and, horror, you can't interrupt it. This means before you kill a key character you're forced to listen to their monologue first. On top of that, the text still comes up on screen, so you can read it before the Mega-CD's even had a chance to access the relevant sound file. You're left with no option other than to switch it off. Do!

▲ This is the first puzzle you encounter. Some bloke's being spirited away and you, being an all-round hero-type, have to rescue him.

▲ Once you switch the speech off, Beast 2 is painfully similar to the rather poor cartridge original.

▲ You start the game with no items and a rather modest piece as your weapon. From here you have to rely on your skill and cunning, well, your jumping ability to survive.

▲ Almost no one in the game is pleased to see you. They demonstrate this by hitting you with whatever objects come to hand.

■ VERDICT

■ MEGA-CD

The key issue here is not what's made the game so bad, but that this was a tragic game in the first place. If it was a car it'd have three wheels and fluffly dice. There are some well worked puzzles, but that doesn't justify this game's existence; the combination of adventure and action isn't balanced and the result is tedious.

SENSIBLE SOCCER

Not satisfied with being on virtually every machine, Sensi gets too greedy...

The appearance of this game begs one important question – if you've got the cartridge version, is this worth buying? Like many CD conversions this is nothing more than a repackaged version of the original with a few new sound effects. Being fair to the programmers, there wasn't much they could add to such an excellent game. This raises another question. Why bother producing this when every Mega-CD owner can play the cartridge version? So, should Sensi novices pick up a cart, or come up to date with CD? Scoot to the verdict to find out.

The graphics may be purty, ▶ but the gameplay is head-and-shoulders over almost every other footy game.

Pizza has been the biggest food sensation in the world, and apparently it's big in the Underworld too...

'E at as much as you like for £2.50' says the sign. It can only mean one thing - PIZZA! Yep, Lital Divil is your pizza delivery boy, and although he doesn't ride a crumbly old moped, he'd be better off if he did because by the time he reaches this pizza it'll probably be cold.

In the pits of hell, Mutt the Divil is sent to collect pizza, a task so perilous that he's likely to visit the toilet a couple of times before he gets to eat. A labyrinth of traps and secret rooms looms before him, dropping Mutt into the sort of 'reaction' puzzles made famous by the Dragon's Lair games. But that's only part of this game; for the large part it's about collecting goodies and discovering their uses elsewhere. Systematic adventure is what you get here (A + B = C sort of stuff) and to help it along there is loads of devilish humour.

▲ This dragon will need to be taught not to make so much noise when he sleeps. Always approach baddies slowly to see if Mutt will automatically use a collected item.

◀ Here the mermaid has been captured by nasty piranha fish. Mutt will need to destroy them before he can set her free. Women, eh?

LITIL DIVIL

▲ There are lots of stages which involve finding the correct movement path across risky platforms; unfortunately it's the same paths each time you play.

▲ One of the more frustrating bits in the game. Having collected the key you have to guess where platforms will appear and jump across to the door.

▲ Battle with the guardian to enter the game at the start. This gets you used to the moves available to Mutt.

■ VERDICT

■ PC-CD ROM

On the one hand Lital Divil is a large, challenging game, blending a few styles of gameplay with funny graphics; but on the other it never seems to evolve into anything that you haven't seen in the first half-hour of play. The tunnel sections don't give you enough reaction time and rely on you having a good memory. As for the puzzles, they hold no lasting challenge once you've guessed the correct combinations. Few additive qualities in gameplay, but it will make you laugh.

The most bizarre excuse for a beat-'em up makes a third attempt at the genre...

You don't have to be a dedicated manga fan to realise that this is one of those weird and disturbing beat-'em-ups that only the Japanese seem to be capable of getting away with. This is actually the third Ranma game taken from the nutty cartoon series and features the most diverse and unlikely cast of superheroes yet assembled in a fisticuff type of game.

In case you know zilch about the cartoon, Ranma is the main character who turns into a girl whenever he gets wet, and whose dad is actually a fat Panda bear. Ranma tends to battle with cheerleader-type girls with silly names like Shampoo, and when there is a bloke to bash they tend to suddenly turn into a pig or some other animal. We'd say problems like that are good enough reasons to start a fight and that's all this game is about really.

RANMA 1/2 HARD BATTLE

Each character has at least two special moves, which are actually too effective when used in the corner. Victory is almost guaranteed on easier levels.

■ VERDICT

■ SNES

The biggest thing this game has going for it is the graphics – the animation and detail is amazing, and there are plenty of special moves, as well as a load of opponents. Is it any good though? Well it's not bad, but the special moves tend to be far too effective, tempting you not to bother with anything else, and there's no combination moves either. I completed the game on my first go, using Ranma's special moves to trap opponents in the corner – the oldest trick in the book!

■ DENIZ AHMET

▲ Holding the 'L' button starts a bizarre animation on your character. If you can avoid getting hit while this is happening your sprite will temporarily become much stronger when the energy bar flashes. Opponents do this too.

▲ A lot of Ranma characters have a habit of turning into animals when you don't really want them to. This chap turns into a pig as a special move.

The quality of the backdrops is probably the best we've seen in a beat-'em-up recently. There are some nice parallax effects too. ▶

▲ This is the boss-type character which appears after the other Ranma characters have been defeated. He's not very hard at all.

▲ In Tag mode you play a two-player game in a wrestling ring.

Nothing like a splash of colour to brighten up an old Game (Boy). Take a trip down Memory Platform...

Nintendo's Super Game Boy adaptor for the SNES certainly scores novelty points wise: slot it in your SNES and you can plug in any Game Boy game to play on your TV. But it doesn't end there; by some miracle you can actually add colour to your GB games. Big deal eh? Well, actually it is because there are now specific colour GB titles appearing which work normally on a standard Game Boy but when played through the adaptor appear in glorious colour with sampled speech too.

Donkey Kong '94 is the first of these games and features Mario to save his girl from the giant gorilla. Each rescue attempt presents numerous levels of Mario-style platform action and the boss stages take inspiration from the Donkey Kong coin-op. And if simplicity breeds addiction then this game dribbles with the stuff.

DONKEY KONG '94

On ▶ later stages there's a lot of complex work to be done; you have to pull levers back and forth to change the direction of lifts which in turn activates new platforms.

By pushing down and jumping Mario does a handstand. Jump again and he does a super high jump. Also, as shown here, the handstand move enables Mario to avoid bullets. ▼

■ VERDICT

■ SUPER GAME BOY

When I heard about the Super Game Boy adaptor it seemed a stupid idea, but if Donkey Kong is indicative of the games we can expect then I'm impressed. This game merges Mario's platform games with the nostalgia of Donkey Kong, resulting in awesome playability. The platform puzzles you face are well thought out and are clever and challenging. There's plenty of variation in gameplay, with stacks of levels too. Donkey Kong '94 is the best Game Boy game ever.

■ DENIZ AHMET

▲ In the jungle there's a lot of climbing to be done on the vines and on the tails of strolling apes. The quickest way to climb is by hanging between two vines.

▲ On the platforms you have to find the key and take it to the door. Problem is you can't climb while holding the key, so you have to throw it, climb down and pick it back up before it disappears.

▲ Kong appears twice in each world. You kill him the same way each time by picking up objects he throws at you and chucking them back at him three times.

▲ The more difficult puzzles involve moving these blocks around to create temporary ledges to move across. On later stages you have to make ledges to lure baddies away from platforms.

	GRAPHICS	SOUND	PLAYABILITY	OVERALL
BENEFACTOR AMIGA	:Not exactly the height of sophistication. The main sprite is awful and the backgrounds look rather dated.	Average is being a little bit kind when applied to the blandness inherent in the sonics here.	Takes a little while to get into, but once you do you'll have great fun. A nice mix of arcade and strategy.	Frustrating, but if you like a bit of joystick frippery to go with your puzzling this should suit you.	RATING:81%
BUMP 'N' BURN AMIGA	Detailed sprites and smooth scrolling. The backdrops could be better.	Different sounds for every character in the game add plenty of variety to the accompanying aural assault.	Instinctive and responsive controls plus plenty of depth - as well as the various power-ups and original courses.	Much like Super Mario Kart, which is no bad thing. One for the less serious racing fans.	RATING:85%
CLIFFFRANGER AMIGA	Completely crap. Tiny infy sprites a C64 would be ashamed of and terrible animation.	Cover your ears! Verrily the sound of this game doth scrape the lugs like one of them cheese graters.	Blimey, not only is the control method utterly useless, but the game design is stupendously flawed.	If you released this as a PD title you would immediately lose any credibility whatsoever.	RATING:16%
NAUGHTY ONES CD32	A pleasant looking game. In fact, it looks more like a SNES game than anything.	Naughty Ones has what ranks as the absolutely worst soundtrack you will ever suffer. Believe us.	Smooth moving, with an impressive number of levels. The controls spoil the fluidity of the gameplay.	Good fun if you can get used to the joypad controls - but you'll find that hard going.	RATING:72%
SIERRA SOCCER AMIGA	The players move fluidly, and some nice cut screens add to the atmosphere.	A bit on the average side. This is, after all, a footie game, a genre not generally famed for ace sound.	Fast paced and rather Sensi-like in its entirety. Very easy to get into indeed...	Playable and most enjoyable. It is, however, rather on the easy side for single players.	RATING:58%
SUPER PUTTY CD32	Detailed, colourful, well-animated and exactly the same as the regular Amiga version.	Jolly, bouncy tunes, plenty of good effects and sounds identical to the regular Amiga version, once again.	A wide range of puzzles and a lot of good new ideas. However, the control system is rather finicky.	Worth a look if you want a challenging puzzle platformer, but has frustrating controls.	RATING:83%
SWITCHQUIZ AMIGA	Very very basic indeed. Just a number of boxes containing a little text. Rather short on colour, too.	If you thought football games were bad for sound, you've obviously never played a trivia game in your life.	Good enough selection of questions, although some of them are rather on the impossible side.	Great for passing some time with a couple of mates, but not a majorly exciting product.	RATING:68%
SETTLERS PC	Probably the best going among the God-games. A high level of detail abounds all over the shop.	Not bad, not bad. Not particularly incredible either, by any means, but not all that bad.	There's absolutely loads to do, it takes a while to get into the swing of things, but once you do you'll be engrossed.	If you haven't already got a god game (or you're a big fan), you should buy this	RATING:86%

Dennis the Menace can't play tennis, but CVG's Den can trip (and trim) the lawn fantastic with Philips' latest sports sim...

Tennis players know how to get their whites really white: get a big multinational to plonk its logo on their shirt, socks or shorts, then when it's dirty you just throw it in the bin and get McDonald's or Philips to buy you a new one. And talking of Philips, the peeps behind the CD-i have just released a new PC tennis sim.

Now we won't insult you by telling you what you have to do here - this is just tennis after all - but we can't resist quoting a line from the game's manual which reads: 'The object of the game is to get the ball over the net.' Really?

Anyway, this is actually a serious attempt at simulating the sport, providing you with digitised graphics, international courts, training options and all the standard playing surfaces of grass, clay and cement. While it supports two players it doesn't offer doubles, but the whole point of it being on CD is that you get genuine commentary from over 1,000 phrases giving you tips while you play. So is it any good? Let's see...

▲ You only get four players to select from in this tennis game. Clicking on the faces plays an FMV sequence of them in action with commentary.

INTERNATIONAL TENNIS OPEN

▲ There are two options for training available. You can challenge the ball machine shown here, or practice serving.

▲ Unlike other games you can't dive for the ball if you think you're about to miss it. So it's not all that realistic after all.

▲ You can select to play on clay, grass or cement surfaces. But we haven't really noticed much change to the ball's handling on each one.

◀ The most exciting way to play is up against the net so you can slam the ball. Risky though.

■ VERDICT

■ PC-CD ROM

This is a decent tennis game for the PC; you've got all the moves available for strategic play, but the combination of joystick and keyboard to use them is too awkward to be comfortable. In one player mode it's very sensible in that it always gives you control of the nearest player when you change sides, but in two player matches the opponent has a hard time returning shots. All in all it's a very believable tennis game, but a somewhat poor use of CD-ROM.

S mash Tennis has been available for a while on import under the name of Super Family Tennis. As its import name suggests, this game is best appreciated with more than one player and multitap support makes sure of that.

The first thing you'll notice about the game is the diversity of the playing courts. They range from beachside to cliff-top, and they're full of intricate graphical touches which complement the cheerfulness of the cutesie graphics; for instance as the sun comes out, nearby trees gradually cast shadows over the court. Additionally, on some courts you can scroll the screen far enough to see people playing on adjacent patches, or even hit passing animals with the ball. As for the gameplay, well it does the job, delivering an accurate representation of the sport, even with a limited range of moves.

▲ This is the only indoor court in the game. We thought we'd print it because the sound effects are very good with lots of echo and reverb.

▲ Playing one-on-one is actually very tricky because the CPU has a habit of hitting the ball very precisely into the corners of the court and you can't really run fast enough to reach it in time.

SMASH TENNIS

◀ Normally you select which court to play on and stick to it. If you select the Whistle stop option however, you get to do a tour of all the courts.

Each court has funny animated scenes around the edges. The Shrine court shown here has the best touches; the ball can drop into little pools, you can scare sleeping crows who flap across the screen, and if you blast the ball into the temple small creatures scurry out in fear. ▶

If you think you're about to miss a shot it's worth tapping the hit button a couple of times, which makes you dive for the ball. ▼

▲ Serving takes a bit of getting used to, like all tennis games. Unlike other tennis games however, it's very difficult to score on the serve. Computer opponents are very good at returning.

■ VERDICT

■ SNES

Smash Tennis is a fine game. The cute approach sets it apart, as does the illusion of a large play area; though there aren't enough different shots to cover the whole court, unless you're playing it as a multitap game which is the better option. What's so good, though, is the way opponents respond to your improving skills, giving the game heaps of lastability. The control system is responsive enough to ensure that if you miss a shot it's your fault.

The greatest game on earth, the biggest football stadium in the country and a CD and floppy disk to which football is just a fantasy...

No, really, it's true, this is a licence of a stadium. I don't have much truck with Wembley stadium itself, especially having missed the start of the England Denmark game earlier in the year after spending 20 minutes on the stairs, thanks to the crap stewards herding everyone towards the same seats.

Apart from the logo, the only thing this game has in common with Wembley is football. In this case though, it's without the drama. When you cast your mind back to Charlie Nicholas smashing two goals past Liverpool for Arsenal in a cup final, or Andy Linighan and his broken nose giving us a winner against Wednesday, then play this, something, somewhere, has gone very wrong.

▲ Gooonaahs! The action can be viewed top down or from the side. Either way, the gameplay is almost identical, so they don't make much of a difference.

▲ Head-sup! The players have a variety of different moves including overhead kicks and headers.

WEMBLEY INTERNATIONAL SOCCER

'Tott'nam are a load of...!' Considering Audiogenic had to shell out for the licence, the Wembley connection is really sparse. You'd at least expect a '66 World Cup option.

1-0 To The Arsenal! As is the norm with most modern footy games, the defending team form a wall for free kicks, which you invariably kick the ball over.

And we hate Tott'nam! A clever picture-in-picture system shows you close-ups of the action, although you don't always have time to pay it any attention.

▲ Man on! In the top-down mode the player graphics are rough to say the least, completely out-matched by their side-on brothers.

■ VERDICT

■ CD32/AMIGA 1200

I love football me. I can't even begin to calculate the amount of money I've shelled out to watch Arsenal FC. So when I get a game like this which costs almost as much as two tickets for the North Bank, I can't help but think that the people who programmed it haven't been to that many games. It's unrealistic lacks speed, effective controls, polish and fun. Take your money, buy a ball and go for a knock-about in the park with your mates instead.

The champion of Amiga beat-'em-ups gets a facelift from those programmers extraordinaire, Team 17...

Until Body Blows came along there were few decent beat-'em-ups on Amiga. And on CD32 it was a similar situation until Ultimate Body Blows arrived. Meanwhile, the A1200 had Body Blows Galactic, a fine game although it was criticised for being too slow.

So what exactly can AGA Body Blows offer that's not been seen in one of the previous Team 17 products? For a start the price. AGA Body Blows is only £14.99 and just £7.99 if you send your original disks back to Team 17. As a game it slots in somewhere between the original Body Blows and Ultimate Body Blows. All the original characters are present apart from Max and the turbo and tournament options from Ultimate have been included.

▲ There's plenty of special moves on offer with Lory having more than his fair share of the good ones.

Mmm, smell those graphics, or something. They're good, but not in the same league as Eifmania's. ▶ ▲ Speed rush! If you already thought Body Blows Galactic crawled, you won't believe how slow it seems after playing AGA Body Blows on the fastest turbo option.

▲ Yitu is one of the best characters to pick if you're a beginner, he's just so fast. Just pray you don't come up against him until you've had some practice!

Like Ultimate Body Blows on CD32 there's now a tag and tournament option to play. ▼

A mercy option has been included and this lets you choose whether you hit people or not when they've been knocked down. ▶

■ VERDICT

■ A1200

AGA Body Blows is what a beat-'em-up should look, sound and play like. Although the graphics are not as good as Eifmania's, at everything else it excels. It plays like a beat-'em-up with loads of moves which are easy to pull off. And bone crunching sound FX only add to the realism. It's also tremendous fun, especially when you play with bizarre characters like Lory. Previously I said Ultimate Body Blows was the best Amiga beat-'em-up. Now this one is.

It's time to don your goggles and Biggles leather jacket, because Core's latest game has landed!

Around the mid Eighties you couldn't move in your local arcade for vertically scrolling shoot-'em-ups based on creaky World War II fighter planes: 1942, 1943, Tiger Shark to name but three. The format was done to death, both in the arcades and on home machines, and eventually the general public decided it was all a bit passe.

As you may have noticed there's something of a retro games revival at the moment with people snapping up Tiger Shark PCB's for example. What better time, then for Core to fly into the market with its own interpretation of the genre, complete with four huge main levels and two equally large sub-levels? And as this is AGA-only expect fast and simultaneous two-player action, 256 colour graphics and realistic sound FX as well as classic gameplay.

▲ Be sure to pick up the power-ups so that you can get rid of those end-of-level gits.

▲ Two-player option ahoj! Just like the arcade classic, Banshee can be flown by two players simultaneously. There's no fighting over power-ups though, you each get given your own.

◀ The first boss you will encounter in this game is not one, but two huge planes. Don't get cocky though, this is just the mid-level boss. Wait 'till you see the end-of-level mutha.

▲ Some of the 'dodgy' scenes may not make it into the boxed game. These include being able to shoot prams, polar bears and graves as shown here.

▲ Check out those lovely 256 colour backgrounds. That's the benefit of being able to develop on A1200 and CD32 first.

◀ You get a limited amount of rolls. Use these to get out of a dangerous situation. You might end up killing yourself though, since the rolls are activated by the spacebar and it's a bit difficult trying to press it and play the game!

Core has taken a classic arcade shoot-'em-up and given it a Nineties sheen. If I was a cynical old hack I'd say Banshee offers nothing new, but I'm not and the game plays so well I just don't care. There might only be four levels, but they're huge and the two player option is a gas, so lastability shouldn't be a problem. ■ FM MARTY AND COIN-OP VERSIONS ALSO AVAILABLE 24-Meg heavyweight action comes to the SNES courtesy of Capcom's four-player coin-op...

The best move in wrestling has to be the 'whoopie cushion' where you leap and sit on someone's head - Poop! We couldn't find that move in this game but there are stacks of others to get to grips with, and a veritable number of grips, slams, grapples and falls come from a formidable 10 characters who you are required to defeat. You yourself can be one of eight of these 'actors' for one-on-one action, or just slot in multitar for a four-up tag-team razzmatazz.

While Muscle Bomber only makes use of three of the SNES buttons, a combination of repeated tapping, and simultaneous pressing of two buttons, launches characters into an aggressive special move. But, as your opponents get more aggressive the better you start to play; there's none of that one-move cheesy stuff which lets you always win on some lesser games.

▲ There are many ways to bring an opponent down. You determine the moves performed as you grab the victim.

▲ The big chaps tend to be better at close-range attack. This bear hug looks particularly painful.

MUSCLE BOMBER

▲ Tapping the punch button repeatedly usually starts off a dramatic combination move.

▲ Just what is that camera man filming - looks a bit rude to us.

▲ After bouncing your opponent of the ringside why not stick your arm out and take them down!

▲ No, he's not trying on a new hat, just smashing this bloke's head in.

▶ Your opponent is likely to escape from this fall because he has a lot of energy left.

SLAM BAM, THANK YOU MA'AM

This is one of the most dramatic special moves. It involves swinging 360 degrees round the opponent's neck.

SECOND OPINION

The best thing about this game is the variety of moves available, and the way in which you can string together some very good combination attacks. The opponents have a very good level of intelligence coded into them too which means that you have to learn genuine skills to defeat them. The best way to enjoy this however, is in 4-up mode where there's no slowdown and you can work as a team, just like the real (or should that be 'unreal') sport. It's a toughie that's for sure.

■ GARY LORD

You always fight in the same ring unfortunately, but you can leap out and hit opponents with chairs and stuff if you want. ▶

■ VERDICT

■ SNES

Unlike the WWF games this game acts as more of a wrestling sim, with the characters each having distinctive characteristics, a separate mastery of moves (like Streetfighter) and a control system which isn't just about tapping keys and hoping for the best. You can actually do combos here, finishing off opponents with a special move. Naturally, this game excels with four players and without slowdown too it is dangerously addictive.

■ DENIZ AHMET

▶ You don't get any extra points for knocking him out. Unfortunately.

▶ If all else fails then there's only one thing you can do in this position: fart!

Who's in the Hauz? Well it's Dr Hauzer, the 3D0's latest hero trapped in a computerised Amityville...

There was much scratching of chins when we first saw the ad for this game, which is pretty understandable when you think that this is the most blatant bit of plagiarism we've seen in a long time. Basically, all programmers seem to have done is parked themselves in front of a PC, played Alone In The Dark for a couple of hours, and decided it would make a rather decent 3D0 game. They were almost right.

Alone In The Dark would make an extremely good 3D0 game – done properly, that is. What the programmers have actually created, however, is a rather miserable copy of that game. It uses the same style of polygon graphics, with the addition of a few bits of texture mapping, the same camera angles and the same kind of puzzles. They've also added a new element – slowness. Hauzer is incredibly sluggish.

▲ If Indiana Jones was born in this country he'd be born in this country, this is the kind of sad hero he'd be.

DR HAUZER

▲ Avoiding the axes is tricky when you're controlling a character who only seems to respond to the joystick when he feels like it.

■ VERDICT

■ 3D0

Been there, seen it, played it, beat it, and not playing it tomorrow. This is Alone In The Dark all over again – without the speed or gameplay. Hauzer is ridiculously slow, which slaughters the gameplay. The first-person perspective mode is unusable and even when there's nothing moving the game isn't that good to look at. There aren't enough problems to make it an adventure and there's not enough action to make it an arcade game.

■ MARK PATTERSON

▲ In true Indiana Jones-style Hauzer sprints away from a rolling, erm, thing. Really, you'd have thought that the programmers could at least draw circles.

▲ Hmm, a fiendish trap. The room rapidly fills with water threatening to drown Hauzer – oh no! Well, it would be quite fiendish if you couldn't just open the door and walk out.

▲ Look at Hauzer leap, look at Hauzer run. Look at Hauzer, well, that's about all he can do really.

CVG HIT!

After looking both ways before crossing, CVG steps out to find Nintendo's new Super FX game anything but middle-of-the-road...

Imagine yourself sitting in a radio-controlled car with a small child at the controls. The child makes the car crash, spin, leap and roll-over because it's fun. Now picture yourself sitting down to play Stunt Race FX: you select the Speed Trax option and pull off on the first of 15 courses. Suddenly, a car hits you from behind forcing you to go faster, you see another car but you don't drive safely by, instead opting to bash into it, spin off on the adjacent corner, roll-over and carry on. Why? Well because it's fun and you can, just like the child with his toy. So, you hopefully get an image of the freedom, excitement, curiosity and risk elements which form the appeal of this game. Sure it's about reflexes and winning, but it's more to do with having the most wacky race possible.

With its obligatory split-screen mode plus an additional five courses of Monster Truck-type stunts you may, like us, have suddenly realised that Stunt Race FX may be the illegitimate sequel that was never promised to Mario Kart Junksies.

STUNT RACE FX

▲ The 4WD truck has no problem getting through water, but with the smaller cars you'll need to use you the booster.

You have a limited supply of turbo (booster) so ensure you pick up these blue gems to top up your power. ▲

WACKY RACES

'Join me for a ride, maximum overdrive.'
There are a total of five vehicles to master in this game, across 24 different tracks. Here's our guide to their pros and cons.

● 4WD is ideal for beginners and essential on the Stunt courses. He doesn't skid around a lot and offers good grip on different surfaces. He's fast at acceleration but rather slow at turning.

● Coupe is a good all-rounder, and his benefits are tight steering and high speed. His boost supply also lasts longer than the other vehicles. Select this if high-speed and stability is your thing.

● F-Type is for those who've mastered the controls. His acceleration is slow but his top speed is the greatest. This car has a weak body, so you'll need to balance him out during jumps and avoid frequent crashes.

● 2WD is only available on Free Trax until you clear the Master Class tracks. He's fast and is tricky to control. If you lose control it's hard to recover without wasting valuable time. Good for setting speed records.

● The Trailer is only available in the bonus game. The viewing perspective is different in the bonus game so controlling him can get very confusing. Go slowly.

TAKE A CRASH COURSE WITH ADDED FX!

4 There's plenty of little touches – like horses running across the road and Nintendo lorries crossing – which have to be avoided.

4 The split screen mode isn't as playable as the main game mainly because of the tiny play areas. It's also quite slow. You can both use different perspectives, though, like in Virtua Racing.

■ VERDICT

■ SNES

When SNES games are good they tend to be very good and Stunt Race FX is in that category. Using the Super FX chip there's no need for Mode 7 graphics for speed. Everything here is smooth, fluidly animated and there's no slowdown. The graphics are cartoonish and they also don't build up in blocks on the horizon. There's stacks of variety in gameplay and it shifts like a proper race game with challenging opponents. Stunt Race FX is the most creative racing game to date.

SECOND OPINION

SNES games have generally been poor this year with only NBA JAM standing out. And now Stunt Race FX. Graphically and sonically this trounces Virtua Racing and in one player mode it matches it for speed. It's also a damn sight more fun to play. Sadly the two-player mode is a little disappointing since it's quite slow and has a small game window. If you want the best one-player racing game on the SNES get Stunt Race FX, but if you've got any friends you'll still be better off with Mario Kart.

ROAD RASH AMIGA / HIT SQUAD PRICE: £12.99

EA's Amiga conversion of its Mega Drive hit remained faithful to the original, although it never really had the same level of gameplay. Still, if you don't have access to a Mega Drive, this is a decent enough substitute.

LEISURE SUIT LARRY 3 KIXX XL PRICE: £12.99

This game appeared around the same time as Kings Quest 3, but it doesn't even begin to approach being as good as it. Like KQ3 it's a graphic adventure, although 'adventure' is used in the loosest sense of the word. It lacks the depth to keep you playing.

HOCUS POCUS / PC

From Apogee, the creators of Halloween Harry, comes another arcade-type PD disk. Hocus Pocus uses the same 256-colour engine, although it's not quite up to Halloween's standards thanks to a couple of annoying gameplay faults. Still, this is a solid platformer which makes a decent change from more heavy-weight full price releases.

ROB'S GAMES / AMIGA 17-Bit / Disk 3039

Who is Rob? Do we care? Not really when we get a disk this good. It features five games, the best being Thrust, Dynamite - an excellent Bomberman clone and Scorched Tanks, a battle tanks rip-off. Altogether this is one of the best games packs we've seen this year.

ASTROFIRE / PC

While Amiga owners rant on about Stardust, PC owners can now get their hands on a shareware game which is more than a tad similar. Basically Astrofire uses the same Asteroids-style format combined with 256-colour graphics. It lacks Stardust's 3D section, but it's very playable all the same.

Long before the days of Streetfighter, Mega Man was Capcom's flagship character; is it time for retirement or what?

Mega Man's big in the videogame world, but a lot of gamers haven't heard of him because he's spent an awful lot of his life leaping and blasting around on the 8-bit machines.

Now he's back in his third Game Boy game, battling against the evil Doctor Wily. To give Dr Wily a good slapping Mega Man will have to battle his way past eight of his previous enemies, like Skull Man and Gemini Man. Once this lot have been dispensed with it's time for the ultimate confrontation with old Wily himself. Of course there's all the usual power-ups to help you on your journey, but be warned, the levels are gargantuan and there's a distinct lack of extra lives to pick up.

You can always rely on Mega Man games to have decent backgrounds and guess what? Mega Man doesn't disappoint. ▼

MEGAMAN 3

Get under narrow sections by having a good old slide. Watch out for carpet burns though! ▼

■ VERDICT

■ GAME BOY

Mega Man 3 is characteristically unoriginal and tough. In some cases being a dab hand with the joystick doesn't matter since there's a host of traps that are impossible to avoid. Also, there are no restart points on each level, which is one of my pet hates. Still, graphics and sound are good and if you're sick of easy platformers this is one for you. Just keep an ambient album nearby to reduce those stress levels!

The Americans have got it wrong concentrating on stealth technology – what they need are some loud scary 'copters like these. It's a macho thing...

Rebels, insurgents, 'freedom fighters'. Scum more like. Planting their bombs, kidnapping honest journos, growing beards and living in forests – who needs them? Not MicroProse at any rate; the latest incarnation of their classic flight sim Gunship puts you right in the middle of them – from the safe position of behind the controls of a large, well-armed assault helicopter.

As you wipe out opposing forces you rise in rank, which lets you pilot even larger 'copters on even more dangerous missions. The objectives don't change, though. It's still applying the American method for dealing with people you don't like – which mainly involves bombarding them with missiles. But who cares when it's as fun as this.

▲ Quelle surprise! The game has an FMV intro! We've never seen one of those before.

◀ Sitting behind you in the cockpit is your invisible co-pilot who controls the counter measures and never seems to be around when it's time to get the beers in.

GUNSHIP 2000

Getting the helicopter off the ground is a hell of a lot easier than, say, getting a VW Beetle started on a cold day. Simply push up on the joypad and hit the yellow button to power-up. From then on your only worry is crashing into a mountain or taking a missile up the jacksy. ▼ ◀ Like most modern flight sims, the action can be viewed from almost every position. The different views look good, but serve no purpose.

SURPRISE! YOU'RE DEAD!

So what does it take to be an ace helicopter pilot? Not much, really. Take a look at a typical mission...

1. When you've been given your mission you can back out like a coward or take it like a man without blubbing.

2. Now you know what you're up against you can select the right 'copter for the job, along with a battery of missiles, of course.

3. Once you're airborne check the map to find out where your primary target is. This time it's an armoured platoon you're after.

◀ If the game isn't fast enough, there are options to reduce the detail level of the graphics, which speeds things up considerably.

THE

SECOND OPINION

With titles like Gunship 2000 the CD32 is really starting to show its prowess. Everything about this game reeks of quality. From the beautiful packaging to the gorgeous rendered intro, from the 256-colour graphics, fantastic CD sound and music, to the faster and smoother update. Even the many keyboard controls have been expertly implemented on to the CD32 joystick. With a wealth of missions and top notch control, Gunship 2000 is up there with TFX as the best flight sim around.

■ RIK SKEWS

◀ Gunship's most incredible feature is the neat way its programmers have crammed all the controls on to the joystick and a few menus. It's actually easier to play now than it was in its original floppy form.

VERDICT

■ CD32

Sorry, but I've got to get nostalgic here. Gunship was one of my fave C64 games, so I'm biased. Gunship 2000 has loads to see and kill, different 'copters to fly, excellent weapons and plenty of missions. The programmers have done an admirable job of cramming a keyboard's worth of commands on to a joystick without making it too complicated. My only criticism is the graphics are too simple. Still, this is one of the best CD32 discs available.

5. That showed them. It's time to go home and collect the medal and world peace is restored until the next time you take to the skies.

▲ When all else fails you can fall back on your trusty cannon. It's only effective at short range, but it comes with a hefty 1,200 rounds of ammunition so you can afford a few misses.

▲ It's compulsory to attend mission briefings, although you never hear anything new. The missions invariably involve shooting things, so there's not much point in paying attention.

STRIKER

The latest, but unfortunately not the greatest, footy game limps on to CD32...

Kicking! Just as World Cup fever's about to strike, along comes Striker on CD32. It's the second football game to come out on this format, but can it match or surpass Sensible Soccer's CD32 dominance? Well, that would be hard, but let's see what Striker has to offer.

For a start there's 64 international teams to choose from, each with their own strengths and weaknesses. They can be selected to play either a one or two-player game or enter a cup competition. Other options include different formations, game length, pitch surface, strength of wind and so on. One other point to note is that the playfield is vertically scrolling, not the best of ideas perhaps, but it's not as unplayable as the similar Super Soccer on SNES.

Choose your team! There are 64 to pick, ranging from Germany to the tragic Qatar. Oh, and England - obviously not the World Cup then.

Action replays are shown after every goal is scored, but there is an option to switch them off. Use your joystick as a video-type controller for rewinding and fast-forwarding through the goal build-up.

That was a meaty challenge! Harder fouls result in yellow cards, so don't say we didn't warn you!

CD32 Striker has no improvements over the Amiga original, there's not even any CD music! Striker was great when released originally, but football games have come a long way since then. 	GRAPHICS	SOUND	PLAYABILITY	OVERALL
ROBINSON'S REQUIEM - PC	Droolmorgous! Stunning first-person perspective graphics - they look lovely. Scrolling's a bit jerky though.	Not going to break any records for brilliance, but the sound does the trick perfectly well.	More depth than you would possibly ever believe, but the crap controls take the edge off it.	Must have taken years to develop, but dodgy programming spoils some of the splenderness.
DETROIT - PC	Wow! Lots of pictures of cars! And factories! And spreadsheets! Phewee!	Well, not bad for a strategy game, but then strategy games are hardly famous for world-beating sounds.	Engrossing and original, this is a strategy game with plenty of new ideas to keep things interesting.	Very playable indeed, and it takes plenty of brainpower to get to the top.
EYE OF THE STORM - PC	Plenty of ray-tracing if you like that sort of thing, and some spectacular useage of polygons.	Not bad if you've got a decent sound card (as usual, in fact).	Well, it's an Elite-esque space combat/trading simulation - you probably get the idea.	A completely redundant piece of software which has been done better a million times before.
CORRIDOR 7 - PC	If you've played Wolfenstein you will know what to expect since they use the same game engine.	A sparse use of sound is obviously meant to convey an eerie atmosphere. Or perhaps they just couldn't be bothered. Probably the latter.	It's... it's... it's just like Wolfenstein! And Blake Stone! And that other one they did with the same engine!	Perhaps it's time our friends at Gametek ought to think of some new ideas.
WORLD CUP CHALLENGE - PC	Completely useless, as you might expect from a football management sim.	Well, there's a couple of interest blips here, but nothing for anyone to get excited about.	Limited number of options, and generally limited all round. No in-game interaction either.	Premier Challenge would be a better bet if you're after a tactical footy management game.
HORDE - PC CD-ROM	Cor blimey! There's a load of that there FMV here! And some rather nice intermissions, too.	If it's sampled speech you're after - and you've got a card that'll support it - it's sampled speech you'll get.	Nothing you won't have played before really, but extremely well done and with plenty of fresh challenges.	Impressive visuals and a good, solid challenge, but no marks for originality.
JACK NICKLAUS: SIGNATURE EDITION - PC-CD	Solid graphics make it easy to judge distances and shots.	Loads of digitised effects enhance the atmosphere no end.	Loads of courses, a course designer and a big challenge. Maybe not detailed enough for the real enthusiast, though.	For the incredible bargain price of 20 sovs, this is most worth a look.
KICK OFF 3 - AMIGA	Sprites look pretty rough compared to some of the other footy sims doing the rounds.	Surprise surprise! Not much to speak of, and what's there is pretty crap, anyway.	Far too complicated to control, even with two fire buttons. And the ball goes right through the players at times.	It was a star on SNES - the Amiga version, on the other hand, is what you'd call 'poor'.

The last of the Zool 2 conversions has arrived. Who ever said Zool was a man's game must have forgotten about Zool - his girlie.

Zool is a bit like the Rowntree's Fruit Pastel Challenge (the one where you have to put one in your mouth and not chew it), only on this occasion you'd have to look surprised if this wasn't a review for yet another format of this infectious platformer.

Zool 2 is still managing to cover what has been done before very well. If rushing around collecting tokens is your idea of an uplifting pastime then Zool 2 is doing a good job. It's a purist platform game, one in which reflexes are given priority, and by that we mean it's fast. An intense overload of colour and parallax in fact, but yet oddly uneventful in what it requires from you. Perhaps that's the reasoning behind the appearance of Zool - to give variety, and perhaps the new look chubby Zool is an indication of the result of eating those Chuppa Chups sweets which Zool games promote so heavily. You'll just have to play the six huge levels and see.

ZOOL 2

▲ Sticking to the wall is one main way of getting around. Just watch out for dangers in your path.

▲ The main difference between Zool 1 and Zool 2 is that you can select to play as either a bloke (ie Zool) or a gal (Zool - Zool's girlfriend). Zool has new moves in this version and the girl's got a whip and can burst up through blocks.

▲ Secret rooms aplenty in Zool 2. You usually find them at dead-ends.

■ VERDICT

■ PC

Zool 2 goes to show you just how well the PC can handle arcade platformers; utilising the machine's speed, smoothness and hard disk loading of stages. But I just think the whole Zool concept has had its day. The addition of Zool doesn't really add anything new to the game; and if you're going to convert a game to different formats you should try and take advantage of that system's potential. Zool 2 is still the same Amiga game.

I was young, it had flashing lights and a half-naked gal on the front and appealed to my young, inquisitive mind. Ten pence later and for the first time I'd seen the attraction in pinball games. Computer pinball games, however, are a completely different matter.

What Pinball Dreams 2 offers you in the way of table-top action is two flippers, four scenes and few extras. While the simplicity formula has worked for some real-life machines, when you've shelled out a wad for a computer version, you've got a right to expect a bit more for your cash.

PINBALL DREAMS 2

▲ Even if you don't have a sound card, you still get the benefit of excellent digitised music and effects through the PC's internal speaker.

The control system, as you'd expect, is very basic. The left and right shift keys control the flippers while space tilts the table. It's not good for the keyboard since you're tempted to smack the keys really hard for more power which just leaves them knackered. ▼

◀ Once the scrolling and ball movement have been sussed you'd think it would be hard to make a hash of a pinball game. Unfortunately that's what's happened here owing to an acute lack of imagination.

◀ The four tables all look radically different, but sadly they all play the same, so there's a lack of variety.

VERDICT*PC

In the history of computer games there have been two decent pinball sims – Devil Crash and Pinball Fantasy. That number isn't going to change with the arrival of Pinball Dreams 2. Technically there isn't anything to fault: the scrolling's smooth and the ball movement's convincing. What lets it down is the lack of features; the tables aren't big enough and you only get one set of flippers and the only extras are ramps.

▲ No matter how good it is, computer pinball just can't match the feeling of the real thing. Especially when it comes to hitting the flippers at different strengths.

The sequel to that classic arcade game Outrun rears its not-so-pretty head on the Mega Drive at last...

Sega has virtually defined the way arcade racing games should be with a string of brilliant machines like Outrun, Powerdrift, Rad Racer, Virtua Racing and most recently, and most excellently, Daytona USA. Somewhere in the middle of that lot though came Outrunners, a mediocre sequel of sorts to Outrun.

The game itself was much the same as its forerunner. Essentially you've got to race through a number of stages making the checkpoint at each one. Every so often the road splits, allowing you to decide which way to go with one route tending to be easier than the other. Despite the choice though, the routes tend to be similar. And that's about all there is to say about it, except there's a two-player option and the game's crap!

▲ A choice of eight different cars await you although personally I couldn't feel much difference in the way they handled or notice much difference in their top speeds.

You can choose between ▶ automatic or manual gears with automatic ones offering a quicker recovery from crashes while manual ones give a higher top speed.

◀ That familiar Outrun map makes a reappearance and shows you how far you've got once the game has ended.

▲ Everyone's favourite theme 'Magical Sound Shower' is here, along with all the other original tunes plus plenty of new ones.

Still, if you should be crap enough to crash you're treated to this tasty sequence where your car spins violently. Hope they've got seatbelts on. ▼

▲ One of Out Runner's main faults is the distinct lack of opponent cars which makes crashing a reality for only the completely hopeless.

▲ The roadside scenery is very sparse too, something else which lets you glide through the levels without the fear of crashing.

■ VERDICT

■ MEGA DRIVE

Outrun's one of my favourite arcade games, but OutRunners was rubbish, so I guess this is an accurate conversion! It harks back to when all racing games made you do was move left and right and avoid a corner occasionally. Graphically it stinks with cardboard-looking sprites and backgrounds repeated every couple of seconds. Sound is the usual whining nonsense too. This is the worst Mega Drive game I've played in ages. Avoid.

The SNES may be over-endowed with killer robot games, but this one offers something a little bit different to the rest...

Huzzah! A strategy game on the SNES! And it's a good one. Metal Marines draws elements from such diverse titles as Rampart, Dune and Battleships to create a game which is completely unique on this system.

It's set in the future, with you in charge of a hi-tech army of battle robots (Battletech, perchance?) out to nuke the asses off evil overlords. The Rampart bit has you furiously building up your defences before the enemy strikes. For the Dune element you're trying to make enough money to increase the size of your army. As for Battleships, you've got no idea where your enemy is, so the only way to pin them down is by scoring hits with random shots. Together this makes for a game which demands plenty of tactics, occasional bouts of patience, and in return gives you a highly addictive cart with one of the easiest-to-use interfaces of any strategy game.

If the enemy land, there are only two forms of defence open to you – your marines or automatic gun turrets. You'll be stuffed if you've neither of these.

▲ The hardest part about waging a war is paying for it. Every unit you build costs money, which slowly accumulates as the game progresses.

▲ When you launch an attack you get a short animated sequence of your missile or plane flying into enemy territory. It's nice for the first few times but after that it's really dull.

▲ A few missiles in the right place will disrupt your enemy's defences, allowing you to unload a platoon of marines in the area.

▲ Defence is as important as offence, so it's essential to create a wall of anti-aircraft missiles and radar to take out any enemy attacks.

■ VERDICT

■ SNES

Apart from Sim City, the SNES is v. short of decent strategy games. Metal Marines goes some way to redressing the balance, though. It's easy to play, full of action and presents a real challenge. However good this game is, though, it lacks one vital element – a two-player mode. It's great for a while, but the endless succession of computer opponents just isn't the same as having another human to grind into the dirt. Even as a one-player game though, this is still a top bit of action.

EYE OF THE BEHOLDER SNEES	The main graphics window is a little small, but the sprites and 3D effects are good.	Atmospheric background music, but the effects are pretty limp. Could do better.	Almost arcade-esque in the speed and action content of the game, but with plenty of puzzles thrown in.	An excellent, fast-paced RPG which knocks the spots off any other first-person effort.	RATING:90%
SOS SNEES	Original and impressive use of Mode 7 techniques, but the sprite animation is appalling.	The tunes and effects add a lot of atmosphere to the disaster movie events.	Very challenging, and very different from the competition - but there are no enemies at all.	Packs a decent difficulty level, and is most original, but regrettably not exciting at all.	RATING:70%
JUNGLE BOOK NINTENDO	An incredible amount of time has been spent on this animation and there's a wealth of colours.	Spot-on conversion of the movie tunes, with extra added ace animal noises.	Well designed levels and plenty to do, but can be a little floaty at times.	No prizes in the originality stakes, but a top award for its excellent implementation.	RATING:85%
BOXING LEG- ENDS OF THE RING NINTENDO	Impressive sprites when still, awkward when in motion.	A nice enough bit of music and some pleasant crowd effects, but nothing to get you all juiced up.	It's good fun, but the giant sprites make it a little difficult to tell what's going on half the time.	Could have been a contender for certain, but spoilt by over-ambition.	RATING:72%
ULTIMA - THE FALSE PROPHET SNEES	Modest and bijou would be a way of describing the visuals.	A bit of a curate's egg, some good bits and some rather crap ones.	If you're into RPGs, this is quite engrossing once you manage to get into it.	Won't turn anyone on to the genre, but this is decent enough for fans of RPGs.	RATING:81%
HULK - MD	The Hulk sprite is great, but all the enemies and backgrounds lack detail and imagination.	Fuzzy and hissy throughout, this is sound from about three years ago.	Probably wouldn't be so bad, but the combat is utterly tedious, which ruins everything.	If the Hulk could kill opponents without too much trouble, this could have been good.	RATING:52%
ULTIMATE SOCCER MASTER SYSTEM	Absolutely pitiful. It's hard to focus on them for long because the scrolling is so bad.	You really would not believe just how incredibly bad the sound is on this game. No, you wouldn't, honest.	Put it this way - this is the sort of game where the ball sometimes scrolls off the screen, and you can still kick it.	Oh please, turn it off! Take it away! This game is scary! Do not ever go near it!	RATING:12%
KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND SNEES	Loads of clour, but the actual graphics are nothing you won't have seen before.	Muffled is certainly the word you'd use to describe the sound for this game.	It's pretty entertaining for a while, but completely lacking in any original ideas whatsoever.	Not a terrible game, but there's nothing to set this apart from the millions of similar games.	RATING:70%

Yee haw! Lethal Enforcers goes back to the American Wild West for a routin' tootin' sequel...

Lethal Enforcers wasn't one for the politically correct. The idea was simply to er... shoot everyone. But as they were criminals it was probably all right. Apart from the violence, the most memorable feature were the guns stuck to the front of the machine, especially the pink one!

And luckily for Lethal Enforcers 2 the guns are back, only now they've been stretched to six-shooters since this time the blasting action takes place in 1879, right in the thick of cowboy and Indian territory.

Five different levels have to be blasted through, which range from a train robbery to an abandoned mine. Don't worry about the odds though, there's plenty of power-ups to collect on the journey, including Getting guns and even a cannon! So will you make it to US Marshall or simply remain a member of the posse?

GUN FIGHTERS-

LETHAL ENFORCERS 2

◀ You can choose to play any stage at the start of the game, but bear in mind that the game gets progressively more difficult, so if you're new to the game then you'd be better off picking the first stage.

As Beavis and Butthead would say: 'Heh heh, heh, heh heh!' Shooting innocent people may be fun but you lose energy, so it's not a good idea unless you like wasting money. ▶

Shooting at some people or background objects can result in one of six different power-ups such as the shotgun shown here. Some are limited while others last until you die. They're collected by simply being shot. ▽

BOSS DRUMMING!

There's a whole heap of nasty bosses to contend with before you face the final showdown. Here's a look at some of them...

INDIAN WARPATH!

This guy is the last bad guy in the game and he's a right git!

First of all he appears and charges himself up. Bolts of energy fly at you and turn into energy destroying skeletons if you don't destroy them quickly...

...Skeletons also rise from the ground. This guy means business!

Should you manage to kill him he turns back into a spirit. Until next time, perhaps...

▲ Those stray bullets don't go to waste. Instead they pepper the background and generally mess the place up!

RELOAD!

◀ Not for the squeamish: Gun Fighters features blood and gore galore. Characters can also be wounded as well as killed outright.

■ VERDICT

■ MACHINE

Gun Fighters is a more complete game, with superior guardians to those in Lethal Enforcers. More precise shooting is needed to kill, otherwise you just wound your opponents. There are some amazing digitised backgrounds and the difficulty curve is well set. The guns are too large though, and it's easy to knock the cabinet when reloading. There's not much variety either, but seeing as it's an arcade game, that's not really a major problem.

With a foot in the door and a notepad in his hand, Rik Skews checks out what's hot in coin-op city...

▲ The graphics are still as brilliantly digitised as ever. Couple this with great sampled sound and killer gameplay and you've got an arcade superstar.

NBA JAM GETS A NEW COAT OF PAINT
Boomshakalaka! By the time you read this a new version of last year's best arcade game should be in your good old arcade emporium. That's right, NBA JAM is back in a new Tournament Edition.

The original game is still here in all its glory, but there are some excellent new enhancements available to the player including the ability to select from five characters instead of the original two. This allows you to substitute at half-time and sort out the wheat from the chaff in each of the NBA East and West teams. There's also more power-ups, secret moves and many new statistics. All this makes NBA JAM more playable than ever.

▲ With five players in each team, half-time is a good opportunity to make substitutions and get rid of a player who's having a bad match or who's been injured.

▲ He's on fire! Like the original NBA JAM, the Tournament Edition features this move where your player becomes almost unbeatable if he scores three consecutive dunks.

WILLIAMS DEMOLISH THE PINBALL OPPOSITION

Also on its way from Williams is a pinball version of Demolition Man, based on the highly explosive and enjoyable movie of the same name starring old rubber muscles himself, Sly Stallone. We reckon that even non-pinball fans will get a lot out of this game since it's sporting some excellent new features not seen in pinball games before. For a start there are two side mounted triggers to control the flippers and the cryo-claw (you'll recognise it from the film).

And there's a miniature car crash built in! No, we don't know exactly how this is going to work in something like pinball, but hey, we're open minded.

Look out for a full review in a forthcoming issue. Let's hope we don't have to go all the way to San Jose to test it out though!

▲ San Angeles burns in one of Demolition Man's excellent Dot-Mation scenes.

▲ Another industry first is the miniature car crash feature that's been built into the game.

▲ If you've seen the film, you will probably recognise this as the cryo-claw where Stallone is cryogenically frozen. In the game it's controlled by the gun handle grips.

YOB'S MAILBAG

UUNNGHHH! UUUURRGHHH! Hang on, I feel something moving. One last push and it might drop. Hold on. No, it's too much. The strain is too great. No! I can't give up! Come on now, one last push. YES! And with an almighty plop, another log of letters arrives for YOB'S MAILBAG. If you can match my wit and wisdom, or just want to know about games, then loosen off your best efforts in the direction of: CAUTION: THIS LETTER'S A BIT CACK, YOB'S MAILBAG, COMPUTER AND VIDEO GAMES, PRIORITY COURT, 30-32 FARRINGDON LANE, LONDON EC1R 3AU. Remember, there's a jobstastic ONE HUNDRED POUNDS for the best letter of the lot, and sweet fart-all for the rest of you.

A CULTURAL DESERT

Dear YOB,

The legendary man returns (Omar Elhaj Omar). First: could you arrange this games from the best - Mortal Kombat 2, Super Streetfighter II, World Heroes 2, Fatal Fury Special 2. When this games come out on Super NES: (Tiny Toon 2, Rocket Knight)? Second: I think Street Of Rage 2 better than 3 (Music in 2 best and string and graphics excellent but 3...!!!!? I want your opinion! Is Deniz and Pk drinking something when they gives 85 overall for Tournament Fighter? After you print this letter and offend me I will tell you 'even Homer sometimes nude. Think about this.' Yob, you will understand when the sun sets from the North. OMAR ELHAJ OMAR Sultanate Of Oman

YOB: Mortal Kombat 2 best of lot, you find? It am miles ahead Super Streetfighter 2, this a bit boring now being. Still, better than World Heroes 2, which still good, and Fatal Fury Special much better. Clear this is to you now? 2. Both will be fulfilled before the setting of the full moon from the East. I think you're am right on Streets Of Rage 2, much puzzlement that you actually make some sense, though. Deniz law unto himself. Me not know what him think of, but I say Tournament should get 90 per cent. And Rik has an 'R' in it, but the 'P' is silent. Consider wise words of one who knows: him who live in desert must wear trousers, not skirt, or much sand up the bum be getting quickly.

HELP ME DO A BANK JOBBIE

Dear YOB,

Please could you print a picture of me trying to rob a bank and making a balls up? Thanks.

ANTHONY GAUKROGER Halifax

YOB: Let this be a lesson to you kids.

You might have a sawn-off shotgun, bala-clava mask, striped T-shirt and a bag marked SWAG, but if you are unfortunate enough to come from Halifax and are blessed with a surname which sounds like the mating call of an ostrich on heat, you can forget a life of crime.

I KNOW EVERYTHING, ME

Dear YOB,

First of all, I know you don't like people who show off — so I'm going to do just that. I own a 486 PC, a SNES, a Game Boy and a Neo Geo. And they're the best in the market (each in their own category, of course). The PC wipes the floor with the Amiga (Ahem — YOB!), the SNES is tons better than the Mega-CD (Ahem, ahem — YOB.), and the Neo Geo — well, I just can't find words to describe this wonderful piece of equipment (Cough, splutter, phlegm, gob, spat, YOB.).

In Issue 142 your answer to Stephen Piarro's letter made it clear the Geo isn't your favourite console, and I presume the rest of the CVG team aren't that thrilled about it since there hasn't been a review of a Neo Geo game in your mag for ages. Why? If you really don't think the Geo is worth the bother, you should have your head checked!

Now before you start insulting me and telling me how limited the Geo is in terms of game styles, let me tell you that people only buy one for two reasons: fighting and shooting games. And don't you dare tell me Streetfighter Turbo is better than Samurai Showdown or Fatal Fury Special — although it will be, when they're converted to the SNES! Agreed, Turbo is the best game on the SNES, well, it has been for a long time, but now there's Dragon Ball Z Action Game 2, but how many other SNES fighting games can compete with it? I can't think of one (not even Mortal Kombat or Turtles V come close).

And what about shooting games? All right, there are a lot of good shooting games on the SNES like UN Squadron, Arxelay and recently R-Type 3, but what are they compared to View Point on the Neo Geo? So, you can say that SNK's little marvel is too limited when it comes to game variety, but in terms of beat-'em and shoot-'em-ups no other system beats it. What's more, the Geo is going to get even bigger — SNK is working on new high-memory cartridges which will allow for games up to 330 megs. But that's not all: a completely new console called the Neo Star is being developed featuring a 32-bit RISC processor, CD-ROM drive, VR headset, the works!

Don't get me wrong. I'm not saying every other system is crap — I'm only suggesting you should not just ignore certain systems because they're too expensive. If you do, then why are you still reviewing PC games? I admit you can do more with the PC than play games, but that is an endless discussion. All I want is info on Neo Geo games. CHRISTOF ROEYAERT Moen, Belgium

YOB: I decided to print this because it contains a lot of questions you lot have been asking about the PC debate, the next generation of consoles and so on. First of all, this contestant makes a number of mistakes: we think the Neo is a fine machine and we cover every game released for the machine. Trouble is, there aren't too many of them and a fair few of the games are wildly overpriced cack.

The beat-'em-ups are the exception to this rule, and anyone who knows anything about consoles is fully aware that the Neo is the console to have for this type of game. However, this expensive machine is in serious danger of being completely written off by the next generation of consoles — and all the planned bolt-ons under the sun won't save it.

You've rambled on about the SNES (you're wrong, by the way — Dragon Ball Z 2 is crap) and PC, but not to mention the threat hanging and Saturn waiting in the wings from Sega and Nintendo's two machines (VR32 and Project Reality) in the offing, the future's looking bleak for every machine you describe. Instead of banging off smug letters about all the kit you've got, why not make some sort of intelligent statement about the future of hardware. What do the rest of you think? Write in and I might even dole out some cash to the best letter of the lot.

DAZED AND CONFUSED

Dear YOB,

The first thing I am going to say is that I have seen you going into a pub with John Major. An hour later you came out and he walked off and you got into your W-reg Lada and drove off. You must like your car because it had leather seats, alloy wheels and a new paint job. Your car must be your pride and joy. By the way, is John Major your best friend? One more thing: do you own an Atari 2600?

R DEAN Manchester

PS Do you support Swindon Town?

YOB: Hmm. Your therapy doesn't seem to be working, so let's play a new game. You go back and hide in the cage and I'll tell you when to come out.

JUST A LITTLE CD

Dear YOB,

You are an insignificant pile of llama cack, so answer my questions if you can manage to remember where your hands are.

DANIEL HODGKINS Haworth, W Yorks

1. Is it true that Mortal Kombat 2 is coming out on CD-1.

YOB: Now where did you hear a thing like that?

2. Is Super Don Quixote coming out on CD-1?

YOB: You don't actually own a CD-1, do you? Oh dear. Welcome to The Interactive World Of Nothing Much At All.

3. How do the people at CVG put up with you drooling all the time?

YOB: Simple. They hide me in the corner and wheel me out every time the bloke from Phillips comes round.

4. What is your favourite banned? (Probably Take That).

YOB: I've got lots of favourites. Racing on the motorway and constructing thermonuclear bombs in the back garden are two which spring to mind.

5. How many brain cells do you currently own?

YOB: Is it just me, or now that they've closed all the coal pits is Yorkshire actually worth keeping any more? I mean, what's left apart from cloth caps and Last Of The Bloody Summer Wine?

FRANKLY, I'M A BIT STUPID

Dear YOB,

You git! Anyway, enough of the pleasantries. Let's get down to business. My friend Andrew talks cack all the time, so could you sort out his lies from the facts. He said that Sega and Nintendo are the same company. Hmmm. Another one was that he said Undertaker in Wrestlemania could do a tombstone priedriver. If you don't print this letter I will send Andrew round to tell you some of his lies.

ALAN RUSBY Kedington, Suffolk

YOB: Your friend Andrew may be a compulsive liar, but he does have one thing going for him: at least he knows how to wind-up a brain-dead cretin like you.

I'LL TAKE THIS BLEEDER

Dear YOB,

In Issue 150 on the Coming Soon bit of the mag there's a bit on Tie-Fighter. On one of the pictures there's a man who is blue - this man is Grand Admiral Thrawn who is only in the new Star Wars books. Does this mean that Tie-Fighter is set in the new books, five years after Return Of The Jedi? Please answer.

PETER HUTCHINSON Runcorn, Cheshire

YOB: I'm sorry, but I've got better things to do. My backside has started to itch and must be scratched quickly. Try not to still be here when I return.

RICHARD SAUNDERS - EXPOSED!

Dear YOB,

My ex-friend says that he has got Sonic The Hedgehog on his Super Nintendo and that he bought it from Japan. Please could you tell him he's a lying little tortoise poo. Please could you also print this message: Richard Saunders (who wrote to you in issue 149) you are a hippo's fart with about as much brains as Paul Rand (The editor - Yob.) and if I ever see you I will shove my sister's curling tongs right up your backside.

DAVID RICHARDSON

Nottingham

YOB: Remember to pull them out of your own first. These pathetic attempts to turbocharge your brain are bound to end in failure.

PRIDE!

FIGHTING TALK

Dear YOB,

First let me congratulate you on the fine job you all do. Thanks for the Mortal Kombat 2 moves in Issue 149. Now can you please answer the following for me to your fullest ability? TIM NECKLEN Leicester.

1. Do you prefer MK2 or SSF2?

YOB: 1. MK2.

2. Do you think SSF2 is even worth switching on?

YOB: I'd rather play it than sit here answering drivel like this.

3. Do you prefer MK2 or Virtua Fighters?

YOB: MK2. Virtua Fighters may look good, but there's not much depth and the excitement soon turns to boredom after a few plays.

4. Has a release date and price been set for MK2 on the Mega Drive yet?

YOB: September 9.

5. Will MK2 come out on Mega Drive or Mega-CD first?

YOB: Mega Drive.

6. Would you recommend getting a Mega CD or waiting for Saturn?

YOB: Wait for Saturn. DO NOT BUY A MEGA-CD UNLESS THE MAN IN THE SHOP THREATENS TO SHOOT YOU. EVEN THEN, TRY BEFORE YOU BUY...

7. Do you agree that G*****M***** is a sad man?

YOB: Seeing as it hero worships some fat old astronomer with a metal toothbrush sticking out of his ear, I'd say so.

MULTIMEDIA MORONERY

Dear YOB,

I am writing to you concerning the multimedia 'super machines' which you comprehensively covered in the supplement What Home Entertainment? which came with Issue 149 of CVG. While the technical specifications of these new consoles are amazing, I fear that they may fall flat on their faces.

Take the Sega Mega-CD as a prime example. It was touted as the next generation of computer gaming. However, it has largely faded into obscurity in the short space of one year because the software produced did not live up to the machine's high standard. However, with the companies behind these machines taking them seriously and pumping millions into the development I hope my fears will be proved wrong. A machine, though, is only as good as its software, and therefore just as much time should be dedicated to providing an interesting and varied software base.

My view is that this type of machine will eventually take over from computers and consoles, but only by trial and error. What do you think?

THOMAS-ALAN MURPHY Redgate, Limerick

YOB: So you're saying that these Japanese companies are pumping billions of yen into machines they know are crapper than your sad name. No, it makes perfect sense, it's much the same way your parents have invested a fortune bringing you up. Do you really think that companies are wasting their time deliberately developing crap because they think it's a laff?

CD's already proved itself as viable on PC - just look at games like Rebel Assault and Sam & Max Hit The Road. We've seen some top-secret PlayStation games which will make your puny brain explode when you see them. Film-quality graphics and fully interactive gameplay all running off CD. Then you've got the Saturn which will bring with it near-perfect arcade conversions. Fair enough, CD has had its teething troubles, but what do you expect from a new format? You obviously haven't played any games which can only work on CD, have you? So I suggest you get yourself down your local computer shop and check out some of the CD games on offer, then come back and tell me how wrong you were.

I'M A MORTAL WOMBAT

Dear YOB,

I am a Mortal Kombat 2 fan and I want you to answer my questions about MK2.

1. Where can you buy a MK2 arcade machine?

YOB: You have to go to the coin-op distributors.

If memory serves, MK2 is distributed by Deith Leisure, London and they are in the phone book.

2. How much will it cost?

YOB: Between £6,000 and £8,000.

3. Will MK2 be released on Jaguar or on 3DO?

YOB: Not that I know, though there's an MK clone being prepared for the Jag.

4. Is MK2 better than Streetfighter 2?

YOB: Seeing as the Streetfighter genre is now as much fun as a poo in a pillar box, I'd say so.

5. What rating would you give MK2?

YOB: About 92% 93 if I was feeling generous.

6. It is said that each character has Fatalities and a Babality (the person turns into a baby) and also a Friendship Fatality. Is this true?

YOB: If you don't know this by now, you might as well live in Cobham. Of course there are Friendships, which involve the victorious fighter giving gifts to his or her vanquished foe. The programmers thought it would be a laugh to put it in, and they were right

PS Answer my questions or I'll bribe my friends not to buy your magazine.

CARL BONDE Cobham, Surrey

YOB: PS I'm sure those two or three people will make all the difference.

Whatever your sporting penchant, there's a game for you here as we pick out the best, and some of the also-rans, in the competition for the best sports game ever...

Apart from our once-a-week kick around in Regents Park, we here at CVG are what you might call athletically challenged – preferring the arduous task of competition pork pie eating to try and get fit. This is why we like sports games so much. You see, they let you say in all honesty 'oh yeah, I was on the tennis court for three hours yesterday'. But to make it sound convincing you need a decent game, which is almost like playing the real thing, but far less strenuous. So if while watching the World Cup, Wimbledon, or the USA PGA Open you feel inspired to take part in some sporting action then fine; but knowing this country's inclement weather you'll probably have to settle for a bit of indoors computer-and-video game sporting instead. And you don't want to be playing any old crap, hence why we've compiled six pages of the most notable, and the best, sports games available. So what are you waiting for sports fans... read on.

■ MARIO LEMIEUX HOCKEY
■ MEGA DRIVE
■ SEGA

Trying to out-do EA's superb NHL series proved too great a task, as Sega found out when it released this. In its own right this is a decent ice hockey game, with plenty of features and fast-paced action, but put it up against the EA games and it loses out in almost every area. The playability's weak in comparison and the control system isn't as fluid. A decent attempt that doesn't make the grade.

■ MICHAEL JORDAN IN FLIGHT

■ EA

Bringing all of its technical wizardry into play, EA created a visually stunning 3D basketball game with its Michael Jordan licence. Rather than take the arcade-orientated approach of console basketball sims, EA created something a bit more up-market. The player animations are digitised from the great man himself, and the action's 3D, with panning camera-style views. For all the flashy graphics, the gameplay is not quite what it should be and fails to match up to many of the console offerings.

tennis tour circuit. Although it doesn't look like much, it's incredibly playable. The control system is easy to get to grips with, letting you produce all manner of shots with minimal effort. As with most sports games the two-player mode really stands out, especially since this doesn't suffer from small player sprites at the far end of the court – which afflicts many tennis sims. Not the best Mega Drive tennis game, but very close to it.

● £39.99

■ MUHAMMED ALI'S BOXING
■ MEGA DRIVE
■ VIRGIN

Punch up fans, don't settle for anything less than a scrap with the best – which is exactly what this game gives you. As well as taking on Ali (before his flabby Seventies phase) you're involved in the best boxing game on the Mega Drive. It's feature packed with one of the best control systems in any boxing game. Best of all is the 3D ring, which rotates as the players brawl their way around it. There's no need to try anything else, this is the best boxing game money can buy.

● £44.99

■ NICK FALDO'S GOLF
■ CD32
■ GRANDSLAM

Taking the title of best CD32 golf game by default (like, because there are no others, right), this is actually more than a half-decent game. Being on CD, it features plenty of real sound and digitised graphics, although that doesn't go far enough to make up for the faults in the gameplay. It's nowhere near the standard set by PGA on other formats, but for the moment this is the only golf game on this system, so you'll just have to make do.

● £24.99

■ FIFA SOCCER
■ MEGA DRIVE/SNES
■ EA

With this game EA has redefined the standards for graphics and presentation in computer football games. EA has really hit the mark with the gameplay too, although it just falls short when compared to Imagineer's Kick Off 3. One of the main complaints is that you don't always feel as though you're in control of your players. Still, that's no reason to overlook one of the best football games ever, especially since Kick Off 3 now won't be coming out until September.

● £49.99

■ NO SECOND PRIZE
■ AMIGA
■ THALION

This vastly underrated bit of motorbike course racing is one of the fastest sports sims ever. The graphics are relatively simple, but action is unmatched in any other bike game. As such the Amiga's mouse proves a better controller than a standard joystick. If it's speed you're after there isn't much that can top this, although what we want to see is a texture mapped version for the 32-bit systems.

■ HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP
■ GAME GEAR
■ SEGA

Bizarre as it seems, this is, as you've probably managed to suss from the title, a boxing game for the Game Gear. It's certainly an impressive 'attempt' at bringing this sport to a handheld, but unfortunately all it is really is an 'attempt', since it falls short of being playable and lingers around the 'nice try but...' category. If you're after a fighting more than a sports game, you'd be better off with Mortal Kombat.

Speedball: violent, fast, ► Americanised Bitmap Bros futuritiesports game. Very playable and very good.

■ SLAP SHOT
■ MASTER SYSTEM
■ SEGA

Not to be outdone by the Mega Drive with its multitude of EA NHL games, the Master System boasts a nifty ice hockey game of its own. It doesn't have the options of its 16-bit rivals, but that doesn't stop it being an excellent action-orientated slap shot fest – and the best ice hockey game on 8-bit. Because of its relative simplicity and the opposing computer teams, which aren't the brightest things ever to grace a sports game, this game is best in two-player mode.

Basketball games don't come any bigger than this. Converted from the most successful coin-op ever, NBA JAM is simply the best bit of basketballing money can buy. Dozens of moves, fluid action and sharp graphics all contribute to this piece of sporting excellence. Even the Game Gear version manages to hold its own against the rather stunning 16-bit versions. A near-perfect conversion of the world's best basketball game.

■ 3DO
■ EA

The 3DO's first, and currently only, sports game is a decent enough conversion of the original Mega Drive Madden's sensation. Naturally, being on CD and 32-bit, EA couldn't get away with a port, so all the graphics are digitised and the action's interspersed with generous amounts of FMV. However, the control system is the same as the Mega Drive's, which is a good thing since that's what made the game so accessible. It doesn't play as well as the 16-bit versions, but with a shortage of decent 3DO software this is a welcome launch.

Big graphics, flashy sound, neat presentation and landmines on the pitch can't prevent the fact that this isn't that good a game. It's easy to be drawn in by the visuals and the 'comedy' touches, which work well and look excellent. But once you've actually played a few games the shine wears off and you find yourself playing what is a very average baseball game. With this kind of price tag you've got to think carefully about your purchases, and this is one you can live without.

■ RUGBY
■ AMIGA
■ DOMARK

Very much in the Kick Off mould, Domark's Rugby proved what could be done with a sport most people considered impossible to convert to computers. It sticks faithfully to Union rules, although with the omission of rucks. Domark also proved that rugby isn't everyone's ideal game, which is why this received very mixed reviews. You really need to appreciate the sport to appreciate the game, and if that's the case you'll enjoy this.

Despite the fact this game's knocking on a bit, the hi-res 256-colour graphics are excellent and it has all the features of every other version of PGA. It's cheaper than a set of clubs and you don't have to have any golfing ability to play it.

■ MEGA DRIVE
■ EA

Out of the three Mega Drive John Madden's games, this is the best. Mainly because '94 is almost identical to it and you'll probably find this one cheaper. American football isn't everybody's ideal sport, but the execution in this game is so faultless it's accessible to everyone. Again, like many of the games here, it's the two-player mode that makes it stand out, especially when you hammer your opponent so hard they have to bring the ambulance on.

Little Computer People, and instead of producing an arcade-type game, he opted to make this as realistic as possible. As such it features massive player graphics and excellent animation. It doesn't always look as though you're hitting the ball though, which is an annoying bug. Not quite 'Amazing', but it's still one of the better tennis games available.

■ INDYCAR RACING
■ PC
■ VIRGIN

Recent winner of our driving game Group Test, this is the best motor sport sim money can buy. You need a fairly powerful PC to run it, since it's loaded with detail and the graphics are mindblowing. All this exacts a high price in processing power, but the result is one of the most realistic driving games ever.

gave the theme a twist, bunged in some monsters and a rink full of holes. The result is a moderately playable game, but not as violent or funny as it should have been. After a few hours of play it becomes dull, and you realise that there really isn't that much to do. Stick to EA Hockey.

JIMMY CONNORS' PRO TENNIS TOUR

■ SNES
■ UBI SOFT

Almost matching the excellent Super Tennis for playability is Jimmy Connors. The graphics and presentation are better, and while the gameplay is superb, it falls short of Tonkin House's offering thanks to slower action and a trickier shot selection system. We know this isn't the latest version, but it's the one we regard as the best. It has all the features of the original, including the fight sequences and blood which were cut out of the '94 version. It's slightly faster than the first game, and has excellent features like 'super shots': these shatter the glass that's supposed to protect the crowd. Basically it's the perfect ice hockey sim, unrivalled on any format. ● £49.99

WORLD BEATER

■ SENSIBLE SOCCER
■ VIRGIN
■ MEGA DRIVE/SNES/AMIGA

OK, so it's a footy game. But there can be very few people who've played this that can criticise us for choosing it. Sensible Soccer is the ultimate chunk of computer sports action. It combines speed with incredibly inventive gameplay that requires skill over joystick thrashing power. Your team can be customised to suit you, from the formation they play in to the player's names. The computer teams pack a decent challenge and it's almost unrivalled in two-player mode. It accommodates passing tactics, sad long ball merchants and jammy gits who like to dribble the ball from their penalty area then walk it into the opposing goal.

It might look like crap but that doesn't detract from this being head-and-shoulders over all current sports. There are plenty of challengers this summer, but at the moment this reigns supreme.

STEVE MERRETT, EDITOR MEAN MACHINES SEGA

With both Mortal II and Super SF debuting on Mega Drive this month, I reckon I could have anyone right now. Both are stunning conversions, but I have to say that MKII stuffs Capcom's World Warriors this time round. The problem with MK was it wasn't instinctive to play, but such problems are long gone and the 12 characters are now very controllable, and the moves a doddle to pull off. A vintage Mega Drive month, topped up by a quick blast against the evil Empire in a game of Rebel Assault.

CHRISTINA ERSKINE, EDITOR PC REVIEW

If there's a bandwagon going around, you can guarantee that computer games will leap on it. So this month we've had the World Cup, and so we've got new footy games, updated footy games and we've got old footy games that frankly should have been left in peace. Out of the 50-odd footy games on all formats coming out this summer, nine of them are World Cup-specific PC titles. IT makes you want to weep for the good old days when the PC used to stand aloof from all this sort of thing.

TIM BOONE, EDITOR NINTENDO MAGAZINE SYSTEM

It's been a long time coming but the wait has been worth it. No I'm not referring to Super Street Fighter II, I'm talking about Stunt Race FX - Nintendo's amazing new Super FX title (see page 84). It's powerful, extremely playable and honestly the most exciting game to surface this year. CES proved Nintendo is still the most powerful video-game company in existence, with Donkey Kong Country for the Super NES displaying impossible visuals and sounds. Also Ultra 64 - previously Project Reality - is fully operational and looking totally scary. Arcades as we know them look set to die when this machine is released late next year. I hate to sound biased, but, for the moment at least, Nintendo definitely rules!

PAUL RAND, EDITOR OF CVG

You'd think that I'd be going cock-a-hoop over Super Street Fighter II this month - but nay. It's the awesome Stunt Race FX that has got me glued to the videogame screen this month, with its top graphics and speedy gameplay. It's actually quite refreshing to see a SNES game that isn't a platformer or a beat-'em-up, and even better when it's taking advantage of new technology. Speaking of which, I can't wait to see Mega Drive 32 in all its glory - with games such as Virtua Star Wars and Acclaim's batch of fab graphic extravaganzas on the way, the future of gaming really does look very rosy indeed.

SIMON 'THE HERO' BYRON, EDITOR OF THE ONE

The arrival of Summer usually heralds a dry season for games - but not so on the Amiga thankfully! Renegade's Ruff 'n' Tumble is the hottest of the lot, combining old-fashioned playability with excellent graphics and sound. It may not be the most original game ever, but it does what it does brilliantly. And most importantly, it's fun. And much the same could be said for Ocean's Kid Vicious. OK, so it's a platformer, but it's doing things with a 1Mb Amiga 500 you would not believe - and it's a right laugh to boot. And we thought platform games were passé, well think again.

IS IT REALLY MAGIC

I'm very interested in movies on CD and currently own a 486 PC. I'm looking to buy a ReelMagic card so that I can watch movies by using my PC. A friend, though, has suggested going for a Philips CD-i instead, which costs about the same amount of cash. Save my sanity please, which one should I go for?

Tom Green, Manchester

Seeing as you already have a PC it may be a good idea to upgrade your current system rather than buying a totally new one, ie the CD-i. But what are the advantages of a Sigma Design ReelMagic card over a CD-i? Well, if you already have a sound card you can pick up A ReelMagic Lite card for around £249 (plus VAT), whereas a CD-i with FMV is going to set you back about £550. Deniz reckons you get better quality with a CD-i, but our pals on PC Review have no complaints about the ReelMagic's FMV. The main drawback with Sigma's card seems to be that it will only run Philips CD-i movies if you have a certain kind of CD-ROM drive, so check the small print. Philips is a big company though, and it is putting a lot of money behind getting plenty of game and film titles on to the market, whereas Sigma isn't quite got the same muscle, but there are over 20 new releases planned over the next three months, with GameTek planning a further 30.

■ ARCADE

ART OF FIGHTING 2

Is this better than Streetfighter 2? Who cares? What we all know is that this is one fierce beat-'em-up that deserves a few of your silvers next time you're passing an arcade. To get extra VFMs and to make you look completely smart in front of your mates you might want to try out these finishing moves. Remember you'll need a complete rage gauge before you can pull them off.

The wide screen mode facility on the Sony PlayStation will enable those who have said

TVs to make the most of their big screens. You will not need a wide screen TV to use the console though. This new Philips model (28W632A) is the cheapest at £1,000!

IMPORTS ON SNES

I've a SNES and I've noticed most of my games are in letterbox format. I also hear the new consoles, like the Sony PlayStation, will have a wide-screen mode. Is this the same thing, and will I need a wide-screen TV? Ken Cook, Wales

If your SNES games are showing in letterbox format that's because you're have NTSC import games. It is possible to convert to PAL if you have the correct adaptor, then you end up slowing down the game. As for the PlayStation, yes it will have a wide-screen mode, and so might Sega's Saturn. You will not need a wide-screen TV, but if you do have a wide-screen it'll mean you get a full screen without having to distort the original image.

PC OR NOT PC?

I have owned an Amiga 500 for the past six years now, and I suddenly feel that I have had my head stuck in the sand and that far better games systems have passed me by. Now I want to get a PC, but I don't know exactly where to start. I like ultra-fast simulations, though, I don't want to waste money on a top end PC which I'm only going to use to play games on. Also, what are the advantages of getting a CD-ROM drive as well? I've got around £1,500 and I am desperate for advice.

Mr P O'Brian, Basingstoke.

You've certainly made the right decision going for a PC if you're a simulation fan. The problem is that if you want speed you have to pay for it. With £1,500 you should be looking towards an Intel 486DX2 50 or 66Mhz (don't get fooled into buying a slower 486SX). This should have Local Bus sockets (VESA) and be fitted with a Local Bus graphics board (not IDE). Next, make sure you get a multi-sync monitor (so that you can use high resolution modes). Ensure you get a hard disk with no less than 180Mb and try for 8 rather than 4 Megs of RAM. Ask about the controller board inside, make sure it has at least a 256k cache and supports multiple hard disks. If you're going for a sound board too, get a 16-bit one instead of an 8-bit (although most support both).

As for CD-ROM drives, the main advantage is storage space. A CD can hold around 650Mb of data which means bigger more lavish games. TFX (flight simulation) from OCEAN also happens to be one of the best CD games around. If you do go for CD-ROM make sure it is double-speed (300k plus transfer rate) and that it has an access time under 250ms. Prices range from £150 - £500. Good luck!

If you're a flight sim fan (and there's none better than TFX on PC CD-ROM, pictured here) then you'll be wanting to get yourself a decent PC with a CD-ROM drive.

THE BLOKE AT DIXONS SAID

I've just bought a new design Mega Drive, but I can't find the headphone socket. How on earth am I supposed to connect up to my hi-fi? Dixons told me it's not possible. Kenry Peters, Lancs.

The chap at Dixons obviously doesn't know what he's talking about. All you need to do is connect your Mega Drive to your TV then use your TV headphone socket or other output. But the best way is to get a special lead which splits the SCART signal into video and audio. They cost around £12.99. Contact Machine Shack on 081-677 8062.

If you've a Mega Drive II then you'll have to use the headphone socket on your television.

ROBOCOP VS
TERMINATOR

Top blasting action is guaranteed in this ace blaster from Virgin. Trouble is the action is so intense that it can be a little difficult to find time to check out those hidden rooms. Worry no more though, 'cos thanks to 'someone' - who even went to the trouble of drawing us diagrams - we would name him/her but they forgot to tell us who the hell they are!

On mission two on the second bar, once Robocop falls off the bar press left and once he cannot go any further do a diagonal jump left. When you have done this press up, you should now have entered the secret office level where you can get two lives and a random bonus power-up at the end-of-the-level.

Secret street and office levels. As soon as you start mission five there is a bar directly above Robocop. Move slightly to the right, jump on to the chairs and then on to the bar. Now press left and you will go through the wall at the start! You should now be in the secret office. Kill everything around you and then go in the door. Kill everything in this room too, then walk to the far left and then behind the wall. Now press up and you will enter a door and be in the secret street level with three bonus random power-ups and one extra life.

Secret remote base

On mission seven, after you have gone down the fourth ladder, walk left until you hit the wall. Now do a diagonal jump left through the wall. You should now have gone through the wall.

HELP!

PROBLEM PAD

I've got a 3D0 and I'm fed up with it's crap control pad which forces me to press really hard if I want to move diagonally. Is there anything I can do to it, or are there any alternative pads I could buy?
Jason Web, London

Not the most popular new Joypad is the one supplied with the Panasonic Multiplayer. Read below for a handy tip on how to improve it.

Our Art Editor, Julie, knows exactly how you feel after she snapped a nail on one of the blighters. While there are no alternative controllers available over here, we found that if we used a small screwdriver to turn the screws on the bottom by half a rotation, then the pad is far easier to use.

Virtua Fighter is certain to be one of the releases on Sega's MD32...

MD32 RUMOURS AROUND

I've heard that the Mega Drive 32 will be compatible with the Mega-CD, is this true or what, and when can I get hold of one?

Richard Chantler, Kent

Any add-on device has to be compatible with other add-ons when you're a console manufacturer, so the answer is yes. With the custom chips of the MD32 (which looks like a mushroom actually) the Mega-CD could turn out to be a very powerful system. Sega isn't telling yet if there are any new Mega-CD titles in development for the MD32, but there's bound to be some impressive stuff. The MD32 should be out before Christmas for under £200

... and here's a pic of what the brute is going to look like.

GAME TIPS

Continue left and then up the ladder and into the door. You should now be in the base!

MY GAMES ARE CRAP

I've got a Neo Geo which I reckon is still the best machine for arcade quality games at home. Unfortunately, the games are very expensive and I was silly enough to buy a game without trying it first. I returned it within three days after deciding I didn't like it, but the chap said it was policy not to give refunds and offered an exchange. I wouldn't mind but there's nothing worth exchanging it for. Can I demand a refund?

Neville Smith,
Northampton

Unfortunately you can't ask for a refund in this situation because you should have tried out the game first. You are only entitled to a refund if the goods have been sold to you under false claims. CVG will be reviewing all new Neo Geo games in the future so this should help you make the right

A Colour Booster will enhance your PC Engine.

ENGINE NEEDS TINKERING WITH

Recently I was given a PC Engine, but I can never seem to get a good, clear image on screen. The colours in the games all seem to be rather washed out. Have you any ideas why this is the case?

Leon Braddock, Birmingham

The PC Engine was not designed for an RGB system. No one we've spoken to has been able to convert the machine internally so that it works with an RGB system; so the solution is to get hold of a Colour Booster. This is simply a SCART lead which includes a special picture-improving circuit available from most importers. Don't pay more than about £20 for one though.

WOLFENSTEIN 3D

A few tippets now for that great game Wolfenstein 3D from DB yet again. For a unlimited ammo and weapons, press R on control pad 2, then START, then PAUSE, then R, UP, B and A. Not only that but if you press B, UP, B, A, then invincibility is all yours. If you want to exit the current level you're on then press UP, B, R, B. Got that? Good. Finally, here's one for the rather disorientated Wolfenstein players out there. Try entering A, UP and B for a mighty useful map.

EASY PC GAMES

The Game Wizard Pro is probably the hottest piece of cheating software around on PC that doesn't require additional hardware. It works as a pop-up menu from within any game and scans the memory for cheats of all sorts. The best thing we've discovered, though, is a little option which actually speeds up games by allowing them to use the maths co-processor in your machine (DX type PCs). This makes Doom so fast on a 486-33mhz that it is almost unplayable! It works particularly well with vector games like X-Wing. You can get a shareware version of Game Wizard on BBS (0101 416 497 8337 or 0101 416 492 0157).

SOUND OFF

NuReality is a CD-sized little gizmo which takes the sound input from your Sega or Nintendo, processes it and churns it out using the award-winning SRS 3D sound system for surround sound type effects from two of your speakers. We've been quite impressed with it. Contact your nearest importer to see if they stock it.

VIDEO JUKEBOX

One of the most crazy ideas for a peripheral lately has been this rack which holds six Sega, SNES and Jaguar carts, allowing you to play them without having to plug them directly into a Mega Drive. Surely no-one could be that lazy! The system is only available in the USA at present for $50, so let's hope it stays that way.

RAM INTO MEGA-CD

Sega will shortly be releasing a much needed RAM cart for the Mega-CD. Apart from the obvious benefits of being able to save more games, this should now enable bigger RPG-type games to be produced for the machine. Check with your import dealer for release dates.

SEGA LOCK-ON

Sega's newest piece of hardware takes a more virtual form of gameplay. Sega Lock-On comprises a gun and a headset which triggers when shot at. Obviously the idea comes from those laser tag games you can go along to now, with the idea being to try

See conditions.

"You wanted a decent 'swap club' and now you've been given one, USE IT!!!"

TELEPHONE: (0452) 382098. Tell us (A) your membership number (if you have been given one), (B) the console in question, (C) what game/s you have to exchange, (D) what games you are looking for (we usually need 4 choices for each game you want to exchange).

POST: The Games Exchange, 17 Brunswick Square, Gloucester GL1 1UG. Write down your membership number in all cases (if you have one), your name and address, the game/s you are sending, at least 4 choices of game wanted (for each game sent in), the amount enclosed and have it signed by a guardian if you are under 18. Package the game sensibly enclosing the relevant details above and a cheque/P.O. for the required amount made payable to The Games Exchange.

WHAT'S A 'FAIR' EXCHANGE? We consider many factors like the age (release date), value (second hand value), magazine opinion, popularity, usability and a good few other factors like what the game is really like. The situation constantly changes as games are received and new games released, so no set groups or bands are maintained. A sensible judgement will usually suffice.

PINBALL FANTASIES

We're always telling you what the tips we provide you with do, so we're going to make a change for once by not telling you what these Pinball Fantasies cheats do.

Typing in TECH, GREET, TSP and GABRIEL will result in... ooh, nearly let the cat out of the bag then. Type the

CREMOLA for 10 lives (hmm)
VISION for 20 lives (mmm!)
TOUGH GUY will make you invincible
OLDENEMY gives you an infinite amount of time
ALCENTO will give you 99 items if you choose to type it in KICKASS for unlimited smart bombs - very handy BUMBLEBEE is to skip stages (by pressing the return key) codes in when you are looking at the table, rather than when you're actually playing. You may be pleasantly surprised, and then again you may not.

■ GAME BOY

CASTLEVANIA 2

To reach the last level and face Dracula himself on the Gameboy version of Castlevania 2, select Ball, Heart, Candle, Heart, and you'll be transported there instantly courtesy of VEG.

DYNABLASTER

Shall we tell you a little Dynablaster tip for the Game Boy, that will allow you to power up Linford Christie style? OK then, if you insist. As any upgrades collected are kept after continuing, keep on losing Dyna-blaster's lives until he is fully armed up then all you have to do is move him along to the next stage.

■ GAME GEAR

TERMINATOR

As soon as the Sega logo appears in Terminator for the Game Gear, hold down 2 and START, while rotating the direction pad clockwise until two numbers appear. For your efforts, you will be granted with a rather nifty level select. This one is courtesy of Robert Campbell from Merseyside.

XTRAS

and blast your opponent before they do the same to you. There's only one gun per pack so you'll have to buy two to appreciate it, but that'll set you back £60 so it's probably not worth it. Contact Sega on 071-373 3000.

PC PADDING

Info-red joypads have never been much cop on the PC but now there's a new one on the scene which we're quite impressed with. Not only does it give you two six-button pads for it claims to work up to 40 feet away and is programmable to accommodate all games. The receiver end simply plugs into your joystick port, and it all runs economically off 2AAA batteries. Ring Blueport on 0908 277 007 for information.

MORTAL KOMBAT JUNK

How's this for duff American merchandise? This desktop Mortal Kombat beat-'em-up involves players bashing levers and switches to punch and kick their opponents (which are interchangeable). Unfortunately, you can't do any special moves and there's no gore, unless you pick up the game and throw it at your opponent's head. It's made by Tiger Electronics in the States.

FUMBLING CD-I FUN.

Anyone owning, or being recently blessed with, a CD-I will probably agree on the difficulty faced in playing action games with the supplied pad - it really does your thumb in. Just so you know though, there is an alternative pad available from Philips which does the job so much better and is far more durable. The Touchpad costs £24.99 from all CD-I outlets.

CHART ATTACK WITH

Football games dominate the charts this month, with US Gold's official world cup licence taking them straight into the all-formats top-spot. Otherwise it's a pretty mixed bag this month with no software house claiming overall control of the top 20.

ALL FORMATS TOP 20

1 ★
WORLD CUP
USA '94
MEGA DRIVE/SNES/
GAME GEAR
US Gold

It's World Cup time and football game's are selling by the truck load, and it's the official licence that takes the top spot.

2 ▲
FIFA SOCCER
MEGA DRIVE/SNES
EA/Ocean

Holding up well in the face of renewed competition, FIFA seen all off all but one challenger in its dash for the number one slot.

3 ★
KICK OFF 3
PC/AMIGA
Anco

It may have stormed the charts at number three, but Kick Off 3 isn't the best of the trio. Don't rush to part with your money.

4 ★
VIRTUA RACING
MEGA DRIVE
Sega

Virtua's hefty price tag hasn't prevented MD race freaks from picking it up, as it clocks in as the highest-format-specific game.

KEY:

▼ = Move down

5 ▼

WARIOLAND GAME BOY
Nintendo

Mario may be out of the frame, but Wario's still top-10 fodder. His debut game is one of the biggest selling handhelds cars of the year.

6 ★

INTERNATIONAL
AMIGA/PC
Mindscape

With its full complement of international squads, the Sensi bug has bitten again with the arrival of the World Cup.

7 ▼

WORLD CUP
STRIKER
SNES
Elite

And they say there are too many beat-'em-ups. World Cup Striker gives up the top slot and dives down the Top 10.

8 ▼

SIM CITY 2000
PC/MAC
Maxis

Despite struggling to keep in the Top 10, Sim City 2000 will soon be bolstered in the all-formats chart by an A1200 version.

9 ●

ARCADE POOL
AMIGA
Team-17

This budget game lets you take to the tables in true Fast Eddie style, and you don't get George C Scott breaking your thumbs either.

10*DOOM
PC
ID

It's one of our all time favourites and it's still holding up the Top 10 - which goes to show how hard (as in tough) it is.

AMIGA/PC
Virgin

As Sensi International scores a direct hit on the charts, the Sensible boys' warfare sim takes a drop.

12*NBA JAM
SNES/MEGA
DRIVE/GAME GEAR
Acclaim

It's had quite a phenomenal run, but it finally looks like Acclaim's mega basketball sim has its days numbered.

13*SONIC 3
MEGA DRIVE
Sega

You can't keep a good hedgehog down. Unless you splat it with your XR31.

14*SKIDMARKS
AMIGA
Acid

If you can stop laughing at the 'humorous' title, you'll find out that this is a rather topper race game.

15*ROCK 'N' ROLL RACING
SNES
Ocean

Even its arsenal of 70s heavy metal tracks isn't enough to prevent Rock 'n' Roll Racing going into reverse this month.

16*PAC ATTACK
SNES
Nintendo

We didn't like this, but someone out there obviously does. Pac Attack just isn't worth the money.

17*MAN UTD
AMIGA
Krisalis

OK, so it's more than a little like Sensi, but who cares when you've got a game this good?

18*ELFMANIA
AMIGA
Renegade

Those beat-'em-up starved Amiga owners are obviously flipping over Renegade's stylish combat game.

19*STAR TREK: JUDGEMENT RITES
PC/PC CD-ROM
Interplay

They're mouldy, they're old, but there's no stopping the original cast in their PC CD-ROM voice over spectacular.

20*MS PACMAN
GAME BOY
Nintendo

There's no fooling us you know, we're well aware this is just Pacman with a bow in his head, and this game isn't really worth the asking price. Money for old rope and no mistake.
