PLAYSTATION GOES SUB £200

Everyone knows that Sony are set to launch their PlayStation in September but GamesMaster have unearthed other details that you won't have seen anywhere else yet.

The machine will launch for

The machine will launch for £299, a full one hundred pounds less than the Saturn. No game will be included but expect some kind of special offer (possibly Ridge Racer at half price). As it gets closer to Christmas some retailers are bound to knock the price down by £10-£20. More exciting though is the news that in Japan the price of the PlayStation is already plummeting. A new model is launched on the 21st of July called the SCPH 3000 for the equivalent of £225. To reach this phenomenally low price Sony have removed a couple of nonvital components. The video output that was used for high with the impact cables. Don't worry though, this will make absolutely no difference to the machine.

Sales of the PlayStation in Japan have now sailed through the one million mark, taking even Sony by surprise. This has also led to a further price reduction in the existing unit of 25%. A source close to Sony commented to GamesMaster, "You've seen what we can do in Japan now that we have sold a million units. When we sell a million in Europe we'll be able to slash the price over there as well."

This means that if Sony hit their sales expectations for the year after the launch, by Christmas 1996 the PlayStation will be retailing for £200, or less. As it stands, Sony have sold much more software abroad than they thought they would, enabling them to reduce their price. If that happens here, it'll go down even lower.

Casting our minds back, this new pricepoint almost matches what the SNES and Mega Drive first cost when they arrived four years ago.

The Saturn Is Here!

The Saturn will be on sale in the UK from the 8th of July. It'll be bundled with Virtua Fighter and will cost £399. Originally the launch was planned for September 2nd but Sega have moved it forward in an attempt to steal Sony's thunder. See our Saturn feature on page 12 for more info.

World-Wide Saturn

Datel will be bringing out a Universal Adaptor for the Saturn for £39.99. Released on 29th of June, it'll allow any Saturn to play games from any country. This is Good news for anyone who's bought an import Saturn as, for under the cost of a single game, they'll be able to buy any of the cheaper (and English speaking) official titles. It also means you'll be able to test out those wacky Jap titles that never make it over here.

THE CROW RETURNS – CAW!

definition TVs has gone along

By now you must have seen The Crow, the brilliant film starring the very talented, but very dead Brandon Lee. Film of the year or what? Well Acclaim have figured that doing a game of that one would be a little late so they went one better and have signed up the sequel to do the business on – The Crow: City of Angels.

Details are sketchy at the moment but Acclaim are making an interactive game rather than a limp platform conversion. The game is scheduled to hit the shelves sometime late next year. Be afraid.

/Same Price Shock!

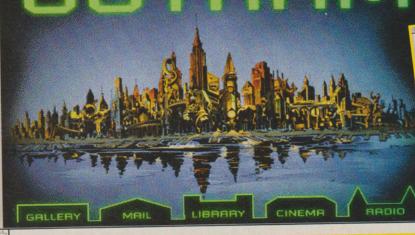

New boys Goldstar have launched their version of the 3DO at £349, that's £50 less than everyone was expecting it to retail at. Still, £349 is actually the price that the Panasonic 3DO has been discounted to in many high street stores. Ah well, maybe it'll confuse German buyers when it's launched there later this month ahead of the Panasonic 3DO.

On The Run

Remember Harrison Ford and the replicants who seemed suspiciously human? They starred in Ridley Scott's cult sci-fi thriller, Blade Runner. Well now Virgin have linked up with the Blade Runner partnership to produce an interactive game based on the film. It's surprising that no one has ever thought of turning Blade Runner into a game before as lots of classic titles like Rise of the Dragon, Burn: Cycle and Snatcher obviously drew much of their inspiration from this groundbreaking movie. Virgin claim it won't just be a rehash of the film, it'll be a "truly interactive experience." Let's hope so. If you don't know what all the fuss is about you could always try to win a copy of Blade Runner the video on page 7.

Sega and Sony's Monopoly Broken

For some time it seemed likely that Sony and Sega would have total control over the software available for their new consoles. However, now sources close to both companies suggest that this may not be the case. It's alleged that flaws in the CD protection systems used for both Sony and Sega discs might mean that third party developers could legally, if a little sneakily, produce games without having to get them approved or paying the two giants their whopping 'license' fee. In the long run this means that it will be much more difficult for Sega and Sony to keep the prices of their discs artificially high and could lead to cheaper games for the new formats. Of course, they may choose to do a deal with the big third parties like Sega did with EA and Codies.

JELLY BABIE

If you thought that Jelly Babies were sweets for squares then take a look at their new image. These guys are now hip, as well as chewy. They have formed their own band with Brilliant Leads on guitar, Big Heart on sax, Bubbles on vocals, Booful on bass, Baby Bonny on tamborine and bumper on drums (look I know it sounds daft now but it'll all make sense when you see the questions).

We've teamed up the Jelly Babies people ('cos we like eating them, the babies, not the people) to bring you this top compo. Five winners will get a Sony Walkman plus a Jelly Babies party bag with a tape (featuring Take That, Jazzy Jeff, Michelle Gayle and CJ Lewis), a base-ball cap, a T shirt and a week's supply of jelly babies.

Not only that but 20 runners up will win the party bags. Just answer these three questions and send 'em in to Who Loves Ya Jelly Baby, GamesMaster Magazine, Future Publishing, 30 Monmouth Street, Bath, Avon BA1 2BW. Entries must FORNON THE 8th OF JULY!

After all the waiting and all the hype it's finally happened. Yes, the Saturn has arrived some two months ahead of schedule. The standard bundle contains a Saturn, a joypad and Virtua Fighter and costs £399.

You can now buy Clockwork Knight (£39.99), Sega International Victory Goal (£44.99) and Daytona USA (£49.99). Two further titles – Panzer Dragoon and Pebble Beach Golf – are expected in a couple of weeks time. The Saturn wasn't due to hit the shelves until September 2nd on the fabled 'Saturnday' but in an attempt to outmaneouvre Sony, Sega decided on an early, pre-emptive launch.

While the Saturn wasn't the first next generation console to hit the market (the Jaguar and 3DO got there first) it's expected to make quite an impact. At £399 it's certainly not cheap, but what you get for your money is a machine powered by two 32-bit processors with dedicated graphics and sound chips that can handle, respectively, 500,000 polygons and 32 sound channels.

Of course, this would mean nothing without the software to make use of its capabilities. Luckily with the Saturn you also buy into Sega's strong arcade catalogue with games like Virtua Fighter 2 and Sega Rally already in the pipeline. Original titles like Grand Chaser and Bug are proving that Sega can produce quality titles outside of the arcade as well.

There are other sides to both super consoles that are worth considering. Both the Saturn and PlayStation have MPEG compatibility so that, for the price of an upgrade card, you can watch a wide range of movies and music videos on CD. Japanese sources suggest that a keyboard, hard drive and modem will also be made available for the Saturn at some point, basically turning it into a high-end PC.

Nevertheless, a dark cloud hovers over the otherwise bright future of Sega's new baby. That cloud's name is Sony.

Coming in at a price of £399 Sega are taking a dangerous gamble that Sony won't go for long term profit (in software sales) and pull the PlayStation's price down to rock bottom as discussed in our lead news story. Whether Sony decide on this strategy or not, heavy discounting on both super consoles looks certain in the frantic money-grabbing runup to Christmas.

Ready For Launch

hese are the titles that will be available from the 8th of July onwards:

Virtua Fighter

The classic polygon beatem-up comes free with your Saturn! Fluid movement and a rough and tumble feel make this great fun to play, especially on two-player. Sega claim that the small graphics glitches that spoiled the Jap version have been fixed for the UK release.

Sega International Victory Goal

Looking a lot like FIFA on the 3DO this is a truly 3D game of footy with multiple viewpoints and some top 'over the shoulder' goal-scoring action. The players are well animated and realistic enough to draw you in. We'll have to check out the speed of the PAL version and let you know.

Clockwork Knight

A very pretty platformer with a singing doll called Chelsea. You get to fence around with your key and hitch a ride on speeding toy trains. The main problem with the import version was that it was much too easy. Sega assure us that the difficulty level has been upped for the European market.

Counting Down

These titles should be available by the end of July

Panzer Dragoon

Ride around on a dragon against some incredible backdrops while shooting the flying cities, giant worms and air yachts that spin towards you. It certainly looks stunning but worries remain about the difficulty level of this next gen blaster, especially as it's likely to cost you £50.

The racing game that eaused more arguments than any other. Is it totally top or pathetically poor? Is it better than Ridge Racer? The one scratch on its bodywork is an update glitch that spoils the redrawing of the background and it's unlikely this'll be changed for the UK. Still, when you're racing it isn't very noticeable.

Pebble Beach Golf

The weakest of Sega's first batch of Saturn titles is a PC-ish golf sim featuring digitised players and courses. Okay to look at but rather too fiddly to give long-term enjoyment. We're sure there are much better sports games to come.

FOREVER

Mega Drive/SNES/PC/Jaguar/Saturn/PlayStation

Biggest movie of the year, biggest game of the year. The Batman bandwagon rolls on (not to mention over the opposition). It's amazing how the antics of some poor deluded, eccentric millionaire who thinks he's a giant bat has made billions of people part with cash to own some piece of crap merchandising with a bat emblem on it. But at least the movies always been good. Acclaim snapped up the rights to the latest instalment of the Batman legend almost before the movie had even been thought about.

Movie licenses have this horrible habit of turning into very bad platform games or bad beatem-ups. With Batman Forever, Acclaim have played it safe and turned it into a scrolling beat-em-up, a la Streets of Rage or Final Fight but thrown in missions, secret rooms and tons of other stuff that adds more gameplay than any other license. The obvious aim of the game is to find and defeat the Riddler and Two Face.

You will have about five or six fights on each level, the rest of the time you will be seeking out your mission objectives. Of course you have loads of bat gadgets to play with. After all, what else would Batman be without all those wonderful toys? The game has a one or two involved in Batman Forever the movie. It was expected to recoup its $100 million dollar costs in one week.

The game has been designed using the very latest which means that they film real people doing the moves to make them smoother and more realistic. This usually leads to some great animation and, from the version we have seen, well let's just say that we haven't been disappointed.

We were given the chance to take a first look at the game and what we've seen so far is pretty cool. Pete went and got all excited over the chance to be Robin, but no one would We all played in competitive mode and repeatedly whipped

The animation is certainly some of the best we have seen and the game retains the dark mysterious image of the films really well. Next month, as batmania sweeps through the country with the sort of force not felt since Jurassic Park, we'll have even more info on the game of the biggest film ever.

PRIMAL RAGE

Mega Drive/SNES/32X/PC/3D0/ Saturn/

PlayStation

Let's return to a time when men were men, women were Raquel Welch and dinosaurs were just plain ugly. In the world of Primal Rage King Kong meets Jurassic Park and a titanic battle for world domination ensues as prehistoric apes and overgrown lizards fight it out. The brilliant claymation made the arcade machine an instant hit and now Time Warner are trying to bring this visual style to every format imaginable. On the more see your little followers who mill about, get squashed and have something to do with the amount of mana you collect. The special attacks are amazing, with the prehistoric critters spouting flame and freezing clouds of fog at every opportunity. There's gore as well with multi-coloured blood spilling all over the nice volcanic landscape when you successfully perform a finishing move. Certainly the Saturn and PlayStation versions could be close to arcade perfection but will the Mega Drive really be able to cope? Hopefully, the gameplay will pull it through.

Still, this is one of the biggest releases this by yet another film license.

Look at those pillars. You just don't get quality masonry like that these days. No you don't.

Son of DKC returns with more levels full of bananas and barrels, but the question is, will they actually change anything from the original's winning formula? Well, for a start this game stars iddy rather than Donkey Diddy rather than Donkey and they're going for the love interest angle with Diddy's girlfriend Dixie who gets in on all the action. There's certainly a lot in DKC 2 with over a hundred levels. This should please critics of the first game who complained that, while it looked great, it was definitely too easy. Apparently the graphics have been tweaked too, but can the SNES really pump out sprites more polished than those in the original?

Dixie tumbles from a great height. Will Diddy save her?

It's not as bad as all that, the roots will show in a few weeks and I can have it cut.

Itimate Future Games gets 'Loaded'

First in-depth preview of one of the goriest shoot-em-ups heading for PlayStation Central

Always first with Next Generation news, games and gossip — don't leave the 16-bit world without it

HEART OF DARKNESS

PlayStation

Enter a sinister fantasy world where spectres and maneating plants dog your every step. The graphics are what's bound to sell this title. It combines fully rendered 3D cut sequences with a very pretty 2D gaming environment along the lines of Donkey Kong Country.

The main character, Andy, has over 1600 frames of animation and he can interact with almost anything on screen. The game is puzzle-based so that you make your way through the 256 screens trying to find out which objects you need and where you need to use them. Still, it's definitely the intricate drawing of shadows and reflections that'll keep you coming back for more. Spooky.

Ah, bless 'im! Doesn't little Andy look cute in this fully rendered cut sequence? Okay, maybe not.

TAKE CONTROL IN THIS 3D BALL-BLASTER. MUST BE BETTER THAN THAT TROY RIKMAN ANYWAY.

Sinbad the sailor meets Aladdin in this rendered strategy/adventure/shoot-em-up Apart from having graphics that'll take your breath away it's got Sim City-style gameplay that'll make sure you're absorbed for hours. First build your castle (preferably on top of some nasty creatures) and then go out chasing all manner of mythical beasts (dragons, genies, kraken and so on) in a bid to shoot them and steal their mana so that you can build an even bigger castle. Of course, more mana also means bigger spells so you can throw meteors at your pesky competitors, other wizards who are trying to rise through the ranks just like you. If the link-up option is supported across all three formats this is one you'll just have to buy whichever machine you pick.

It's the only game where you can use buildings as weapons. Drop your castle on an army of griffons.

Once the novelty of actually having Wonder Woman going at it with The Flash or Superman dies then you realise that this is just a shallow beat-em-up that desperately wants to be the next Mortal Kombat but comes nowhere near. The special moves aren't special and all the characters seem to come from the kindergarten school of animation, i.e – dodgy.

Justice League is really for young kids. They don't care if the fighting isn't all that precise or well balanced. All they want to do is BE Batman or Superman but if you're over 13 you'll hate this. It's clearly a VF/Tekken copy but it's a jolly good one. All the characters move fluidly and each has his or her special and not so special moves. The fighters are from all over the galaxy, apparently, so some of them take on a less than human appearance enabling you to find out what it's like to do battle with a man sized preying mantis or a bloke made out of rock. The camera whizzes about all over the shop, as they do, and driving music and fullsome speech punctuate the action.

But hey, it's crunch time. Bad news, it's not as good as Tekken or VF, plain and simple. In a head to head it comes a close third. If you were planning on buying one of the nice new shiny consoles just to play one of the 3D fighters on and already own a PC you may just think again but the rest of us demand the real thing. On anything below a DX2-66 PC it is rather jerky too. So, if you've got a PC, it's great, as good as it could possibly be, but the new super consoles still do it a little better. WILL GROVES

Lawns. You can erect deck chairs on them, lay patios over them or even chase your neighbour's dog off them. When that summer feeling really hits you might even put up a net, reach for some balls and smash away. But what do you do if you live in a flat or your dad's a gardening Nazi? You could certainly do a lot worse than pick up this new Pete Sampras game.

'New' should be used carefully here as most of the gameplay has been taken from the original. What has changed is the game engine. It now has an isometric perspective with scaling on the players as they run towards and away from the net. This takes a while to get used to but once mastered you'll was in the first Sampras. Mind you, the mode where the court scrolls from side to side could be dangerous if you get sea-sick.

Once again the J-Cart ensures that you can have proper four-player doubles matches and the inevitable inter-team arguments are great fun. The one-player option is always the chink in any sports game's armour and the small selection of players could make Sampras '96 too repetitive after a while, even when you've switched to the (thankfully) much harder 'Pro' mode. The artificial intelligence isn't too hot either so you can get away with serving your opponent into oblivion by hitting the same spot on the left of the court. That said, there are some interesting new additions like the power serve and the excellent 'soft' shots that die at your opponent's feet. What would've been nice is some kind of player improvement option, so you could acquire more deadly shots as you progress, rather than being able to use them all to begin with In all, Sampras may have gained a few more strings to its racquet but in the process it's lost that keen, competitive edge that kept it one step ahead of its rival

PETE WILTON

Water tennis is becoming increasingly popular, to play you need a special velcro ball ike this one. Makes serving tough though.

Good scaling and animation though the courts could be a bit clearer.

Great speech and sound samples make for an authentically tense atmosphere.

Doesn't have quite the outstanding zing of the original but still very solid indeed.

Let's face it guys. Would you honestly go to see a naff movie featuring someone who has never recovered from appearing in one of his films wearing ballet tights? Real macho Jean. Anyway, the film was predictably naff but the game makes it look like a 24-carat

Bad is a real short word, but it describes just about every element of Timecop perfectly. Take a look at the beat-em-up elements. Timecop falls into the classic trap that the very first beatem-ups used to fall into. All you have to do is crouch and kick and you can beat everyone. Very poor.

Next it's the turn of the animators to get a roasting. They must have spent ages getting the Van Damme character to move as smoothly as he does. Then they do absolutely nothing with the rest of the characters in the game. Everyone else just walks around like robots. It's almost funny.

Timecop is one of the most linear games ever. To get through each of the levels you walk in a straight line until you get to the end, jumping or crouching occasionally. What's the point? I also hate the way that if you kill someone (not difficult), walk so that the screen scrolls, then walk back the guy magically reappears.

If you sat an infinite number of monkeys in front of an infinite number of development kits they still wouldn't come up with anything as awful as this. Timecop will appear regularly in those worst film licences features that crop up and it certainly does no credit to what could have been an interesting

Let's get a few facts straight. Nowadays everyone knows you don't have to be a boffin to use a PC.

Everyone also knows that PCs are the biggest thing to hit the home since the video cassette recorder. So the big question is why do all computer magazines talk to readers as if they're experts? Answer — they don't. Not anymore. PC Guide talks to you like real people and we talk about the things that you're interested in — we don't get bogged down with databases and we don't fill over 50% of the magazine with dull reviews. into space. Hooray!

There was a time, not long ago, when shoot-em-ups were the thing to make. Videogames were built on them. These days they seem to be slightly out of favour. Yes, there are plenty of games with shooting in them, but where are the traditional waves of aliens and the feeling of progress?

The 32X has been a guilty party in this as well. Where were the shoot-em-ups that caught the public eye and got them to part with their cash? Nowhere, and that's why the 32X is now perched precariously on the edge of the famous dumper, just dying to join Betamax videos and British cars in the world of cute but useless trash.

But here's Motherbase and it's not going to take all this lying down. It's got all the usual baddies and linear action of its forbears plus some natty looking polygon based graphics, not to mention a couple of neat gameplay twists.

First of all, take a look around the page and you'll see the graphics. Pretty smart, eh? You always move in the same direction at the same angle, but what gives the looks a fair bit of variety is the polygon animation.

Check out the first boss, for instance. He's a huge green robot that rarely fits on the screen all at once and even though it doesn't really come across in still shots, when he moves he doesn't look like a Blue Peter shoebox contraption. He looks like a huge doesn't like you. The gameplay tries for variety too. As well as the odd friendly ship that you can control you can take over some of the ships that are attacking. Not only does this effectively give you a one hit shield, but it allows you to use that ship's particuliar attack pattern. This is officially a Smart Thing.

What's less smart, inevitably, is the 32X itself. It just can't handle all the polygons at enough speed to really carry it off. There's a great game in here but it's crippled by a sluggish feel and the odd bit of slowdown on top of that. This is a good idea and prettily done but it doesn't cut the mustard

There is Only One Power

Can you get too much of a good thing? Well yes I suppose you can. That Take That single that was at number one forever (well it felt like forever) was supposedly a good thing but we'd definitely had enough of that. But could you ever have enough of Doom? It would be a bit like winning a £20 million jackpot on the lottery and then picking up another hundred quid the following week. You just couldn't get enough. So for all of you who haven't been turned into slobbering mass-murdering chainsaw wielding maniacs yet, here's some more Doom.

This package features the original version of Doom with an extra chapter bolted on to the end. That's an extra nine levels that have been specially designed by the gods, er, I mean lads at Id. Forget all those crappy WAD levels that you can pick up on shareware, these are designed by the people who made the game so expect some incredibly difficult stages. As if all that wasn't enough GT have also bunged Heretic on the CD as well. Now everyone knows that Heretic is as good as, if not better than the original Doom.

For less than £30 you get two storming games. Alright so they may not be the newest things ever and the extra Doom levels could have done with some new graphics and a few previously unseen monsters, but this is still pound for pound one of the best shoot-em-up, mow-em-down packages you can get for your PC. If you've already got the original Doom and Heretic then it's probably not worth investing in but if you're missing any of these then say hello to the package you just have to buy.

LES ELLIS

Oops. Don't think I really wanted to annoy that bloke.

This is Heretic. It's just as gross as Doom. This guy explodes in the usual guts everywhere style.

Getting this close to a Demon is not really a good idea. Unless you're invincible and have a BFG.

changed but it still outpaces and outlooks most other shoot-em-ups.

SOUNDS

Roars, grunts, screams and lots of lovely gunfire. Would you really want anything else?

GAMEPLAY

Kill, kill, death, destruction, guns, chainsaws and, er, more killing. It's per-chainsaw wielding-fect.

LIFESPAN

As if Doom wasn't difficult enough those new levels are rock hard.

The extra Doom levels are very tough and with Heretic thrown in this is a great package. Forget it if you already have either but if you haven't then what are you waiting for?

main problem with this, however, is that the game tends to be a bit on the easy side. I can't see many people taking too long to complete this. On the other hand, the amazing visuals and amusing storyline could easily keep you coming back once you've finished it.

Full Throttle is a real eye opener. It's got the funniest story-line and scenes of any game I have come across and although it's far too linear it's still of the best adventures ever produced. LES ELLIS

Just incredible.

Why is it that something like Star Trek and the Next Generation (not to mention all the spin offs) has become so much of a cult? It's like a way of life to some people. They walk around wearing Star Trek costumes with their stupid fake communicators making stupid fake communicator noises. And if that wasn't bad enough you can actually buy books and tapes that teach you how to speak Klingon. What the pants is going on?

Here's a quick message for all these ultrasad type of Trekkies. It doesn't apply to all of them, I've met some of the normal ones who are content just to watch and enjoy the TV shows. It isn't real. Captains Kirk and Picard don't exist. The Klingons aren't a real race so you'll never have the chance to speak to them in their native tongue. What's the point of learning to speak bloody Klingon. Go and learn

German or something more useful.

And as for that bloke who translated the bible into Klingon, you have too much free time on your hands. That guy is straight jacket material if ever I saw it.

However, Trekkies (or just plain old fans of good games) have the chance to actually take part in a real series of Star Trek adventures thanks to this latest offering from MicroProse. But just remember, it isn't real. There's no need to cry if a member of your away team gets wasted (unless of course it's the extremely fanciable coun-

She had that really annoying son in the first few series.

SECOND OPINION

This is fine for real Trek-heads but there are some bits of the game, like the annoyingly long cut-scenes, that get on your nerves after a while. It takes more than the odd bulgy-headed alien to make this kind of Eliteish warping about fascinating. I think Les has been

Then when you come across something too big to kill (like a planet or a space station) you send out an away team. Then you tell them what to do as well

The producers of this have really gone for atmosphere. Using the actual actor's voices splatterings of video sequences make

Of course, the away team sections can't keep up this standard and lapse into regular adventure game style graphics.

Even though I'm not a Trekkie I still found myself being drawn into the action and getting uncomfortably familiar with the characters (except for that Counsellor Troi who was having none of it). STTNGTFU (kind of rolls off the tongue doesn't it?) is the best of the batch of Star Trek games so far with some slick production and addictive adventures.

A gem for your PC. LES ELLIS

I've often wondered if the guy who made up the Klingons did it as a joke. GamesMaster

"A FINAL UNITY"

THE NEW TO = 3/1

Keeps you coming back for more and remember, I'm not a Trekkie.

OVERALL

Final Unity is an absolute must for any Star Trek fans If you're not a fan then it's still a pretty enjoyable feast of order giving and space adventuring. Good stuff.

The away team sequences are a bit flat but the ship and video sequences are great.

Well you've got the real crew talking to you, how much better could you really want it to be?

Although the adventure sections are a little easy there is enough here to present a decent challenge.

his is the rather tasty intro sequence to the game showing just how one should deal with cheating German gits who try to overtake you.

'And Schumacher has managed to pass Damon Hill on the last corner, there's no way he can lose now. But wait, Damon got him with a rocket launcher. But that huge juggernaut just took Hill out with a mini gun. He won't be pleased about that." This is how a Murray Walker commentary could sound in the future if the latest offering from Bullfrog is anything to go by. You can be as good a racer as you like but if you can't handle a missile launcher then don't bother showing up because this ain't racing by the rules.

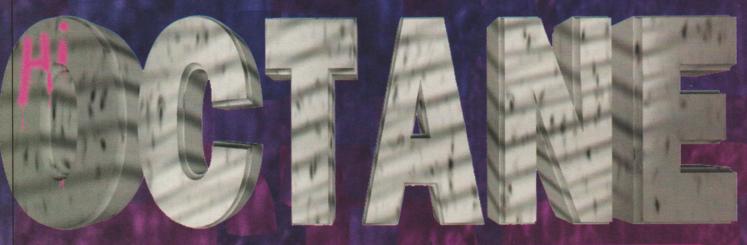

Forget your Ridge Racers with their conventional vehicles and tracks, Hi Octane has so much more to offer. For starters there are loads of great looking circuits that are packed with features. There are several pit style areas to charge up weapons, shields and fuel but that's not all. Most of the tracks have short cuts, tunnels and special hidden bits revealing more depth than any racing game has the right to possess.

The actual racing isn't the fastest thing on four wheels and the graphics look suspiciously like those in Magic Carpet. It's a bit of a same engine, different game type of affair. But who really cares when it's as bloody good as this? Bullfrog have even managed to cover up that annoying watch-the-track-andbackground-build-up-and-magically-appearas-you-race-around problem that killed Daytona on the Saturn. With the use of some mist and one or two other little tricks everything comes at you as smooth as you like.

Hi Octane is about as satisfying as that once in a lifetime occasion when you actually get an elastic band to fire off into someone's eye. You'd never believe the immense amount of elation you get from chasing down the bloke who just flew by you blasting your back end and inserting a couple of carefully placed missiles up his tail pipe. Never mind. It's the thought that counts not the aeons that have passed in-between.

The years haven't been as unkind to Flashback as I expected. If you manage to get through that 'oh no, not again' feeling it's still a playable if annoyingly finicky arcade adventure. The graphics don't look that bad either although this probably has more to do with the ancient-looking 16-bit releases that some companies still churn out than the incredible quality of Flashback. To state the bleeding obvious the idea is that you leap about in animated fashion shooting guards and solving puzzles (although age has affected Conrad's agility – It's pretty tough to get him to do a running jump). If you get bored with this there are always the new cinematic bits added for Cd-i to keep you occupied. Still, it's not exactly a Burn: Cycle beater, is it? Maybe it was as innovative in its day but arcade platformers have moved on since then, haven't they? Well, haven't they?

Truth to tell maybe not that far. The Prince of Persias and Flashbacks of this world created the mould and everyone else has more or less followed it, often making worse games in the process. On other systems you might want to go out and buy Another World or BlackHawk but if you want pure puzzle action on Cd-i Flashback is, surprisingly, it. Maybe that says more about the Cd-i than Flashback.

Stealing Lucius's eggs is also a really bad idea.

He is definitely not a thunder god. Obviously.

So you didn't get a part in Mortal Kombat II and your morphing wasn't good enough for Rise. What now? Well, you probably ended up in Ultra Vortex, the Jag's latest beat-em-up. I mean, you get B-movies where washed-up Hollywood no-hopers strut their stuff, so why not B-games where their digitised equivalents do the same?

The reason why not is that it produces a second-rate game. Whether you pick Liu Kang wanna-be Lucius or Supervisor reject Grok, the end result is much the same. You'll soon get bored with the limited moves and a bit of red and green blood doesn't make up for the appalling jumping and dodgy hit detection. What's more the CPU opponents are profoundly stupid as all you have to do is crouch, wait for them to walk towards you and keep punching. Even if they escape once they'll soon come shuffling back for some more.

Speed-wise you'll die of boredom if you don't pick the Turbo mode.
This is quite fast but then, with the limited moves, it bloody well should be. It's a bit sad when you have to look for a game's good points in a slick character select screen and reasonable digitised speech but if you didn't then you'd have nothing good to say about the *Ultra Vortex*es of this world. I hope that somebody somewhere is praying for the soul of the Jag or, to be more specific, praying for an astounding version of MK3. The trouble is, if this does happen, it'll make every single Jag game look totally inadequate... Well, more inadequate than they already look that is.

As with all the bosses, the best move to use on this one is the good old teleport (DOWN and C). Using the Homing Force weapon is also generally the best for all bosses as wherever you are, you're always taking health off them. The only real problem with the first boss is the discs it fires at you, and they can usually be avoided without too much trouble.

Keep on the Homing Force weapon - it's best to keep at least one of them. That way, when one runs out, you've got another as back-up – and keep teleporting. This boss can be attacked easily from either side, so the best advice is to keep on the move.

the actual boss is pretty easy, it's just the extra weapons that cause problems. Wait until the bullets are almost upon you, then teleport to the other side of the screen. Remember to keep firing, though, as the boss WILL eventually be destroyed. REMEMBER, BE PATIENT!

It's a TOUGHY. The fact that you're on the top of a train and it's Foggy, doesn't Morphing into a huge wolfy thing may be clever and wonderful at parties but it's still easy to kill. And that. Yawn and wait for the bloke to change, laugh at how unscary he obviously is, and then go for the jugular. Again, he's slooow, so it's easy to work out his routine. Teleport and take him from behind – oo-er.

This should open the barred gate to the shard. Send another team member through the barred gate to the switch and leave the person there. Take your final team member through portal two and throw the switch at the end. This puts the shard in an open position and leaves you free to scarper.

The key to this world is proper use of the teleporters. It's very complicated so bear with us.

Worf and Data should be amongst the crew you beam down because they can absorb plenty of damage. You arrive in the top right hand corner of the level. Go into the T-shaped room and pick up the stone you see on the right. Now step onto the first of four teleporters. Avoid all the teleporters in the new room and head to a doorway in the upper left corner of the level. Leave one team member by the switch and punch in 3, 1, 2.

Now return to the original teleporters and step on the second one. The room you are now in contains pulsing lasers as before. Once again leave a team member beside leave a team member beside the switches and punch in 0, 2, 3, 4, 3.

That's the tricky bits out of the way. The rest is pretty obvious provided you're careful but here are a few pointers anyway:

Always leave only one away team member beside the switches or they'll all be trapped. In the last room hang a left at the wall and pass into the hidden room. Step on the transporter and voila!

on the transporter and voila! The final shard is sitting on the pedestal, you've finished the game and your life is complete. Well, sort of.

Either they're about to dance or one of those playground push-fights is about to erupt.

$2,000 Trick

If you finish a track but don't get the record time, you can still get $2,000 if the next track's record time is higher than the time you got. Just reset the game and you'll receive the record time bonus. For example, on track 3 the record time is 1:04, and you finish in 1:10. That's no record, but track 4's. record time is 1:21, and your track 3 and you'll be at the money screen after track 3, but you'll receive the $2,000 record time bonus.

DEAR GAMESMASTER,

Mmm, I seem to be completely useless at NBA Live '95. Any ideas on how I could up my score rate? Or what?

Sid Lewis, Dagenham

Well, as it happens I can offer you the chance to practice your shooting unmolested. How? Well, just start the game as normal, press and hold A and press start. All the other blokes will freeze and you can practice your shooting.

No, run over there! No not there, THERE! By that line. That's it.

DEAR GAMESMASTER.

Blimey, James Pond 3's very very big and I'm having some trouble ploughing through it, to be honest. Give us some help then big guy.

Excuse us while we butt in on you lot exchanging views on Red Dwarf for a second. Mr Dwarf fan, you may be up on Red Dwarf but you're way down on Tekken. How can you say it isn't fluid? It's the smoothest beat-em-up there is But it's your right to disagree with us, this is a free country after all, just so long as you know you're wrong. By the way, we don't actually care which song those lyrics came from, but they're pretty dumb. Now all we have to do is sit back and wait for all those Red Dwarf letters to flood in again.

Dear GM

A few things I need to get sorted. 1. Why have you discontinued the binders? I have diligently bought every issue of your magnificent publication. Issues 1-12 are in a shiny black binder, but issues 13 onwards are in piles around my room, causing frequent toe on paper collisions and bruises aplenty. Where can I get a new binder? 2. Speaking of old issues, I was reading Tim's first ever review in the mag (way back in issue 11). It contained an amusingly childish argument between him and Les about a game called Wiz 'n' Liz. Top (as you insist on saying) stuff. 3. Why is everyone so biased against the Jaguar? I've got one and it's great. It has Doom, Tempest 2000, Alien Vs Predator, Iron Soldier and Wolfenstein with Need for Speed, NBA Jam and Wing Commander 3 coming soon. Yet everyone is still eager to label it as a flop. Why?

4. Has anyone in the office seen True Romance? Great film. Right, having made my point(s), I'll be off on my merry way. Ben Martin, Inverness

1. The binders are now so hard to get hold off because Les nicked them all and has used them to line the walls of his black room. Maybe you should raid his place (if you dare) to get some. 2. Yes it was childish wasn't it? But I'm still here and where's Tim now huh? Anyone seen him lately? Didn't think so heh heh.

3. We agree, the Jaquar has some great games but it also has a lot of bad ones. It has also sold so few machines in this country that it can hardly be called a roaring success. Still, Atari have big plans for it so there's life in the old cat yet.

4. Yes yes. Jesus, is that the best movie you can come up with? Why doesn't someone try to come up with a movie that we haven't seen, that'll be a challenge.

Dear GM

I'm well 'ard so don't mess with me. Answer these questions or else I'll come for you and knock (er, cut that word out - Will) out of you bunch of (and that one). Now enough of the threats, let's get down to the questions. 1. When will the Ultra 64 be released exactly?

2. How much will it be?

3. Do you ever do decent reviews for the CD-i?

4. When will the Street Fighter and Mortal Kombat movies be released in this country?

5. Is the 3D0 worth getting? Asher Threlfall, Heysham Remember. I know where you all live so print this letter.

You may well know where we all live Asher but you sure as hell couldn't spell the addresses. You must be one of those school bullies who has to substi-tute threats for all that missing brain power. The last time I saw that many spelling mistakes it was in a kindergarten bad spelling contest. Anyway, as you say, let's get on with the questions.

1. April next year.

2. £250.

3. Sure, when they get around to releasing decent games for it.

4. Street Fighter's out and it's crap.

MK comes out in September/October.

Oh, and the guys are all looking forward to you coming round. Les's eyes were positively gleaming when I showed him your letter and your address. Be afraid, be very afraid.

Dear GM

How's life ladz? I would like to start by pointing out that Jungle is crap. It sounds like a chronically depressed car alarm gone wrong. Why do people get off on a fast drum beat and a (change this to strange - Will) geezer going, "Woar, make some noise" etc? Grunge will one day rule the world and Pantera will be up there showing them all how to play. Diamond Darrel is the best guitarist this planet has seen. Les will know what I'm on about. He's a good bloke, I mean, he likes Doom doesn't he?

Now onto the game talk. I have 32X and am pleased with the twin RISC chips. I have VR Deluxe, Doom, Virtua Star Wars, MK2 and MotoCross for my £170 PC beater. I love 'em all and strongly believe that my 32X was a good purchase. Alright so MotoCross is a bit lacking but the others easily make up for this. If you have the cash but not enough for a Saturn, I advise you to get a 32X.

Now my prediction is that the Saturn will sell like Pantera CDs (very well) and the sad PlayStation will sell like Kylie CDs. Sega has such a massive empire that it just can't fail. As for Ridge Racer vs Daytona, what a walk over. What history has Sony got in games? Bugger all in comparison with the almighty Sega.

Oh yes, and why do Nintendo still bother? Yes, the Ultra 64 for under £200. (put something like ballcocks in here - Will) more like. Apart from Cruisin' USA and Killer Instinct (both fairly good games, I admit) where are they in the arcade? Sega have Virtua everything (nearly). Go away Nintendo. Tim (Timinator) Necklen, Nowhere.

Oh dear. I asked Les about it, he just laughed, said Darrel was crap and mentioned names like Vandenberg, Sambora, Clapton and Sykes. Check them out for great guitarists. Do I detect from your letter that you are a Sega fan? Nothing wrong with that of course but here are some facts that you had better think about.

The 32X is a waste of money at the moment. Sega could quite easily fit into the back pocket of Sony's empire, they are that much bigger than them. You're quite right about Ridge Racery Daytona being a walk over, but in Ridgs Racer's Favour I have to say. As for Nintendo, let's just see what happens when they launch Ultra next year. I think you'll be in for a hell of a surprise. Oh and grunge taking over the world. Does that mean we get a grungey thrash version of the national anthem? Pantera? You're joking aren't you? We don't tolerate jitters here (apart from Les) so don't slag our Kylie.
