

TWILIGHT 2000

Twilight 2000 thrusts you into a dark but realistic vision of the aftermath of World War III. Radiation, famine and disease are rampant. The only luxury is survival itself.

Poland has been a battlefield for three years, devastated by brutal charges, frantic retreats and merciless tactics of the Warsaw Pact and NATO forces. Left in the wake of destruction are stockpiles of weaponry, explosives and military vehicles.

You and your squadron survived the initial holocaust. Now you face an even tougher challenge: to establish allies, gain territory and defeat an onslaught of marauders and military madmen determined to win a war the rest of the world lost.

The game allows control of one character while commanding a troup of 20. With 3D graphics featured when driving vehicles and overhead scaled maps
Twilight 2000 will really test your leadership skills.
The game will be available first on the PC with other 16-bit versions to follow from Microprose this autumn.

SPACE QUEST

Having met the Time Rippers in Space Quest V, Roger Wilco looks set to travel way back to his very first adventure – the Sarien Encounter.

Sierra will be releasing the new SCI version of Space Quest I in July. The game sees our Roger growing in stature from a lowly starship janitor to saviour of the world. During his exploits Roger will visit all manner of exotic locations such as the Bar on Ulance Flats and the Alien Base.

Available first on the PC, Space Quest I will feature stunning 256 colour, VGA graphics.

CODEMASTERS

Budget specialists the Code Masters has teamed up with Canadian firm Carmerica to launch a host of unlicensed NES games for the US.

There will be four different streams of games – Gold Series at $49.99, Silver Series costing $39.99 each, Rainbow Series priced at $29.99, and the Quattro Series coming in at $54.95. The first games to appear will be Micro Machines and The Fantastic Adventures of Dizzy on the Gold Series.

Other titles include Stunt Kids and MiG-29 (Silver) plus Bike Simulator and Barbarian (Rainbow). The Quattro games will follow a theme, such as sport or adventures, and will have four games on one cartridge.

It remains to be seen whether Code Masters avoids Nintendo's wrath with unauthorised games – if it does, look out for them in the UK fairly shortly.

EWIRA II

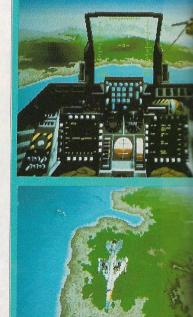

The Jaws of Cerberus is the second instalment in the adventures of horror Queen, Elvira.

The game begins at Black Widow Studios where Elvira is filming her next production.

As players

enter the studio they notice it is deserted and that the starlet is spooky old Victorian house, a maze of catacombs or a fog enshrouded gravevard

Evil creatures are fended off with either real-time physical combat or a wide array of magical spells. As players confront and communicate with each of the characters they may learn vital clues as to Flyira's whereabouts. Should a player be successful they will win the life of Elvira - fail and she will forever be trapped within the Jaws of Cerberus.

Elvira II: The Jaws of Cerberus will be available from Accolade for the PC and Amiga around Christmas time.

Following Prince William's unofficial crowning with a golf club, Nintendo supplied the injured heir with a Game Boy (complete with a golf game) to speed up his recovery. Apparently he's crazy about it.

In the year 2007 the global power structure has been shattered by debt and the thirst for precious oil. Bled dry by taxes, state after state has seceded - leaving the United States a fragmented shell of its former self. Japan and OPEC have become the major world powers and multinational corporations have supplanted countries as the supreme political entities.

As a Strike Commander you'll be responsible for an elite group of mercenaries combating a world of deceit and violence. You'll pilot a wide range of specialist aircraft from the lowly P38 to the F22 Lightning 2, as you engage rival squadrons.

Programmed by Chris Roberts, the name behind Wing Commander I and II, Origin's Strike Commander features the RealSpace 3D system. You'll fly six different aircraft over 20 missions against 20 different types of enemy aircraft.

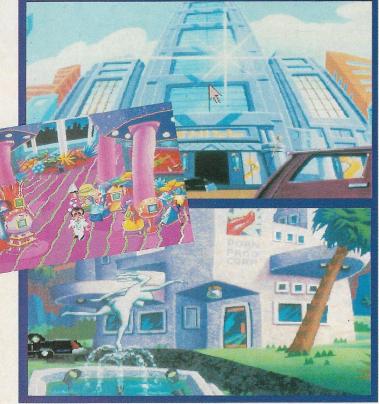

Strike Commander will initially be available on 386 PC compatibles with VGA graphics and sound cards. Judging from these screen shots it's going to be the best thing since the last best thing.

Sierra's lovable nerd is the star of three new games! First up is Larry 5 - Passionate Patti does a Little Undercover Work. Available in October on the PC, Larry 5 sees both Larry and Patti trying their hands at all new hilarious experiences.

Okay, so the first adventure may not have been the graphical masterpiece his latest adventure is, but after constantly moaning at Al Lowe, Larry has had his first series of exploits re-written with new improved SCI graphics. PC owners can relive Larry's early days in July.

Finally, for all you nerds out there, comes the Laffer Utilities, a side-splitting collection of non-productive pastimes. Learn how to efficiently waste more time in the office, preside over betting pools, spearhead birthday and holiday celebrations and even catalogue fave jokes. The Laffer Utilities promise to bring Larry even more fame and fortune.

LUXEMBOURG LINK

As a kid I remember crawling under the bed covers with my tranny and tuning in to 208 on the medium wave. With one ear out for my parents on the stairs and the other pressed close to my radio, I listened intently to the latest pop music as the reception whistled in and out.

OK, so I'm a bit of a crinkly, but Radio Luxembourg is still alive and kicking, and is now about to get into computer games. In an exclusive link-up with Games-X, Radio Luxembourg is broadcasting four one hour game shows during July.

Called the Games-X Games Show each program will feature reviews on a variety of different types of game and a Conquests of the Longbow - The Legend of Robin Hood should appear in August. Designed by Christy Marx, the name behind Sierra's Conquests of Camelot, the game will put the player in a world of romance and adventure in an age of daring and Take up arms with Robin Hood and the merry men of Sherwood Forest as you attempt to raise a king's ransom while trying to evade the cunning traps of the clever and infamous Sheriff of Nottingham.

Available initially for the PC and later on the Amiga and ST, Conquests of the Long Bow will feature all your favourite characters, including: Robin, Little John, Friar Tuck, Maid Marion, Richard the Lionheart, King John and the Sheriff.

LE CHUCK'S REVENGE

"Appearances can be deceptive" – so learns Guybrush Threepwood in his second high-seas adventure, Monkey Island II: Le Chuck's Revenge.

Having seemingly destroyed the evil ghost pirate, Le Chuck with an agitated bottle of root beer, Guybrush learns a harsh lesson in ghost disposal: carbonated beverages, though initially destructive, subsequently serve to put the fizz back into the phantom. Now, Le Chuck's back and, boy, is he mad!

Players will be able to select three unique skill levels at the beginning of the game. Each level features different puzzles, not just the same one made harder or simplified. Puzzles will also vary from game to game, adding to replayability.

Fans of the original Monkey Island can look forward to even more witty humour and the reappearance of some of their favourite characters: Stan, the ship salesman, now in a new profession, and Governor Marley, who holds the key to getting Guybrush out of his current predicament. The game also includes a cast of grog-guzzling characters and neverbefore visited, puzzle-packed Islands.

PC owners will be able to get their hands on Le Chuck's Revenge around October time. ST and Amiga owners will have to wait until after Christmas.

MEGA DRIVE CD

Sega last week launched its long awaited CD drive, the at the Japan Toy Fair. The machine is designed to be linked to the 16-bit console the Mega Drive. Price in Japan is ¥49,000, about £210.

It looks like it will reach the States in early 1992 and could arrive in the UK just in time for next Christmas.

Very little known is about the drive and especially how much software support will be given to the machine, but it is understood that there are 27 licensees for the Mega CD.

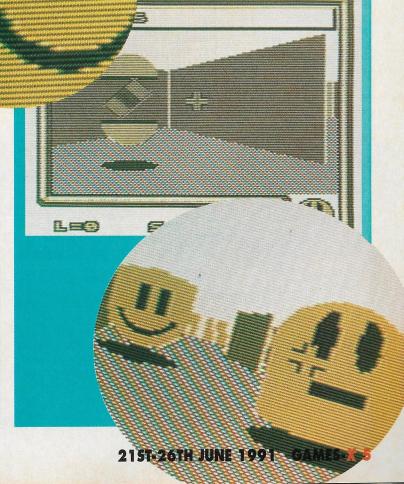

FACEBALL 2000

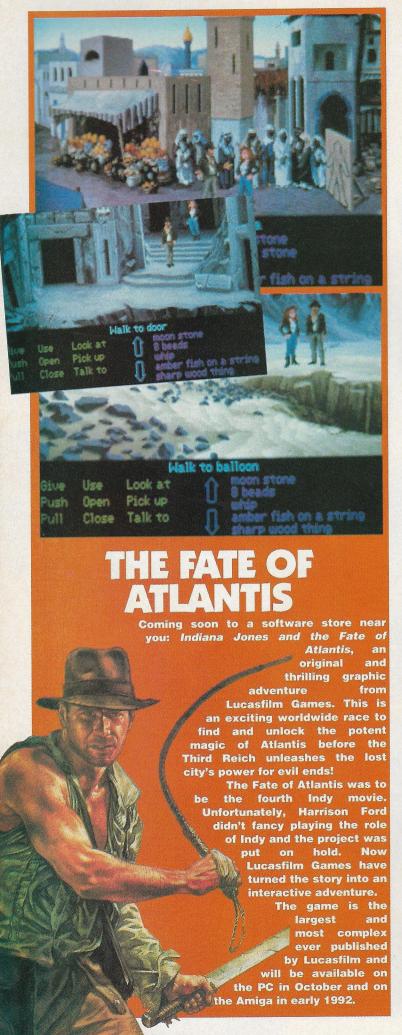

Described as virtual reality on the Game Boy this is a delightful puzzle/shooty romp though a vector graphics style maze.

The single player version has you stumbling through a maze blasting away at other bods and smashing your way through the thinner walls, which flash an intermittent lighter colour. When you spot a black section of the wall, go for it, that's the exit. Watch out for the little upside down bullet heads after level 10 cos they shoot at you – three hits and you're stuffed and you have 50 levels in all to struggle through.

The fun really starts when you link the hand helds together! Joining up to four Game Boys causes your opponents to become the enemy on your route through the maze. You can choose to hide and ambush or dive recklessly through the puzzle in a frantic search for the exit.

The incredibly addictive Faceball 2000 will be available from Bullet Proof Software around September.

LOST IN LA

The sun may be shining on the well-toned, bikini-clad bodies on Southern California's beaches, but tonight an eerie glow casts itself over Hollywood's celebrity-elite as more and more of them mysteriously disappear. Only one man can solve this one — we need Les Manley, hero of Search for the King.

Les is back right where he belongs, in the centre of the world's most glamourous and talked about community. Players must keep him from falling victim to the temptations of the Southern Californian lifestyle – fame, fortune and females! In addition, they must also help Les solve Tinseltown's most sinister crime.

Lost in LA sees Les negotiating the area in and around Los Angles, Les will meet up with plenty of Hollywood starlets, sun worshippers and even some smarmy producer-types stereotypical of the neighbourhood.

Mr Manley however, might prefer to talk to Dominique and Monique the female mud wrestlers, and shouldn't give up the chance to natter with Maladonna, the gorgeous singer, or Dr Nick, cosmetic surgeon to the stars.

The PC version will be available from Accolade this autumn. The Amiga version should follow a couple of months later.

BIG, BAD AND UGLY

US air-sim specialists, Spectrum Holobyte, are set to pay homage to the ugly duckling, which recently did us such great service in the gulf war. The A-10, known affectionately as the Warthog, is a rather ungainly looking bird, but what it lacks in looks it more than makes up for with its tank-busting firepower that includes an awesome 30mm GAU-8 seven-barrel gatling gun, which is capable of firing 4,200 rounds a minute.

This flying tank i capable of carrying a enormous payload of armoury, including fearsome armour-piercing shells, which are tipped with spent uranium and can blast clean through 18 inch armour plating.

The simulation includes simultaneous command over eight A10s as you encounter detailed campaigns over realistic contour terrain.

Big, Bad and Ugly is expected to be released some time this autumn.

No one in the Games-X office will sleep easily tonight as the Turtles are once again in the top spot and I have only one thing to say to you, "STOP BUYING IT!" (Steady on Bri – Ed.)

Gremlin's Switchblade 2 has stormed in at a respectable number nine position and will hopefully stay in the top 20 for all eternity due to how brilliant it is.

Two footy games have made an appearance this week in the shape of Winning Tactics, yet another Kick Off 2 data disk and Grandslam's England Championship Special.

You can turn to page 17 in issue 8 to see how good this game really is.

Probe software seems to be the most popular development team at the moment with five games in the top 20, three of which are in the top five positions! Unfortunately none of the games are of a exceptional standard.

After a brief leap up last week Gods has fallen once more, this time to numero 15, the lowest it has been for eight weeks.

The missing link

Ever wanted those flying and racing games to give you a better slice of the action? Then you're in need of that human touch and when it comes to video games, you'll probably find you already have the right connections...

ith the quality of sound and graphics leaping ahead year by year, it's the all-important gameplay that's been lagging behind. Sure, we've seen some great innovations but there's only so much intelligence which can be built into a game.

Many chart-topping titles like Gods and Armour Geddon feature a certain degree of artificial intelligence and the programmers have obviously made an effort to ensure that in the single player mode, you feel like you're actually playing in a world where the other beings think for themselves, rather than wandering around aimlessly like demented digital dorks.

Other game scenarios like Populous, Powermonger, Sim City create realism by making a complete living and constantly changing world in which you can immerse yourself. Clever and possibly intelligent, but it's not the sort of one-to-one player interaction we're talking about here. This is when the real human opponent sets him/herself apart from the typical dead-pan computer-controlled enemy.

Most games have a two player option and in some cases this is what makes them

In virtual reality the machines can all be linked up with each other so multi player tournaments can take place. This effectively lets you battle against your friends.

really special. If you've ever played Kick Off or Pro Tennis Tour 2 against a human opponent, you'll understand why – not even NASA's finest supercomputer can emulate the human mind so you can't expect a humble games machine to do the job either.

WHAT MAKES MULTI-PLAYER GAMES SO GOOD?

Despite the limited amount of artificial intelligence involved, most two player games manage admirably, and it is mainly simulations that take two player gaming a stage further by offering dual-machine link-ups and modem access.

Data-links allow two machines running the same game in the same room to communicate by wire so that both players are in the same game but play from their own machines. Add a modem to the communications port of your Amiga, ST or PC and you can dial-up another player who could be anywhere in the world, but you can still be playing the same game.

Despite the cost in phone calls, dial-up options are becoming more popular. In the 8-bit days, the lack of suitable communications ports resulted in a modem and phone line being essential for multi-player 'on-line' gaming with essentially text-based games like MUD (multi-user dungeon), Federation II, and Shades representing the best in multi-user adventuring.

NETWORKED

When several computers are connected together, it's an ideal opportunity for serious fun. What better way to spend time than in front of hundreds of thousands of pounds worth of mainframe or minicomputer?

The Macintosh is cheap and easy to network and has more than its fair share of 'net games: NetTrek and more recently, Spaceward Ho! let a building full of gamers in different rooms join in and play alongside each other using previously installed network cabling. Simulation addicts can hook up to a networked version of Falcon 2 for some really neat fly-by-wire.

Link-ups are easy – just connect the machines together and switch them on at the same time

HANDS UP

If you're lucky enough to own one of the popular hand helds, the chances are you've come closer to multi-player gaming than most people. And why?

Quite simply, it's down to portability;

21ST-26TH JUNE 1991 GAMES-X 9

after all, you're more likely to find a bunch of gamers with hand held machines in the same location, than you would Amiga, ST or console owners — it's such a drag having to lug all those bulky boxes around and when you get to your destination you've got a pile of spaghetti to untangle and plug together.

Hand helds like Game Boy and Lynx were designed from the outset with multi-player games in mind. Game Boy uses the 'Video Link' cable allowing two machines to be connected and Atari's Lynx has the ComLynx which can accommodate as many connected Lynxs as the game in question will allow.

Both machines come with the link-up cables as standard; all you have to supply is the extra hand held suitably decked out with the same cartridge in each, oh don't forget the second player too.

The up-and-coming Game Gear, Engine GT and Super Famicom are also fitted with link-up ports so expect multi-console gaming to be on the increase.

TWIN MACHINE MAYHEM

The back-end of all Amigas and STs features the infamous RS232 interface – good enough for most multi-machine link-up games. The Amiga calls it 'serial port', ST calls it 'modem port', but either way you only need three of those 25 pins. Make a cable yourself or buy one.

If there's one factor that's helped us to have the variety of link-up games we have today, it's the good 'ol RS232 port.

If the facility is there, the programmers are bound to use it; in fact it's an absolute doddle to transfer game data between two STs, Amigas or PCs, once you've got them connected together.

Making that connection simply involves plugging a 'null modem' RS232 lead between the two machines in question. If you're not a dab hand with a soldering iron, you should be able to get something ready-made from your local dealer or a mall order company.

Because most major game releases cover all three formats, Amiga, ST, PC, you usually have the option to link up to a different machine running a version of the same game.

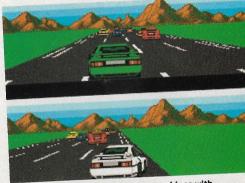

Some games take this a step further and let you play by modem to another computer. Great fun but frighteningly expensive – just imagine how much time you spend playing your favourite game... now that's a long phone call!

COMING SOON...

Games with a multi-player option are expected to reach new heights of sophistication for the main 16-bit home machines. Magnetic Fields is adding a great multi-player option to the follow-up to Lotus Turbo Esprit: two players can race full-screen between two Amigas/STs with a game link, but for the ultimate challenge, four players can hook-up with two on each machine looking at a split-screen view.

Looking further ahead still, 16-bit computer owners can get their soldering irons ready for some awesome play-by-wire in the form of Drop Soldier and the provisionally titled Cyber Fight.

Drop Soldier is an RPG/fantasy game in which, rumour has it, up to 16 - yep, that's what I said - 16

Four player action between two machines with Gremlin's follow-up to that racey driving Game, Lotus Turbo Esprit. Lotus 2 should be out later on this year

TWO PLAYER GAME BOY PAKS

Double Dragon: street fighting martial arts style. In two player mode you get to fight a real life opponent ~ well. almost.

WWF Superstars: the tackiest sport of all, Wrestling, comes to the small mono screen where two players can pretend to fight each other. Careful with that handbag, ma!

Pipe Dream: play with or against your opponent in this well-plumbed puzzle game. The two modes of two-up gameplay make this more interesting than it might otherwise be.

Flipuli: another puzzle game with flying blocks - play well to make life more difficult for your opponent during simultaneous gameplay.

Tetris: the classic falling block puzzler - it's Nintendo's freebie so most Game Boy owners will have it around. Now you've got no excuse not to try out the link up!

TEN GREAT 16-BIT LINK-UP GAMES

RVF Honda: one of the greatest racing games offers the all-important twin-machine link-up. Great in single-player mode and even better for two playing on separate machines.

Powermonger: control the destiny of your people in this brilliant strategy simulation. The two-player link-up option adds to the game's depth and you can play by modem as well.

F-16 Combat Pilot: the finest jet fighter combat simulator back in '89 when it first appeared, still recommended and great with the two-player link-up missions.

Stunt Car Racer: four-wheeled fun in this entertaining race-style game with its elevated and undulating hair-raising action. From the safety of your own computer, watch your opponent trash his car in style.

Armour Geddon: a top-notch arcade strategy

Stunt Car Racer majors on playability and the two-player link-up mode is even more entertaining

Anything with a flight sim flavour is a dead cert for a multi-player link-up. Here it's F-16 Combat Pilot extravaganza with loads of depth and variety combat simulation at its best in two-player mode.

Stormball: a non-contact future sport involving more skill than violence. The two-player option is split screen or dual-machine linked between Amiga, PC or ST.

Prince: one of Atari's first major 16-bit releases was a kind of cute wargaming RPG which could be played between two linked STs or Amigas.

Powerdrome: a fast 3D space speedway with headto-head action for two players 'data-linked' together by BS232 Flight Simulator II: old but truly classic, this venerable flying sim was one of the first to offer a machine-to-machine link.

MIDImaze: dead and buried now, but this ST-only maze game was one of the first of its type, using a MIDI link for a dozen or so players to hook up to.

Amigas can join in by RS232 link or modem. Drop Soldier could be out this Christmas on the Imageworks label

Meanwhile, Cyber Fight claims to offer a slice of Virtual Reality in the form of a futuristic sports sim based in a VR'ed arena scenario in which two players, each viewing the game on their own machine, rip each other to bits with a vicious array of sci-fi combat gear. Cyber Fight is pencilled in for autumn this year on PC, followed by an Amiga version a few months after.

So, the moral of the story is this: don't throw that game into the cupboard when you get bored of it. Dig out the manual and check it out for multi-playerbility. With Virtual Reality moving from hype to happening, the multi-player phenomenon could be the real video gaming sensation of the nineties.

MULTI-PLAYER LYNX CARTS

Xenophobe: up to four players can join in with this tremendous space blast up. Take the part of one of the heroes or control an enemy nastie.

Gauntlet: this fantasy adventure blockbuster was four-player right from its arcade original and with the Lynx version, four can still join the quest.

Slime World: up to eight – yes, eight – ComLynxed players can join this wonderful snot and puss ridden adventure. There are six expeditions to complete.

Zarlor Mercenary: up to four players can simultaneously play the six missions set in space. You all work together but if anyone slacks, use the 'back stabber' to gee-up your fellow traveller.

California Games: two player antics at six 'sporting' events for beach bums. Not the best in multi-player action but it's the game most Lynx owners will have.

Action and the second s

Look carefully in the Game's instruction booklet for details of multiplayer compatibility. This typically brief 'bythe-way' is the only mention of multi-playerness in the Game Boy Double Dragon instructions t's not difficult but we want to make everything as clear as possible. So sit down and listen carefully as you're talked through the various aspects of the game reviews...

ALEX is wearing a delicate piece of footwear here, with some really luverly socks. Coo, I do wish I had such taste for delectable sole food. Alex hasn't done anything outrageous at all this week which comes as a shock to all.

BRIAN's baseball boots must be older than Chris judging by their current state, and he says his burgundy beauties have been with him since he was a child. However, Bri's socks, the mouldy white ones embossed with an M&S label, must've been his Grandad's.

JOHN's scruffy, low life image is enhanced by these rather beaten, slightly old, 🌌 clod hoppers. C'mon John, you can afford better things than that, can't you? Many a week has gone by without the slightest silly word coming from his lips. What's going on?

Swarms of aliens fly towards you spewing all manner of projectiles in your general direction

In the 23rd century the world's leading scientists gather to discuss the probability of life beyond the outermost edges of the galaxy. The time-scale is critical, life on Earth has to be relocated due to the inevitable breakdown of the Earth's shield after two centuries of continued attack from the planet Mozone...

asp, shock, horror! The Earth is under attack! What shall we do? What can we do? Will we survive, and does the planet stand a chance?

Well, quess what, you've been given the dubious honour of breaking through the Mozonian defences and popping out for a quick drive around the unchartered bit of the universe.

Nothing to it, just smash through the hostile weaponry capable of destroying a planet and then find somewhere that all the people can move into. And if you wouldn't mind could you finish by next Thursday lunchtime cos we want to clock off

Fine, just make a safe passage for the Earth motherships to proceed to pleasant green rolling pastures new. You're a hero, you've almost certainly got rippling, bulging muscles beneath your tight lycra suit, and you've probably got a huge square chin and a strange quiet personality with a violent streak.

Chances are you've got a big gun strapped to your leg and you talk to people in a booming gravelly 'I gargle with razor blades' type voice. Needless to say you are also the world's greatest space pilot and because of this you're the one who has to go on this ridiculous suicide mission.

Oh, yes, I nearly forgot, sometimes you can take a chum along with you so you can be brave and heroic together. Cor, doesn't it make you go weak at the knees eh?

To assist you on your quest you can equip your super-duper spaceship with increased fire power by collecting various bolt on bits and bobs which will make your ship have all sorts of thingies hanging off it that go bang. bang, bang,

These dangly bits will cause the nasty alien ships to die much more quickly and will undoubtedly force them to attack you with renewed vigour.

SCROLLY SCROLLY. SHOOTY

As you can probably tell, this is a shoot'em-up in the finest tradition. The screen is a vertical scrolling affair and the overall impression given is one reminiscent of the classic arcade romp,

You fly your little fighter against overwhelming odds through passageways and windy, twisty turny bits as you are attacked from all sides by multitudes of evil little monsters.

In true shooty game fashion, at the end of each level you are pitched

MEANIE MANGLER

The first level of the game is nay hassle and you'll soon be clock up a humungous score

What a load of balls! Shooting these is easy but they just keep on coming

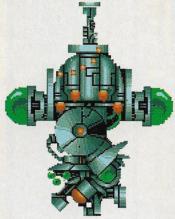

The first end of level guardian is surrounded by a moon-like shell which is divided into quarters. You must blow away the shell to destroy what lies inside

The add-on weapons are always useful. Here you have a big gun which fires dirty great big missiles

Large sea creature – arrives with its mate and is a real pain to destroy

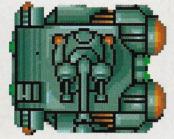

KEEP DESTROYING

THE MOZONE

This large spaceship must be hit in three separate places before it will explode

The CORE monster is a huge weird transparent blob which hovers over the sea

You must blow up four of these tanks before they will allow you to progress to the next level against some huge salivating slobbering meanie who is almost indestructible

Destroying this huge great death spewing behemoth you will then be warped onto the next level here you will receive a plethora of power-ups for your craft. Great stuff, loads of shooting, lots of bullets flying about and lots of big meanies.

The power-ups you can receive

The introductory sequence – You come forth looking all moody and tough with a pretty spotlight behind you

Your spacecraft awaits you sitting in its natty little hangar while wafts of smoke come drifting from the vents cover a wide scope. Firstly you can pick up your basic extra lives or laser boosts, however many of the power-ups will provide you with little outrider craft which whizz around your ship either blowing off guided missiles or firing lasers off to the side or to the rear.

Soon after finding the appropriate pods, and killing off the meanies you will be surrounded by all sorts of things which will help you along your journey.

DOUBLE ACTION

As I mentioned earlier, if you're a bit of a sissy you can take a friend along and you can have double the firepower on screen. Both of you can work as a team as you zip around the screen causing so much mayhem that you can't see what's going on.

When working in this way you will undoubtedly progress through the game at a quicker rate. The aliens do like to come at you thick and fast!

As shoot'em-ups go it's not the most original you're ever likely to come across. Graphically it is very good and there are some great sound effects and tunes which blast away in the background.

However, it is thoroughly playable and I really enjoyed blowing up all the big ugly meanies. Now where's my joystick gone...?

Later levels will have you pursuing the alien meanies down long metallic corridors. Here we see some of the action from quite far on in the game. Here you must infiltrate the star base which will eventually lead to the large spacecraft shown at the top of the page. Along the route you will be attacked by a wide range of different alien craft, all of which have seriously hostile intentions and very large guns to match. Just shoot them all...!

do like a good shoot'em-up game. A bit of gratuitous computerized violence never goes amiss here in the GX office.

There are loads of different meanies for you to blast and numerous different weapons with which to do it.

To top this off there is a considerable number of levels for you to progress through as you attempt to complete your noble quest.

The game loads with a superb Psygnosisesque introduction sequence where you see your character walking towards his ship before flying off into the wild blue yonder. This excellent little animation comes to us thanks to Jason Gee, a gentleman who prefers to be known as Jase Baby.

Graphically the game is really quite good. The backgrounds are beautifully drawn and there are some really nice little effects as you pass over the numerous different landscapes. My only quibble is that I was expecting the scrolling to be a bit more impressive.

These days anything which doesn't have at least a couple of layers of parallax scrolling tends to look a bit dated. Never mind though, the playability more than makes up for it and you should be able to keep going, progressing through all of the levels for quite some time.

The sound effects and musical bits are really great. There are some really neat sounds throughout the game which add greatly to the atmosphere.

Overall I thought Frenetic was a really great game which will undoubtedly be very popular when it is released at the end of this month. The shoot 'em-up continues to go from strength to strength.

Tracy, was very disappointing in a lot of ways. Arachnophobia, thankfully is better. The graphics are fairly average but serve their purpose. The animation of Delbert is good and humorous to isney's previous release, Dick Unfortunately there are only 16 colours even in VGA mode. Sound effects have a distinct Spectrum sound to them while the tunes are very beepy.

Perhaps the biggest problem though the gameplay. Shooting spiders is quite fun to begin with but it soon gets repetitive due to the ease with which it is At least there is a save game option so that you don't have to battle through every building again and again. This game comes highly recommended to fanatics of the film (of which there can't be many), otherwise I'd try it before you fork out the dosh.

The cheats you are sending in are becoming more and more interesting and there are some very clever little ideas arriving. Just where do you get them all from? It's nice to see the formats spreading more (oo-er, sounds a bit rude). So send any cheats to: Tip X, Games-X, Europa House, Adlington Park, Macclesfield SK10 4NP.

BUILDERLAND C: 1

Isn't this just one of the most infuriating games ever? Bet you've been dying to get your grubby mits on some codes haven't you? Well thanks to Mike Mee from Rhuddlan, Clwyd we now can present you with the first six level passwords.

Level 1: BUILD1 Level 2: YOTTHA Level 3: BEARBY Level 4: OCTOPY Level 5: DIABLO Level 6: GOTIUS

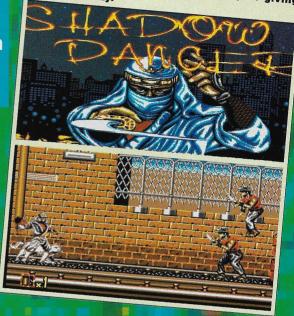

SHADOW C DANCER

This latest release from US Gold is certainly proving to be a bit on the popular side. Needless to say some of you are probably having problems eh?

Well, help is at hand if you type in GIVE ME INFINITES, then press return having paused the game. For doing this, you will be given infinite lives

Now here's something for you to try. Pressing a key on the keyboard will let you skip levels, I'm not telling you which key 'cos I'm fed up of giving

- NINTENDO GAME BOY!

Stephen Le Flem from Guernsey has kindly provided us with a pleasant little cheat for that classic blast, Nemesis on the Game Boy. Now apparently, if you pause the game and then press up, up, down, down, left, right, B, A, B, A you will receive a large gun with which to obliterate the aliens.

Z - VIRGIN CE

The cheat for Viz seems to be causing a great deal of problems with a number of people so we'll run it again and try and make it a bit clearer.

On the character selection screen type in WHAT A LARGE SET OF BOLLOCKS and then press return. Got that? Then hold down the number of the level you want to go to one to five. The game will then produce a dumb noise and the cheat is activated. There you go, easy eh? No more letters about it please!

GATES OF - ATARI ZENDECO

Ok, ok, I know we ran something for this a few weeks ago, but this time we can give you the code for the very last level! Ever wanted to see Zendecon? Well now's your

Enter the password ZETA and you will be plunged right into mortal combat with the big ugly gut himself. Thanks must go to Aaron West from Birkenhead for that one.

SAM STRIKES OUT

Good grief! How many other people has kindly provided us a cheat for know of a cheat for a SAM Coupé Sam Strikes Out. game? How many people know what is a SAM Coupe?

Apparently if you go two what a SAM Coupé is? Actually, screens to the right and then jump up and press F9 at the same time Well, for those of you who do, you will then walk around on your Tom Draycott from Bushey in Herts head, with infinite lives. Weird.

Here it is, Games-X's complete solution to Absence Makes The Heart Go Yonder, well, part 1 of it anyway. The world of Daventry is a dangerous place for the unwary traveller, and even the experienced King Graham also comes to a grinding halt over a sticky situation. We join the King of Daventry outside Crispin's house...

SERENIA AND THE DESERT

First of all walk south along the path. On the right is a snake – head that way and you'll be bitten. Follow the path of to the west and chat with the weeping prince. Having listened to his story, return to the previous screen and head south to the outskirts of Serenia. To enter the town, simply walk Graham along the path

Walk over to the man who's fixing his cart and talk to him. Just behind him is a barrel—reach in and grab the fish. Leave Serenia the same way you entered. Walk west past the bakehouse and continue until you reach the inn with the haystack outside. Keep on going west, and stop when you see a bear pawing at a tree

Select the fish from your inventory and click on the bear. This will feed the overgrown teddy. Eventually the bear will leave, allowing you to listen to Queen Beatrice. Get the stick to the right of the tree and also pick up the honeycomb from inside the tree

If you head west from the tree you'll arrive in brushland. Further left is the desert which you are about to explore, and any wandering could result in death, so save frequently and follow these commands down to the very last detail. Walk west four screens from the bee tree, and drink at the oasis. Head north for two screens, and then west once again to the hole in the cliffs

Hide behind the rocks to the right of the opening. If you're hidden properly the bandits will ride past. When they've done so, drink from the spring. Remembering to save, go west two screens and then south for three screens. Drink from the oasis and head west for yet another screen. Walk south once more and Graham will appear in the bandits' camp

Drink from the little clay jar by clicking the hand icon on it. Go to the smaller tent and walk inside. You'll see the sleeping bandit – don't wake him. You need to get the staff from the back of the tent. Walk up the right hand side and pick it up. Make sure you do it quickly, as this encounter is timed – take too long or touch the desperado and your throat will be slit

Once you've left the tent, walk east four screens and one to the north, and refresh yourself at the water-hole. Head north for two scenes, take the boot from the skeleton. Walk north for one screen, then east for two. Drink, and then go north twice and then west three. Walk north to the temple and drink. Approach the temple door and tap the staff on it

The door to the temple will open and you have a short time to loot the place. You only have one attempt, so save before you enter. Pick up the gold coin that is just in front of Graham, and then take the brass bottle next to it. Once you have these two leave immediately. Once outside return to the spring and drink. From the opening go east three, south two and drink. Leaving the oasis go east five screens and leave the desert

THE DARK FOREST

Now you're at the bee tree, head north. Throw the stick for the dog. Once the ants have promised to help you, continue north to the Gypsy camp. Give the gold coin to the man and enter the wagon to talk to Madame Mushka. Listen to what she has to say and collect the amulet. Let the hands-off sequence finish and wear the amulet

Leave the witch's house, and return to the tree with the small door. Use the key on the door and take the heart. Walk south once, then turn west and head in that direction for two more screens. Walk north to a clearing. You're now in a loop and won't be able to leave unless you can find an exit

Walk east from the Gypsy camp and talk to the weeping willow. Once she's finished, walk east again, and enter the dark forest. Make sure you're wearing the amulet and carrying the brass bottle and the honeycomb. Take the path that goes off the right. If you meet the witch, give her the brass bottle and she'll be trapped inside

Drop an emerald on the floor. An elf will rush out and grab it. Repeat the process once more and the same will happen. Squeeze the honeycomb and a puddle of sticky honey will appear on the floor. Drop the last emerald near this. The elf that comes to get it will get stuck. Talk to the elf

Continue north and then head west. If you've already dealt with the witch, all well and good. If not, give her the bottle. Once she's gone, walk inside her house. Open the trunk and take the spinning wheel. Take the small key that is hidden inside the incense burner. Open the drawer in the table and take the bag of emeralds from inside

An opening will be created to the west. Follow the elf west and into the tunnel. Watch the animated sequence and you'll receive a pair of shoes and also shown the way out of the dark forest. Walk west to the willow and give her the heart. Watch the reunion and pick up the harp

THE ICE MOUNTAINS

Walk west again. Pick up the tambourine. Return east, then south. You're at the gnome's house. Talk to the gnome and give him the spinning wheel. You'll be given the marionette. Walk south to the inn and search the haystack. The ants will appear and help you to find a needle

Once in the kitchen open the cupboard and get the leg of lamb. Exit through the door of the left. From the inn walk east to the outskirts of town and then north. Shake the tambourine at the snake. Walk east. You are now on the mountain trail so wear the cloak you acquired earlier

Go to the inventory and select the old boot. Walk east to the bakehouse. At some point you will see a rat being chased by a cat – throw the boot at the cat. You only have one chance so don't mess up. Return to the town. Pick up the coin near the broken cart. Enter the nearest shop which is a tailors

Walk east. Eat the leg of lamb. Click the rope on the rock overhang – Graham will throw the rope up. Climb up to the ledge. Choose the hand icon. The only way across is to jump from rock to rock. Only jump on the rocks at the top of the screen as the rest are unstable

Talk to the tailor and then give him the needle. Get the cloak and leave. Next to the tailors is the toy shop – walk inside. Talk to the toymaker and exchange the marionette for the sled. Leave and enter the shoe shop. Talk to the cobbler, give him the elf boots and take the hammer before leaving

Carefully walk Graham across the fallen log and continue east. Cedric will be carried off by a wolf – don't worry. Before you go any further make sure you have Crispin's wand, the tambourine, the remaining lamb, the hammer, the leftover honeycomb and the harp. Click on the sled on Graham

Having left the town, walk left to the bakehouse. Go inside and give the baker the silver coin to get a custard pie. Leave and go west. Enter the inn. Talk to the men and get beaten up. Having been tied up, wait for the rat to chew away the ropes. Take the rope hit the cellar door with your hammer.

Walk east after the sled run. Talk to the eagle and give him the lamb. Head north, get captured by the wolves. Watch the sequence with Queen Icebella. When the Queen orders the wolves to execute you, quickly play the harp. After more animation, follow the path towards the cave

DESCHIANCEINI AND SOUTH SEQUEL

YOU COULD BE JETTING OFF TO LYON IN FRANCE FOR A VIP VISIT TO ONE OF EUROPE'S MOST EXCITING SOFTWARE HOUSES, INFOGRAMES

* There you will chair a development meeting and negotiate your royalty payments. This all expenses paid experience could be your foot in the door to the exciting world of computer game design. And to cap it all, the winner will be exclusively interviewed by Games-X about the design and his or her plans for the future ver wondered what life on the leading edge of game design is like? It's hard work, but it beats filling shelves at the local supermarket. A taste of this exciting and rewarding life could be yours, courtesy of Infogrames and Games-X.

In what is undoubtedly the most inventive and exciting competition ever to appear in a computer magazine, you could be the designer of the sequel to the critically acclaimed and incredibly successful North and South.

Europe's premier software house, Infogrames, has been scratching its head trying to come up with a follow-up to their most successful release, North and South. Now it's thrown open the challenge to you, the readers of Games-X.

JUST A BIT OF HELP

Infogrames has released some of the most inventive games on the market. Its finest hour was the excellent North and South, which was based on the hilarious characterizations of the French comic, Les Tunique Bleues.

For your design, you can choose any war in any country at any time, but like North and South, there's got to be an element of humour rather than the violent and tragic implications of war. To give you an idea, North and South was set at the time of the American civil war where you could become a Confederate or a Yankee.

As you battle for territory the game contains a truly incredible variety of gameplay. The level of difficulty is gauged by military rank, but whether rookie or officer, you can still choose arcade or strategy mode. You can also select intervention from Indian and Mexican attack as well as adverse weather conditions.

Once you have set the parameters, you turn to a map where you can move and deploy your troops to attack your opponent's territory. The enemy will defend and one of many sub games will commence. The Yankees and Confederates face each other across a river and you must switch control from the cannons to the infantry and cavalry and wipe out the enemy troops.

In arcade mode, if you take an enemy fort, a amusing arcade sequence occurs with you controlling a soldier as he battles his way along the fort wall – the fight sequence is more slapstick than violent. Another aspect of the strategy is to open up communication and railroad to allow supplies to come through. You can also sabotage your enemy's supply lines.

First, come up with an over-all scenario for the game – the more comical the better – and define the objectives and goals to aim for in the game. Consider elements of strategy and arcade when you are designing your game and use illustrations to show characterizations, backdrops and strategic screens. Wherever possible, back up the descriptions in your specification with diagrams and sketches.

YOU COULD WIN

The designs for the sequel to North and South will be judged by a team of adjudicators from Infogrames, and the candidates will be whittled down to the top three designs. The overall winner will win a VIP all expenses trip to Infogrames HQ in Lyon where they will chair a development meeting and negotiate their royalty payments. The two runners up will each receive an exciting hand held Game Boy.

Entries should reach Games-X by July 4th, which coincidentally is American Independence Day – entitle your envelope North & South Competition.

NOTE: This competition is not open to professional game designers.

CACILY LIVE VIC

hink back to about three years ago when Code Masters released Dizzy. How popular was the company then? Not very, but nowadays it dominates the Budget Chart and anything that doesn't hold its name disappears from existence at the same speed as it appeared.

There are three new entries in the Amiga Chart this week including Gremlin's Switchblade sequel, another Kick Off 2 data disk and the really sick, medical simulator, Life and Death. Both Centurion and Psygnosis' excellent Armour-Geddon have poked their noses in again at the bottom of the ten.

Core Design's Warzone has smashed into the ST Chart at number eight and it looks like people love a good hard blast on their computers. Core's other biggie, Chuck Rock is beginning its gradual rise.

Biggest surprise of the week is the reappearance of Golden Axe at the top of the Amstrad Chart, while Ocean's Christmas biggies, RoboCop 2 and Total Recall have also returned for another shot at the title.

HAA TIAS

Activision's Vendetta is the only newie of the week at number five.

More re-entries in the C64 Chart this week but above them all is the arrival of the very poor England Championship Special at number four proving that you'll buy anything with a licence behind it, no matter how bad the game.

The top two positions have swapped around and Back to the Future 3 has hit top gear once more by leaping back up to number three.

The Spectrum Chart is really uninteresting with the weekly reshuffle looking more boring than ever. At least US Gold's Sega coin-op conversion, Shadow Dancer has broken the monotony

The US Mega Drive Chart looks remarkably like the British one, with only a few exceptions. However, it won't be too long before all these games hit the UK.

TEAM TALK

Nicholas has caught the 'Electronic' disease from Alex and regularly listens to it on his headphones while playing Deuteros. He is also one half of the newly formed Dr X fan club, as you can see from the piccy.

John doesn't play games at the moment and just draws more wonderful, weird cartoons for us to make fun of and he keeps disappearing around to ST Action to visit his woman. (Naughty boy! – Ed.)

Brian has moved back into the Kick Off 2 phase, but NEVER plays it in the office (excuse me? - Ed), and is currently undergoing medication to try and set him free from the trap.

AMIGA MODE

I was reading issue four of your excellent magazine and your page stopped me in my tracks (to use a cliché). I noticed the Depeche Mode Music Disk and wanted to know if and where I can get it for the ST. I have got the entire back catalogue (well, almost!) as well as books etc. but I haven't got the disk.

Dave Collie, Paisley.

Dr X: I noticed on your letter you signed your name as Dave Gahan – you tart! The Depeche Mode Music Disk was in fact on the Amiga, and includes songs like Blue Dress, Little 15 and Shake the Disease. The disk can be purchased from 17 Bit Software, so further information on ST demo disks can be obtained from them if your write to 17 Bit Software, PO Box 97, Wakefield WF1 1XX or call them on 0924 366982.

ZEALOUS OVER XENON

I am having trouble on Xenon 2 on the ST. Okay, I can get pretty far, in fact right to the second part of level three when the screen becomes a sort of maze. No matter how hard

I try I either take the wrong path or get blown to bits by the sort of crocodile-head things. Please, please, please help as it is driving me insane and if I don't pass it I will probably stop playing.

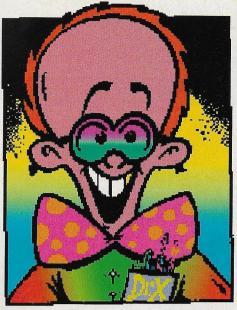

Dominic Taylor, Macclesfield.

PS Please could you do a Street Talk from Tim's Megastore in Macclesfield?

Dr X: In answer to your PS, sorry we've already done one there. In my opinion you are pretty naff at Xenon 2, as it is fairly easy to get onto level five if you know what you're doing and using the correct type of joystick.

I use a Competition Pro 5000 Extra and they provide a rapid autofire which sends a white stream of plasma up the screen. With this you'll find it is almost impossible to die.

Also a certain power-up will award you with a bubble of invulnerability - collect this and remember, if Soon it'll be away with the milky white complexion and in with the tanned hunk who patrols the beaches! you take the wrong path you can always scroll back down the screen.

HUNTING THE PREDATOR

Please can you give me some hints or tips, or maybe a cht for Predator 2? Also I was wondering if you could help me with Wrath of the Demon. I can get onto the seventh level, but no further.

David Shield, Kent.

Dr X: I published some hints and tips for Predator 2 not so long ago which were basically don't bother going for

The Predator and his amazing technicolour camo-coat is giving one or two or you real problems. Collect the Mk 1 and leave the less powerful guns in your wake any other gun apart from the Mk 1 and remember to collect ammo as you go.

As for Wrath of the Demon, I'm not sure which level you mean. If you mean the one where you have to defeat the bat, kill the gnomes who run onto the screen because they leave behind useful health potions when they die.

If you mean the clearing with two levers however, ignore the first one, punch the second to push it into a new position. This will stop a blade from blocking your path later in the game.

OH MY GOD

I have battled onto the fourth level of the Bitmap Brothers' new mega-brill (alright, don't overdo it – X) game, Gods. I want to know what are the best weapons to use to complete this level and when or where should I use the shield potion to gain maximum protection. Also are there any software companies working on CD-ROM games for Atari's own CD-ROM system? Graham John Lewis, N Ireland.

Dr X: There are two different ways to obtain weaponry when playing the fourth level. The first is buy three lots of maces. These are useful as you will need to destroy the crumbling bricks later on.

The other way is to purchase the big battle axes and fireballs. The fireballs will slowly break up the blocks and the axes cause the most damage to other creatures.

When starting level four, select the maces which will allow you to destroy the blocks. Alternatively choose the fireballs and the battle axes

Finally, you can use the shield just about anywhere to good effect.

As for the ST CD-ROM, I'm not sure. I know that software houses like Psygnosis are concentrating on the Commodore but they may progress onto Atari's system.

COOKIN' KOOPA

Dear Tefal person, the end boss on Super Mario World is a bit hard (I can't seem to hurt him) so if you have got a guide to kick his butt please could you print it.

Ben Jackson, Halifax.

Dr X: If you talk to me like that I won't give you anything, you cheeky little ! Anyway you've come to the right place to ask about Mario World.

The last guardian, Koopa, is not that difficult to beat when you know how. When he throws the small creatures at you, jump on them by pressing button B. When they are stunned, pick them up by holding down button Y. When Koopa flies over the top of you, let go of button Y and push up on the joypad.

This will send the creature up in the air and will hopefully land on his head. You have to repeat this six times, and every two times he attacks with a new strategy. You will also have to avoid a shower of fireballs that fall down screen after every two successful hits. It may take a couple of times to do it, but it's worth it just to see the end sequence.

CAN OF WORMS

Following the CES report last week here's another glimpse at the can of worms that was opened in the Consumer Electronics Show that took place in the Windy City.

Apart from the redesigned Super Famicom there was a small mountain of software on show including the eagerly awaited Sonic the Hedgehog. Toe-Jam and Earl is a clever quest game with two hilarious characters who fill up on junk food and meet all kinds of weirdos.

This game has a great rap-style score and animation. Another is Fantasia, bigger, better and more difficult than Castle of Illusion and, speaking of Disney, a Donald Duck game.

Decap Attack is a new Bonk-like headless character – strange and then there was Alien Storm, Golden Axe II, Mercs, Midnight Resistance and an interesting Final Fight clone.

MORE WORMS

Third party companies were showing some excellent games this year for the Mega Drive. Vapour Trail from Renovation, Raiden from Bignet and Twin Cobra were three shoot'em-ups catching the eye.

Namco's Marvel Land is another Mario-type game packed with 8 megs of gameplay, while Rolling Thunder 2, with a one or two player option is light years better than the original.

Renovation had other interesting games including

Cavenoire is an RPG which emphasises the hack 'n' slay and treasure finding aspects of the genre rather than any sort of character interaction and will be more appealing to the action oriented player.

Arcus Odyssey, a Zaxxon perspective RPG and El Viento a 'different' running/shooting game where an alien female character is sent back in time to battle Al Capone and other gangster-type 20's setting.

NHL Hockey, Shadow of the Beast and Killing Game

You begin the game with a selection of which of the two characters you wish to play. Then it's off to the 'area' screen where you choose which deeper dungeon section you wish to explore. Once that's out the way you will be shown your stats. After this screen you will be given four potions or spells to help you on your way.

Then it's off to the dungeon. One room at a time is shown on-screen. This normally shows a monster, a treasure and an exit plus some obstacles in the way.

Cavenoire is not the most exiting game I've ever seen and lacks gameplay. Sound is good, graphics are okay but the game doesn't have a decent objective.

GAME: ZERO WING MACHINE: MEGA DRIVE PRICE: £37.00 SUPPLIER: ELECTRO GAMES ero Wing for the Sega Mega Drive is an excellent outer space shoot'em-up based on an older coin-op. Similar in concept to R-Type, Zero Wing features huge end-of-level guardians, fast action and a beam which may be powered up and used to capture enemy fighters.

By pressing and holding the fire button, a tractor beam will be emitted from the front of your craft. If enemy ships are touched by this beam they will be held captive before your ship.

This also acts as a shield which will deflect your opponents shots and missiles. In addition you have two outrigging craft who flank your vessel and add to your firepower as they rotate and blast away with the same type of weapon that your main ship fires.

These parasitic craft are also useful as shields for enemy fire. In addition, they will pull themselves close to the hull of your ship when you have to squeeze through a small space so you don't have top worry about damage.

The standard enemies you face are numerous and pretty large. Especially impressive are those end-of-level guardians which are half-machine and half monster. One, for example, looks like a dragon's head with metal plates. Naturally he breathes jets of fire from his mouth.

The levels range from missions in deep space to the evil mechanised bases of the alien war machines. The graphics are clear, detailed and very colourful while the sound pulls you into the heart of the battle.

Zero Wing is a thoroughly enjoyable game that can be highly recommended to all Mega Drive owners.

BIRD'S PARADISE

On the role playing front, Phantasy Star III – appearing very quickly after the immensely successful second part – was exhibited alongside Shining and the Darkness.

RPG conversions from computer included Starflight (vastly upgraded from the computer original, apparently), and The Immortal (a sort of cross between adventure and arcade but more oriented towards the puzzle side of affairs). Might & Magic II was also performing, this is an ideal console conversion of a typical hack 'n' slash role player, full of colourful scenery and tons of animated monsters to bash.

OCEAN'S TIDAL WAVE

Ocean is bursting at the seams with new releases. Robocop, Navy Seals and Mr Do are to appear on the Game Boy, while New Zealand Story and Rainbow Arts will hit the NES. All of the these games should appear around Christmas time.

Next year, Darkman – due any day now on computer – is to be converted to the NES along with Robocop 2.

Being converted for Psygnosis is Lemmings on both NES and Game Boy. To appear in the first quarter of next year, Lemmings may have slightly fewer of the actual little beasties but promises to have all of the gameplay of the game that's taken the computer 16-bits by storm.

OCEAN'S FILM LICENCES

Hudson Hawk, to appear next year on the NES, is one of Ocean's two big film tie-ins. Bruce 'Die Hard' Willis plays Eddie Hawkins, also known as Hudson Hawk, who just got out of prison after a 10 year stretch.

He's vowed to give up his illegal profession as the world's greatest cat burglar. However, a couple of 'persuasive' people, who dabble in blackmail, make him change his mind.

The second big tiein is Hook, on both

Game Boy and NES. Hook is that blockbuster, starstudded movie from Steven Speilburg that tells the Peter Pan tale. A March or April '92 release is expected on this one.

DAMP SQUIB?

Here's a surprise – Hunchback of Notre Dame on console! Remember this one? Is Ocean serious? Yes, ye olde, ancient and downright aged arcade game is to be converted to the Game Boy and, just to spite me will probably be an enormous hit.

CD PUNCH-UP SHOCK!

Fists were flying, blood was spilling and Mario dolls were being torn limb from limb on the Nintendo stand at the CES following the company's announcement that it would not be releasing a Sony-based CD for the Super Famicom. It would, instead be using a Philips version!

The Philips CD add-on will support CD-ROM XA hence it is possible to produce a disk that will run on the forthcoming Philips CD-I machine as well as the Famicom CD add-on. The systems will both have different processors, so two sets of programs will be ire Mustang is the brand new shoot'em-up for the Mega Drive from Taito. Rather than taking you into the future to fight off affen invaders. Fire Mustang takes you back through history to battle rejentless enemies in the WW2 era.

While the enemy is not equipped with plasma cannons or any truly amazing weaponry; you will be challenged by the sheer number of enemy planes. They seem to come from everywhere on the screen, and you will so you will need fast reflexes to make it through.

Fire Mustaing has incredible graphics. The parallax scrolling is taken to new heights with almost 20 different layers of scrolling.

During your flight you will fire a constant barrage of bullets towards the on-coming aircraft and, in addition, lob a stream of bombs towards the ground targets that include tanks, anti-aircraft guns and gunboats.

Although not quite having the appeal of Zero Wing, Fire Mustang is still a recommended shoot'em-up.

GAME: BOMBER BOY MACHINE: GAME BOY PRICE: £21.00 SUPPLIER: PC ENGINE SUPPLIES

n this new Hudson Soft game for the Game Boy you play the part of Bomber Boy trying to destroy an evil fortress filled with multiple rooms. Each room represents a level where you must use your bombs to clear away blocks that impede your route to the exit. There are power-ups under some blocks to help your progress.

You also have to contend with enemies who can be blown to tiny pieces with a well-placed bomb - the idea is to time the bomb so that it explodes when the enemy is in range. However, you must drop the bombs and run before it knocks you out too!

Bomber Boy is a good game only when the two player mode is used, a fact that is reflected in the final rating.

As a one player game I couldn't get very excited about it. When you have got other players dashing towards the exit, it really makes the whole game a lot more challenging.

There have been quite a few puzzle games on the Game Boy – sometimes it seems that puzzle games are the ONLY games you see on the Game Boy – but Bomber Boy's competition is, on the whole, better implemented.

Bottom line? Buy it for the two player option or buy another puzzle game instead.

Understandably, with everyone expecting Sony to announce a Famicom CD add-on, the electronics giant was none-to-happy at the Nintendo/Philips news. Upset is an understatement — in fact Sony officials apparently lost their rag on one or two occasions.

One of the reported reasons that the deal fell through was because Nintendo was not happy with Sony's plans to create games based upon Columbia Pictures movies. $\ensuremath{\mathcal{L}}$

PC Engine Supplies, The Village, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Staffs ST5 1QB. Tel 0782 712759 o, exactly what do George Stephenson's Rocket and Pegasus the mythical winged horse have in common? Surprisingly enough, both were created in Stockton. While Optimus can't lay claim to inventing the train, it is rather proud of its first major 16-bit project, Pegasus.

Snapped up by software giant, Gremlin Graphics, the Optimus team consists of brothers, Jason and Darren Falcus; programmers, Neil Hill and Shane O'Brien; and graphic artist, Mike Muskett. I managed to catch up with the team and asked Jason a few questions.

When did you start writing games and what features in your back catalogue?

"Optimus was formed in February 1988. We were originally involved in producing a number of 8-bit budget titles for the likes of Code Masters and Players. Mainly stuff on the Amstrad and Spectrum, we also did a couple of titles on the 16-bit machines.

Among the games we wrote were SAS Combat Simulator, Powerboat Simulator, Pro Boxing and Fast Food on the Amiga and ST."

Winging their way

How did it all begin?

"I started the company with my brother, Darren, and then we took Neil on an ET scheme - he was really interested in learning how to program games. He already knew a lot about the Amiga so we just showed him a few games techniques.

When we thought he was good enough we took him on full time. We've done the same thing with Mike, the Graphic Artist, and Shane, our other programmer, is on the scheme now."

When did you start Pegasus and when will we be able to get our hands on it?

"The project's been going for over six months now, we started it around October last year. Everything's going pretty well and we should have no trouble in finishing it in time for August. We've got an extra month to write the ST version and have even written the scrolling routine for the PC."

Are there any arcade games that have inspired you with Pegasus?

"No, not really. We looked at other Amiga games like Shadow of the Beast II, we always thought they looked nice but they didn't necessarily play brilliantly."

Nick Clarkson
journeyed to Stockton-on-Tees in County Durham, land of the Bishop Princes,
but what other secrets does the town hold?

The game features a strong shoot'em-up element, but where are the alien invaders?

"We wanted to do something a bit different to the usual run-of-the-mill shoot'em-ups you see. Our original graphics artist had a healthy imagination and was heavily into the fantasy scene and we wanted to show off the Amiga's capabilities with a really good parallax scrolling game."

In addition to the shoot'em-up element, isn't there a platform-style scenario?

"Yeah. At the end of each flying section the horse lands and your guy dismounts. The game then turns into a platform-style game with a touch of hack 'n' slash just for good measure. We'll also be hiding a few puzzles and extra rooms in there but that'll be for the player to discover.

We had planned to include a third style of gameplay

Pegasus features two distinctive styles of gameplay. The platform-style levels also contain a fair amount of hack 'n' slashing too. Players will also be rewarded with secret rooms if they decide to explore the landscape where you'd view Pegasus from above as you flew through a canyon style set-up. Eventually we decided to leave that out and save it for another day."

GAMES-X 21ST-26TH JUNE 1991

How many stages are there going to be?

"Originally we planned to do 12 levels but Gremlin wanted to offer the games player even more value for money, the game now features 50 levels!

There will be five different worlds, each comprising of 10 levels – five flying and five walking. Naturally we've included a really mean end-of-level guardian in each world."

What about the obligatory weapon systems and upgrades?

"When flying Pegasus you'll be able to use four different strengths of fire power plus a sort of smart bomb. These can be gained by killing the various monsters and collecting the crystals they release.

We've decided against offering any type of ranged weapon on the hack 'n' slay level – it'd spoil the action. Instead we're thinking about shields and that sort of thing."

Many games don't reward the player with a significant winning sequence. What will players who finish Pegasus get to see?

"The game will begin with a fully animated sequence telling you the story behind the game and informing you of your task. I'm not going to tell you what happens in the end sequence, but it will be worth completing the game for."

What programs and packages are you using to create the game?

"We actually write the game on the PC using a PDS link-up. The advantage is there is that if the machine crashed, you wouldn't have to spend too long loading the code back in.

The sprites and backgrounds are built up in Dpaint on the Amiga and we like to create the foregrounds with OCP on the ST, mainly because it has an excellent map editor."

What problems have you encountered so far?

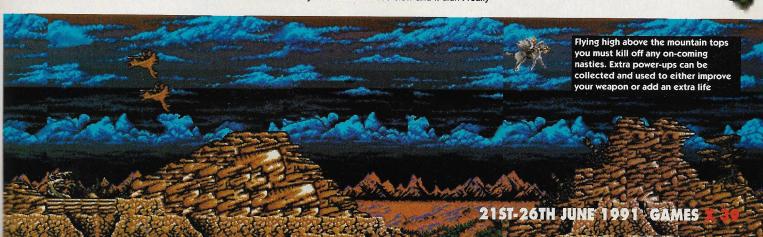

"In the original design we were going to have Pegasus flying in both directions, a bit like Defender. Unfortunately the action was too slow and it didn't really

"It's great to be writing stuff for such a prestigious company. The guys there really look after us. They can appreciate we'll run up against problems and always come up with suggestions.

However, if we tell them that we can't feasibly implement something they're very understanding."

Any clues to what your next project will be, what about consoles?

EXTRAVAGANZA

icensed characters and game themes play a major role in the coin-op sector, primarily for video and pinball products. This week I thought I'd take a break from game reviews and get a little more philosophical.

I'll start with Bart Simpson. Presently the world's most popular cartoon character, face on a million items of merchandise, blossoming pop star and now looking like a video game hit.

No matter what you think, Konami has got it right in securing a licensing agreement to use the Simpsons family in a video game environment. Prior to that it hit the bullseye with a similar move in making four turtles video game heroes.

Already pundits are predicting that The Simpsons will be bigger than Turtles, so the pot of gold will be even more

helped by the big hype for in the

lucrative. Atari has recently followed the creed with the launch of Batman, using the hit movie as its theme.

The logic is that certain characters have major pulling power. Most people know The Simpsons in some shape or form, the same for Turtles, Bugs Bunny etc etc.

But it doesn't always work, so is the licensing of characters a sure fire route to game popularity? If so, is the future of game success dependent on the regular appearance of characters such as Bart?

The answer to the above questions is firstly possibly, but don't stake your life on it, and secondly, no.

There is really no doubt that licensing a certain character or even theme will create an extra level of interest among the players, which will translate into more takings in the cashbox.

The word is that there are several more licensed projects in the pipeline from the manufacturers, so the short term future at least for this looks very strong.

But the future success of video and pinball should not be dependent on the creative genius of companies like Warner Brothers, Universal, Walt Disney et al.

Sometimes licensing can fall flat. Characters have to be combined with good game ideas. So when it works it really works, but it can go spectacularly wrong. Sega's Moonwalker using Michael Jackson is an example of this. The game came with much hype, Jackson himself seems universally popular, but the video game, almost inexplicably, quickly bombed.

As a rule of thumb, using a licensed theme or character will guarantee the initial impact of the product, but the game itself has to stand on its own two feet as well. In this business it is the takings in the cashbox which define how good a game is.

It is probably fair to say that a licensed product will not demonstrate the same longevity as a 'standard' hit video.

Although Konami has proved an exception to this with both Turfles and Aliens over the last year to 18 months. But it is quite easy for a licensed game to be nothing more than a five minute wonder.

But do videos based around a

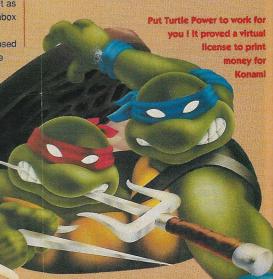

Moonwalker – surprisingly not a great arcade success central character have to rely on creative sources outside the amusement industry? If a recognised character placed within a reasonable game is more pleasing to play, and it probably is, should licensing be the only route to follow?

It has been demonstrated by Nintendo, creator of the Mario Brothers, that it is possible to create from scratch a whole new character with long term appeal with further spinoffs in merchandising and all the other paraphernalia that accompanied Turtles and The Simpsons, All the major manufacturers are believed to be looking to create their own corporate brand characters and emulate the success of Nintendo.

It can be done. But licensed characters or themes do carry with them the advantage of marketing back-up and hype on tap, making the job of the video game creator much easier. So for now, welcome Bart Simpson and family, but a wise head will be keeping a watchful eye on the future.

This week's item comes from Chichester. Micro Mayhem is a small, well stocked shop situated in a popular shopping mall. So what's selling and what's hotly-awaited? We get the answers straight from the horse's mouth.

ST: = = 1/1/4/6

ve just got a Sega Master System which I share with my family - I'm actually buying James Pond for my husband's birthday. The family are so mad about the Sega that I hardly get a look in.

At the moment I'm really into Mickey Mouse, I enjoy cartoon-style games, but they've got to be challenging as well. I'd much rather play comical platform games than strategy. Magazine-wise I've started buying your Games-X - at 60p it's pretty good value.

Chris Williams (45)

My very favourite games on the ST at the moment are Gods, Hard Drivin' and Kick Off II. I've got an ST and my eldest lad has got a Master System. I also enjoy games like Populous and Sim City - I play Populous for hours. We buy Sega magazine and occasionally the One (what's wrong with Games-X may I ask? - Ed). I'm saving up for the Game Gear at the moment. I also like playing conventional role-playing games with lead figures.

The Kilborns

We bought the boys a Commodore 64 for educational reasons, but it soon became obvious that this was the last thing the machine was going to be used for. We actually encourage the boys to play games - it's more constructive than watching the box.

We visited my brother last week and he's got a Game Boy. Well, I started playing Tetris and I couldn't put the thing down. We're thinking about buying a hand held, the Lynx looks good at £79.00 and it's colour - I'm very tempted!

Nathan Boyd (15)

Working at Micro Mayhem on Saturdays and after school is great. Most of my mates have got a computer or a game machine and so they come in at some time on a Saturday to check out what's been released.

I've got an ST myself and I like all sorts of games ranging from shoot'em-ups like Xenon II to sports games like Kick Off and even strategy like Populous. This job's great cos I get to see the games first (not before us though - Ed). Lemmings is my favourite at the moment.

t the moment I own a A Speccy, but there's less and less software available for it. I tend to buy budget software. I'd really like to buy a Sega Master System because the games are great.

I love football games such as Kick Off 2. If I get the Sega I'm looking forward to playing arcadestyle games such as Xenon II and Turrican - I like a good blast'em-up.

work for IBM so I suppose there's no prizes for guessing what machine I've got at home. I've only just started to use it for entertainment, because when you're surrounded by computers all day it's the last thing you want to use in your spare time.

I've started to play chess on the PC (it's a start I suppose - Ed) and now I'm looking at strategy games and sports simulation. I'm keen to get the kids interested in the computer and I guess this is the best way of doing it. They've got a BBC for school work.

Jason would like to apologise for the slight blurring on some of these photos. The girls would just not leave him alone and kept jogging his camera hand.

cycle from Worthing (15 miles) to Micro Mayhem most Saturdays. There's a good range of software for my STE. I upgraded from an STFM for the extra colours and better scrolling and so I look for games that support the STE. Sadly, there aren't many that do. I like fantasy role playing games, anything that you can really get into escapism. I like the Sierra range because of the characterization and excellent stories

Mathew Chard, manager

We have a good cross-section of customers who are after a variety of things. Generally, the younger people want games for consoles, hand helds. Amiga and ST.

However, Chichester is a town full of accountants and solicitors and so we have older customers who regularly buy games for the office PC.

held business is increasingly popular. The Game Boy was the best seller, but with the Lynx dropping in price. it certainly looks like a more attractive buy. Judging by console software sales, I would say the Sega Master System is the most popular.

The 16-bit sales, especially Amiga, are still strong. But the customers tend to go for the best such as Populous, F19 and Lemmings.

We have to keep up to date by reading computer mags. I tend to buy a multiformat mag like Games-X.

Arguably, the most popular cult movie of all fime, the Blues Brothers still manages to pack out the dinemas at late night showings. Now the movie is being turned into a game and lason Spiller checks out what's predicted to be the hottest movie licence game this autumn.

on your shades, click your fingers and chill out with the Blues Brothers! The movie which combined the talent of the young Dan Ackroyd and the late John Belushi.

Considering the popularity of the movie it's surprising that this licence has taken so long to be turned into a game.

The reason seems to be that a licence as marketable as the Blues Brothers has more than one claimant to a piece of the action. Now, Blues Brothers – the game, is being designed by an in-house development team at Titus in France.

I caught up with the design team, minutes after it had emerged from an all-night meeting. Tucking into croissants and coffee, as you do, I asked project manager, Vincent Pargney, what stage the project was at?

"We have already been working on the game for six months and we still had not firmly decided on the gameplay and scenario. So the purpose of this meeting was to sit together until we had agreed on that, however long it took."

For six months, the team has been concentrating on the bones of the game, designing an intricate engine to run this state-of-the-art platform game and creating some terrific graphics and animation.

CUTTING THE RED TAPE

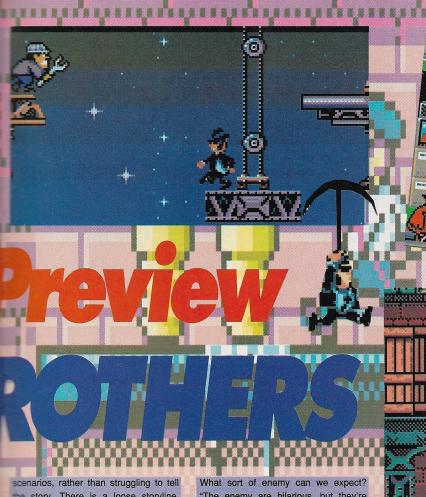

But due to a web of copyright red tape, it has only been recently that it knew what could and could not be used from the movie.

Vincent explained: "The licence is signed with Broadway Video. Of course, we can use the Ackroyd and Belushi characters, and of the music which is so prevalent in the movie, we can use the main tunes, the Peter Gunn Theme and Everybody Needs Somebody will be included."

Although the team can use the characters, it must steer away from many elements of the film script. I asked Vincent if this was causing problems?

"On the contrary! I think that most of the movie licence games that have tried to stick to the script have failed miserably, simply because film is one thing and a computer game is something else.

We can do what we like with the characters and we can incorporate enjoyable and playable gameplay scenarios, rather than struggling to tell be story. There is a loose storyline, hereby you must get the Blues Brothers on stage for a concert at the and of the game."

The game is being developed on most machines, including 16-bit, consoles and hand helds. I asked how me team intended to make the game appeal to such a wide audience?

Project co-ordinator, Jean Michel: Frst, we've got these great characters no everybody knows and loves, and e're aiming for platform gameplay as strong as Mario Brothers — we're all Mario mad and so I guess you could say the game is our main influence."

Graphic artist and Amiga designer Olivier Conado continued: "The design of the main sprites and the way they animate is really important.

Ackroyd was much smaller and slimmer than Belushi and so in the game he'll be able to move faster and jump higher. The animation for Belushi is more lumbering, but he will be stronger. We love the way they move in synchronization – that's great fun.

OUT FOR THE COUNT

Based on what was decided in the meeting, the game is going to be five massive levels, each the equivalent of 50 screens.

Vincent described the game so far:
"You start off in a large department store, and you've got to take lots of evators up to the roof."

Two people will be able to control sach character and, as in Super Mario, sou'll be able help or hinder each other.

What sort of enemy can we expect? "The enemy are hilarious, but they're designed to be very difficult to overcome.

In the store, old ladies with trollies get in the way, waiters throw plates and these hard-nut rockers chase you throughout the level."

Will the Brothers be armed? "No, you will have to identify possible weaponry, such as boxes to throw at the enemy – it seemed inappropriate to have them throwing a constant flow of ninja stars or battle axes. There will be many things to collect such as; musical notes, teddy bears for extra energy and records."

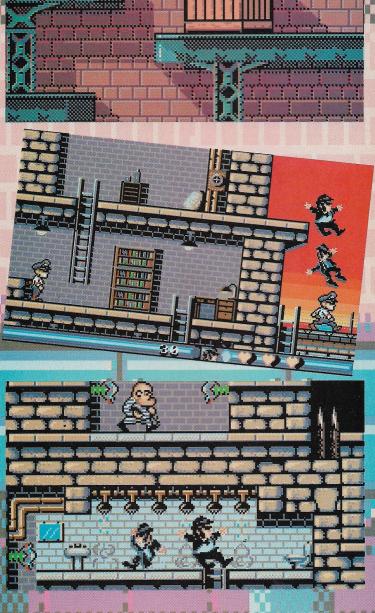

The game will move into a warehouse, a prison, the sewers and finally the town where you must get them to the concert.

Olivier explained their approach to the game's design: "We're trying to use original elements, such as avoiding acid baths. In one level, the enemy takes the form of graffiti artists who try and squirt you with their paint.

My favourite design is the Prison Level, where you've got to avoid scorching hot showers, and there are these crazy doctors and psycho prisoners chasing you. In one scene, you've got to jump over the prison bunkbeds to reach the roof and escape."

The team will be working non-stop on the Blues Brothers, throughout the long, hot summer months to meet the deadline.

Check out the fruits of its labour this autumn – the game promises to be something well worth waiting for.

GO-GLOBAL

Go-Global edited by Leslie 'there's no business like show bizness' Bunder

MUSIC... Masses and masses of fab and funky sounds have been making their way into the GX offices. First off, those masters of the eccentric,

Definition Of Sound have brought out a real corker of a debut album. Love and Life: A Journey With The Chameleons contains their two singles,
Wear Your Love Like Heaven and Now Is Tomorrow.

If you are looking for the definitive dance album this year, then DOS have produced the goods, 11 tracks taking you from rock to pop, through to hippy shaking and electro popping, get down to your nearest record store and get the good groove.

Check out DOS on tour starting June 28 in The Leadmill, Sheffield and finishing July 7 at the Marquee, London and covering other major cities in between.

Just been listening to the new KLF PD demo, Last Train To Transcentral. If you are looking for one of the funkiest demos around, check this out. It's an accurate Amiga version of The KLF hit song in perfect sound quality. Available at most leading PD libraries.

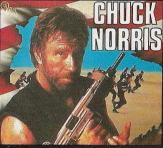

Other summer releases include Michael Jackson and his Dangerous album and Guns N' Roses Use Your Illusion 1 and 2

MOVIES... Now that the Cannes Film Festival is over, what goodies can we expect over the coming months? The answer is tons and tons of motion picture mayhem. Bruce Willis looks likely to play Buffalo Bill Cody in The Epic Adventures Of Hickok and Cody.

Out nationwide very shortly is Leslie Nielsen in The Naked Gun 2.5 - The Smell Of Fear (15). If you laughed to the point of gut busting and cried out in ecstasy (steady on there Leslie - Ed) to The Naked Gun, get ready for more crazy movie action.

The Comic Strip are at it again with yet another controversial comedy, Kill The Pope (15) staring Robbie Coltrane. The film is all about, er... killing the pope.

VIDEOS... Chuck Norris is back. Delta Force 2 (18) has our hero Chuck out to rid the world of Columbian drug baddies after Chuck's best-friend is bumped off. Lots of action, quite a few killings and Chuck being Chuck means Delta Force 2 gets an Uzi rating of 10 out of 10.

TV... Satellite TV station
Lifestyle will be screening a
Princess Diana special on 1 July at 3.10pm. Called, wait for it... Princess Diana - A Celebration. So will Di be admitting her love for Mario and Co, or maybe the fact she's got a Super Famicom for Wills to help him to recover.

INDEED

What is life really like in the Pizza world, well the gals in Mystic Pizza surely know the answers and they're quite cute as well!

If you think of yourself as an international bright young thing, then take a peek at the latest Moving Sound radio cassette recorder from decks for non-stop music playback, 20 watt music power output for sound trashing mayhem and built in condenser mic for recording outside sounds. There's also a three band equaliser for getting the sound right and of course FM radio for tuning in to the hippest radio shows in town. As a sound system to take around town, the AW7298 is ideal as you will be looking good moving and a grooving. Priced around £60 from all good outlets.

Want to get yourself a free top 30 cassette? Then all you need do is collect the tokens from special packs of KP Hula Hoops, Skips or Discos. Get yourself 36 tokens and stake your claim to the cassette of your choice. Be quick though, as the special packs run out at the end of July.

Didn't we have some screwballs write in this week! This is just what I like to see - nothing too serious in this cold hard world of ours. Something to give us a bit of a chuckle in those quiet moments on freezing summer evenings. Write to: X-IT, Games-X, Europa House, Adlington Park, Macclesfield, Cheshire SK10 4NP.

Games-X, but I would like to make a few points (here we go again, armchair experts - Unc).

Don't be such a wet blanket. Uncl. When somebody asks you to venture an opinion, give it, everyone is entitled to their own view - even you. Go on, live a

Finally, why not set up a dating agency for those lonely hearts addicted to their computers - uncles are supposed to do these things! You can start the ball rolling by setting me up with Caroline Machin (why, who's she? - Unc).

I've provided you with my address just in case you want to give me a job. Scot Symonds, Norwich.

By 'eck this lad's got some gob! I'm afraid you're not good looking enough to work on Games-X, Scot - someone less fussy might offer you a job, though,

So you want me to express true and honest opinions on kit. Fact is I do that anyway, I just try to balance the pros and cons and leave you to make up your own mind. Believe me, if I thought something was a heap of garbage I'd tell you!

Make your own women arrangements you lazy tig - mind you from the state of your photo I would imagine you do need help catching the lassies!

LEFTER FROM/A LA

I like X-it as it is more light-hearted than other computer magazine letter pages (don't I just love letters like this - Unc).

Keep Go-Global whatever you do, it's terrific. In issue six Leslie Bunder asked what end to start the Jelly Tots. Well, if you look in the top left hand corner, it says tear here with little arrows (there you go Boy, easy eh? Just where you'll get the little arrows from I don't know! - Unc).

Please can you straighten out your games reviews. Its difficult to read them on the side especially when they're not the same way round. I like the length of them though (glad you like something about them - Unc) - a taster of the game with a rating, just right!

I also liked your article on girls and computers. Thank goodness someone recognises we exist.

Can you let me know more about Sonic the Hedgehog, I think he looks a bit good. Oh, and where can I get some details on the SAM Coupé.

I liked the football match report, can you lét me know about any future matches. In fact I enjoyed the mag so much I'm going to place a regular order for it at my newsagent.

Melanie Taylor, Bury St Edmunds.

Great to know that the ladies read Games-X.

So you don't like the reviews on their sides. Admittedly the printers messed things up in a couple of issues by placing reviews different ways round on a spread, but what's the hardship

Yo, shalom dudes, I'm MC Rebee, the world's first Jewish rapper and I'm a major fan of Games-X, expecially Go-Global which is well kosher, in fact it's nearly as kickin' as

I've been reading it ever since the paper boy got mixed up and delivered it instead of the Jerusalem Post. I'd call it serendipity but the medical term is dvslexia

I take it to synagogue on Saturday, cleverly hidden in my prayer book, and read it during the boring bits of the service. Unfortunately, there are so many boring bits, that I frequently get to the end of the mag before the end of the service.

Consequently I think you should increase the amount of editorial, by regularly adding an MC Rebee colour supplement, not only would this solve my Saturday morning blues, but it would allow me to read about my fave subject - MYSELF! (Naturally, I would be happy to provide the copy, for a suitably large fee).

Incidentally, I am currently looking for a major software house to market my new game - BAGEL ATTACK, if you are interested in this, or want details of where you can see me playing my Kosher House Music this summer, contact my manager on 081 958 9323. I'll even give a discount to people turning up to gigs, with a copy of GX (now I can't say fairer than that!)

May all your children do well in Super Mario World.

PS There aren't enough 8s in your phone number!

MC Rebee, Edgware, AKA Little Tel Aviv.

What can I say, talk about being upstaged!

Right then MC, I managed to get a software house interested in your game. KoshaWare will be contacting your agent in the near future for detailed design plans on Bagel Attack. They're not too sure about the name though and think maybe pretzel would go down better than bagel. If that's a sticking point I would go for the cream cheese angle.

My usual fee for this type of arrangement is 60 per cent of the royalties over the next 25 years. However, seeing as you're a religious man and that all the proceeds of the game will be going to your synagogue we'll reduce that to 55 per cent over 30 years. Can't be fairer than that, can I?I

about turning the page on its side - it certainly gives us more scope to give you a better looking page.

Sonic will be out on the Mega Drive at the end of June - watch out for a serious review of it in GX. You can get some details on the SAM by giving 0792 700300 a tinkle.

I wish more people would order the mag from their newsie. Just because it isn't on the shelf doesn't mean he can't get it for you - they really are quite helpful chappies.

I am getting an Atari 520STE Turbo Pack in a few weeks time and I will want penpals for cheats and tips. So why doesn't your mag have a penpal page because I will use it!

Also on the front of issue six it says "Still only 60p". Does this mean that in the near future you will be increasing the price? Not that I am too bothered as you are practically giving the mag away anyway.

P Clavering, Bolton.

Do you want a penpal page? The only way I'm going to find out is if you let me know - opinions please!

Sharp aren't you, P Clavering of Bolton! There are no immediate plans for a price rise, but if you think we're giving the mag away, what the heck I'll get it put up to 99p next week - only kidding!

Hello, this is Kevin Smith (get lost! -Dr X). I would like you to now that I have collected every Games-X so far, and I was wondering wether you could bring out a binder to keep the mags in.

Please let me no if you diside to bring one out.

Kevin Smith, Hemal Hempstead.

The answer is quite simply, we don't know. If there is enough demand we'll go for it - so do you want binders folks?

Good to see you use recycled paper, Kevin, how about recycling your dictionary every now and again!

I think your magazine is the best for value and much better than C (I just can't let you keep running the opposition down like this - Unc), but it could be improved in four ways:

Free gifts.

- PC and Game Boy Gallup charts.
- A new way of rating games, eg marking them out of 100 or maybe 1000.
- More hand held reviews.
- You could also do more comps.

How about buying me an Amiga 500 and Game Boy, because my Dad won't! I will never stop buying your cool magazine.

C Hobcroft, Chester.

Want value for your 60p don't you!

- How about a Testarossa with every Games-X?
- We do print PC and Game Boy charts, only both these are once a month.
- If you want games scored out of 100 or 1000, why not multiply our score by either five or 50!
- Don't you read our mag, we already do at least three hand held reviews a week.
- More compos? How does one a week grab you?

If you want some better gear go out and rob a bank, or better still, con your mum.

WHAT'S NEW

We've been reading your mag since issue two and we have both found it very interesting (only interesting? - Unc). Got a couple of questions for you.

When will the new smaller version of the Atari Lynx be on sale in this country?

Will the PC Engine GT ever be available in this country, and will the price go down to below £200?

Marty & Dick, Peterborough.

I've never had a letter from a "we' before, Siamese twins are we?

The smaller Lynx should officially be on sale in the UK later on in the year, but Atari is prone to change its mind, so don't take this as gospel. As for the GT, well, how long is a piece of string. NEC is saying nothing and it's unlikely we'll get any fresh news in the near future. Love to see it here though, at a price everyone could afford.

SIMPSON REQUEST

I am aching to know whether the Simpsons game is going to be the same as the the arcade one.

Arinze Walters, Greenford,

I don't think I'm going to give the game away on this one. Read our news pages and watch for the review.

GRAWLER

This is probably the best ever computer magazine I have ever read. Please excuse the grovelling, but I really need a snazzy Games-X T-shirt.

I think you review all the games really well. I love all the posters. Your magazine has made my life free and easy, especially X-it! The piccy is of me making my TV debut in a children's programme.

Mark 'Snivvler' Penn, NFA.

Where do you live, Mark?

If you want a Games-X T-shirt go and buy a white one and paint the logo on yourself, you revolting groveller you! If you think I'm going to let everyone know who you are and what prog you're going to star in... – life can be a real drag!

A better quality piccy and who knows, you might have been a real star.

HEAVY STUFF

I've got an idea for a feature or two. What's inside the box of various computers and consoles (wow! – Unc).

I'm very interested in electronics (I bet you are! – Unc) and would like to see what's inside a PC Engine, Game Boy or Amiga.

Keep up the good work. No photo coz I've got enough heavy metal T-shirts (thought you might – Unc).

Martyn Comerie, Nottingham.

Listen Martyn, there is no way I'm going to get someone to rip open all our machines just for your own self-gratification! I'm sure all the tech-heads would like to see the innards, but this is a light entertainment mag — you know for gamers. Do behave!

WHAT IS HE SHE?

Is Dr X male or female? Why does he have a GBH sign on his groovy jumper? Where has all his hair gone?

Sorry about all the questions Unc, I'm just nosey. That reminds me we haven't seen you yet, so come on, what do you look like?

Alastair Imrie, Prestbury.

Someone from Prestbury, just up the road! (it's down actually – Dr X) For all you know laddie you might have seen me already, but if anyone would like to send in a representation of Unc, please do, we'll print the better ones.

Dr X is sexless. The GBH sign stands for Grey Balding Head. The hair fell out when the doc was all but a babe!! (excuse me! GBH means Grievous Bodily Harm, so watch it, matey – Dr X)

OUTER LIMITS...

This is really more like it, lots and lots of letters. A few weeks ago I tried to start a Fiona Howarth fan club — no response. What's up doesn't anyone think our Fi is a bit of a cracker?

And what of the rest of the team? Are they not worthy of more attention than you miserable creeps want to give them? Who in your carefully considered opinion is the the best reviewer? Write in and tell me what you think of the fan-dippydozzy Games-X team.
