WITH "ROAD RASH II" AND "LOTUS TURBO CHALLENGE", YOU CAN PLAY HEAD TO HEAD WITH YOUR DEAR OLD DAD.

So the good news is that Road Rash II™ and Lotus Turbo Challenge™ are designed for two players to race against each other on the screen.

The bad news is that the old man thinks he has what it takes to give me "a driving lesson".

WELL WHOOPIE...

Road Rash II is even nastier than the original, your rivals more underhand and their weapons more lethal. And the prize money is higher to buy nitro-equipped superbikes.

Happily the rules haven't changed a whole lot.

There still aren't any.

And if dad is expecting Lotus Turbo Challenge to be more sedate, he better think again.

This is a frighteningly fast duel between either Lotus Elans or Lotus Esprits through eight terrifying stages and 60 timed check points.

And the sort of atrocious weather conditions that would encourage a polar bear to stay in and watch TV.

Real arcade stuff!

So come on dad, make my day!

GAMES

I don't know about you lot, but after Christmas, I'm shagged. Everyone always goes on about how rested and relaxed they are come the new year, but I find 12 days of liqueur-fuelled argy bargy with the relatives and an orgy of turkey'n'pud guzzling enough to render me useless for the following fortnight. It's only the Absolutely Tragic GamesMaster Christmas Board Game (see last issue) that keeps me going. So I'm glad to be back in the land of the video game, to be honest.

Jim Douglas yesterday. Well, alright, it wasn't yesterday. It was about a month ago, and he looks different now. He's got a perm.

but three dimensions! As well as 3D pages, we've also got a 3D Chaos Engine poster, especially drawn for us by utterly top Judge Dredd Magazine artist Stephen Sampson.

And of course, we've got the Chaos Engine itself, a welcome return to form for the Bitmaps after the disappointing Magic Pockets.

If you feel the need to tell us anything about the magazine, Dominik's Column or games in general, drop me a line at Oy! Jim You Git, GamesMaster, Future Publishing, 29 Monmouth Street, Bath, Avon BA1 2BW, and I'll print it if it's funny. Still, there's far too much news for me to carry on with such fluff. Upwards!

The normally bustling GamesMaster Rig was unusually quiet for a few days last month. Even the GamesMaster himself stepped down from his favourite video screen. The reason? GamesMaster Live! was held in Birmingham, and the whole rig crew, including Dominik and chrome

Four of the worst Dyna Blaster players ever join our Dominik on stage for a "challenge". They were cack.

Anyway, if you're new to the mag and especially if you got a games machine for Christmas, welcome! I hope we'll be spending many happy months together.

To kick the new year off to a brain-busting start, we've got a 3D spectacular to complement our line-up of rollicking reviews, pert previews and other stuff. If you've already found the 3D glasses on the front of this month's mag, take them off. It's not time for them yet. Instead, you should watch out for the pages with our special 3D symbol. Once you spot it, flex those specs, and you'll be treated to a blast of glorious graphics in not one, not two,

YOU WOULDN'T BELIEVE IT. LAST MONTH, SOME PEOPLE ACTUALLY WROTE "PAGE X COMPO" ON THEIR COMPO ENTRIES. HOW WE LAUGHED.

LAUGH? I NEARLY... etc.

As the nation gears up for Red Nose Day 4, Madchester software supremos Ocean are doing their best to ensure that things go along in rib-tickling style with their very own Red Nose Computer Game, Sleepwalker.

Red Nose day is a smart fund-raising event organised by Comic Relief, the charity founded by all manner of funny folk, which has been designed to help deserving courses both here and abroad.

Each year there's a TV telethon thing and all manner of humour-related cash collecting going on all over the country.

Particularly memorable was last year's awareness-heightening yet dreadful "Let's Stonk" single.

The aim of the Sleepwalker game is for the player (in the role of a dog) to prevent his sleepwalking owner from coming to any harm as he precariously somnambulates his way through various treacherous locations.

But the most important thing, of course, is that about £5 from the sale of each copy of the game will go to Comic Relief. Also, each game comes with a sponsorship form with which players can generate even more cash for the cause by playing Sleepwalker for money.

Copies of Sleepwalker should be in the shops by the time you read this. It'll be available on Amiga, PC and ST. So go and buy one, alright?

Here we have the, er, title screen for... oh, what's it called. Hang on, don't tell. It was on the tip of my tongue. Erm... Streetwalker? Erm...

Sleepwalker! That's it! Oh, it's funny when that happens isn't it. It completely went out of my head. Just like that. Anyway, on with the caption. Oh.

Hundreds of happy show-goers await the next Bluehat. Waaaaaahhh! Bad luck!

MASTER ABANDONS RIG!

dome, went up to oversee events. Of course, the team from GamesMaster magazine was there too – offering visitors to the show the chance to be among the first to buy the historic first issue of the magazine.

Once safely into the exhibition and in possession of a copy of the mag, gamers went on to see a number of weird, wonderful, wacky and wild events in celebration of the wonder that is the video game.

Weird were the twin Ocean helter skelters (that went all blancmangey at the Future Show, as readers of last month's Network will recall). Normally proud and fine erections, they had their roofs sawn off in order to fit into the NEC hall.

Wonderful were the GamesMaster shows; mini versions of the TV show comprising of Dyna Blaster, Streetfighter 2 and Sonic 2 challenges.

Blanka – only intervention from security guards saved him from a sound pummeling.

Wacky were the US Gold sumo wrestler outfits, enabling budding E Hondas to slap and push each other around without actually coming to much harm.

And wild were the excellent and incredible BMX stunt team doing daily displays next to the GamesMaster magazine stand. Respect.

But no-one had a wilder time than those poor software folk shoe-horned into unfortunate game-character costumes. Colin Curly from the Quavers ads had a nasty trip down the stairs one day which resulted in his ear coming off, and the next day he was set about by a team of savoury-snack-hating kiddies who pushed him to the floor and started kicking his big polystyrene head.

Even the internationally feared Blanka was no match for the team of half-pint assailants who managed to put stickers over his eyes. Unfortunately, his clumsy rubber hands were unable to peel them off and his electricity field wouldn't work and only intervention from some burly security guards could save him from a severe pounding.

Among other characters to receive short shrift from the paying costumers were Zool (punched from behind), Chun-Li (jossled in crowded corridors) and the Tomatoes from Bill's Tomato game (elbowed and mocked).

And a fine time was had by all, except perhaps for people who had travelled a long distance to see the Thallion stand...

Colin Curly – advocate of many a savoury snack – a broken ear and a nasty trip down the stairs.

At the start of the show this stand was full of mags. At the end, it was empty. Hooray!

Sonic 2 challenge. Bet you thought that Dominik was going to pick you, Mr

Two bloody days I had to stand there with that clipboard. Two bloody days. Reward? Cah!

CHEAP HAND-JOB FROM QUICKSHOT

Quickshot, the people who make all the joysticks, recently unveiled a budget-level handheld machine called the Supervision and, to everyone's surprise, it's actually alright. The machine costs £40, and games (of which there are currently 18) go for about £9 each.

The machine is supposed to fill the, if you insist, "niche" in the market between those ghastly LCD game and watch things and the top-flight big balls handhelds like the Game Boy and Game Gear.

The machine is actually quite good-looking, with a bendy rubber bit connecting the control pad to the screen, allowing two (count 'em) positions to diminish the inevitable lighting difficulties that you get with a non-backlit screen.

And the games aren't too bad either, the two we tested being an acceptable bat and ball thing called Crystball and a blaster called Tasac 2010 for some reason.

The problem, however, is the screen which despite the bendy rubber thing and a contrast control seems to be bordering on useless. Any fast-moving objects simply disappear from view or blur so badly you can't tell if (in the case of Tasac 2010) they're aliens or power-ups.

However, if you are entirely sure that there aren't any new games you need one month, it might just be worth a look.

ACTION GENIE AND GAME REPLAY

Much as we like to come off as being entirely perfect in every way, we've got a confession to make. As you may have noticed, last month's Action Replay and Game Genie codes were, er, a bit muddled up. Well, in fact the codes were fine, but the headlines were in the wrong place.

The upshot of this was that new owners of either system who didn't spot the basic style of the codes (Action Replay codes generally start with a number, while Game Genie codes don't) might have become terribly confused.

Apologies to all inconvenienced. The person responsible has gone to the electric chair.

HARD(WARE) UP!

The price war between computer hardware companies which occurred over the festive period is about to come to an abrupt end.

Why? Well you have probably heard on the news lately lots of rather dull postulating on how weak the pound is against just about every foreign currency going – especially the Japanese Yen. Consequently, Sega, who bring in their machines from Japan, have been forced to raise their prices. Starting sometime next year the Mega Drive will not only look different but will be more expensive. Just how expensive is still unknown.

All this seems a little ironic as the new look Mega Drive was introduced to cut production costs over in Japan. Sega refused to confirm the price rises, but then they would, wouldn't they?

However, Sega are not alone in this problem area as Commodore have announced a blanket £30 price increase on all their models. Although their machines are all produced in the UK, they do rely on foreign components for the assembly process and so they have been hit just as hard as anyone else by the weak pound.

Nintendo have yet to announce any price rises or drops.

ONWARD VIRGIN FOOTBALLERS

Dino Dini, creator of the Kick Off series of games has signed with Virgin Games to produce the follow-up to Kick Off 2. Dino, currently holder of the GamesMaster award for having a christian name most similar to his surname, is reckoned by Virgin to be producing the best football game ever.

The product is tentatively being called Goal! as the Kick Off name is owned by Anco. It will be out on the Amiga and ST in late spring, and on the Mega Drive and SNES in 1994. Dino commented "I believe that Virgin will do for soccer what they've done so effectively for snooker." It's entirely within the realms of possibility that he's not incorrect in this belief.

GET YOUR NOSE IN A BOOK

If you're a hardened gamesplayer (and let's face it, who'd be stupid enough to admit that they weren't?), you'll be annoyed with all those stupid jumpers and socks you got for Christmas. Well be annoyed no longer, because now is the time to swap them for something that is far more interesting.

Computer Manuals is the natty name of a company who produce all sorts of high-quality books for the committed gamer. There are dozens of titles, all varying widely within the computer and console genre, including such classic bookshelf-friendly gems as Awesome Mega Drive Secrets (269pp, £9.99), Super Mario World Game Secrets (280pp, £11.95), the Official Sega Mega Drive Power Tips Book (112pp £9.99), written by our very own Neil West, and Super NES Games Secrets (288pp, £9.95).

If you're looking for the sort of depth which only a large and solid book can give, these are definitely worth a look. Packed with screens, words and a useful numbering system at the bottom of each page to ensure easy access and long-lasting reading pleasure, they're obviously not as great (nor indeed as funny) as GamesMaster. But they do have a wealth of detail, and can also be used for propping open doors and throwing at small children.

Check them out, you'll learn something new every time you open them, and if you read them from cover to cover, you'll be such an expert afterwards, you can bore folk down at the swimming baths on Thursday afternoons. They're produced by Computer Manuals, 50 James Road, Tyseley, Birmingham, B11 2BA. Telephone 021 706 6000. Phone or write for a full price list.

They do look just like books of the sort you often see all around us.

A1200 UPDATE

We can deduce that the user of this machine is left-handed, and never seems to close the windows he opens. Messy git.

Pushover, shown here in all its weirdness, is one of the games which should be updated for the A1200, with full enhancements.

Ah. Here we have a rather gorgeous chasm of some description. And you can be sure it'll be on the A1200 as well.

faster and plays more like a 386 PC", which for us non techies means it runs a lot faster. Mindscape haven't yet decided whether or not to enhance forthcoming games such as Captive 2 and Battletoads for the A1200.

US Gold have no plans to develop games for the machine until some time next year. At the moment they are busy testing all their current titles to see if any of them are greatly enhanced by the new machine's power. As yet though there is no news on just what games will be improved, or even just made compatible.

Accolade spokesman Alan Wellsman said, "Our current release, Waxworks, is fully compatible with the A1200 but as for new products, well, Amiga games for us are going to be very thin on the ground as we are concentrating on PC and console products."

As you would expect Ocean are going full steam ahead to support the new machine. Of their existing products these are the titles that will still work on the new machine... Hook, Pushover, Robocop 3, Addams Family 2, Wizkid, Epic, Lethal Weapon, Terminator 2, Cool World, Sim Ant, Sim Earth, Robosport and WWF European Rampage. Also under development are A1200 specific versions of Lethal Weapon, WWF European Rampage, Cool World, Sleep Walker and Universal Monsters. More good news from the Manchester giant, all future

Wing Commander, that space opera of epic proportions, will be out on the A1200. So you can see such astonishing things as a bloke getting fried in his craft by the evil Kilrathi – those scum, those alien mutoid swine, those totally gittish sods with their evil ways and... (Snip. Ed).

Now that the new Commodore wonder machine has been launched you may be wondering what is in the pipeline for it software wise. Well we approached most of the bigger software houses to find out what, if anything, was in development for the 32-bit machine.

As we reported in the Clash Of The 32-Bit Titans piece last month, the only other machine comparable, in price and specifications, to the A1200 is the Atari Falcon 030. Although many companies are developing for the Atari machine, the affordable 1Mb version won't be released until the spring – leaving Commodore plenty of room to surge ahead and establish the A1200.

Mindscape have firmly denied rumours that there is an A1200 specific version of Wing Commander. Spokesperson James Morris commented, "There is no 1200 version but the normal Amiga version runs products will have versions specifically for the A1200.

WORLD

Everybody needs a hero, but if you decide to make yours a rather weird-looking guy with spindly limbs, be prepared to be ridiculed in the playground/workplace/pub. Oh, and sorry that this caption isn't really relevant to the A1200. All the important stuff is written below.

London boys Domark have no games in development yet, although they will be producing software for the machine. However as yet they are unsure exactly when the process will start. Among their existing products the 3D Construction Kit 2 will work on the machine, but there is no news yet on AV-8B Harrier.

Lemmings fans will be thrilled to hear that all three Lemmings games (Lemmings, Oh No More Lemmings and Lemmings 2) are all A1200 compatible. Psygnosis are also in the process of unloading their heavy guns of development on Commodore's new baby. No titles are confirmed yet though.

Core Design, publishers of the excellent Curse of Enchantia, may well be developing Chuck Rock 2 for the A1200. But until that is confirmed all they will be drawn on is that Curse of Enchantia is totally compatible.

As most of you will already know, Gremlin have developed Zool as their first A1200 game with a version of Nigel Mansell's World Championship to follow. Obviously more titles should follow next year. As for Gremlin's current bunch of titles, well there are loads which are compatible, but at the time of going to press, a list of these wasn't available.

Oliver Dennis, from Acclaim's PR agency, commented, "Our three titles at the moment are all compatible – Krusty's Fun House, Alien 3 and Bart Simpson. As for the future, there are no plans at the moment".

Adventure specialists Sierra have stopped producing games for the Amiga in America and there is going to be a lull while the European division gets some new product developed (it takes time you know). However, while there are no plans at the moment, in the not too distant future there may well be some titles appearing which are either A1200 specific or at least compatible with the new machine.

Virgin have no specific A1200 games under development. All new Amiga games which are developed though will be fully compatible. As for the old ones, well Dune, Floor 13, KGB, Lure of the Temptress, Motorhead, Pool, Realms, Shuttle and Viz are all compatible but unfortunately Whirlwind Snooker and Legend of Kyrandia aren't.

So, at the moment, only a handful of companies are committing themselves to the new machine.

As the user base grows and the A1200 can be seen to be a viable development option, more and more companies will doubtless begin to address the compatibility issue and start to develop Amiga games with both the earlier Commodore machines and the A1200 in mind. At the moment, compatibility seems to be high. Let's hope it stays that way.

SCOTOPHOBIA

"Fear of the dark", actually. Which, in an effective, if not luridly contrived way, leads us into the grim and musty world of Alone In The Dark – the latest PC role-playing extravaganza from Infogrames.

The owner of a seedy, crusty old manor house has recently committed suicide. Local police have investigated and have closed the case with a firm – er – whatever sound a case makes when it's being closed firmly... You play a private snoop – male or female – who feels that the contents of the case are far more bulging than has yet been disclosed. (That's enough "case" metaphors. Ed.) So, in true Scooby Doo style, you rather stupidly take a ride down to the place and wander around looking for clues and encountering zombies, ghouls and other undesirables.

Although we don't regularly review PC games, this one is highly worthy of a mention. The graphics are brilliantly drawn, the characters move slickly and fluidly – but, although there is a game in there, there's still rather too much aimless wandering. The fight scenes, though, are hilarious, and offer a hint as to how this sort of game could develop once the technology becomes more versatile.

Alone In The Dark was released on 19 November – before GamesMaster magazine hit the streets. For all of its flaws, it's certainly an excellent showcase for a programming technique which, as it becomes enhanced, could do away with all that tedious pointing and clicking and lead us in the direction of the true interactive and cinematic role-playing game.

Swirling mists of ghoulish decadence. Vile, unearthly spectres of emotion shadowing your every thought and action. The foul fate of the damned becomes a magnet for your hellish intent. Next week, we'll be looking at another track from Marillion's "lost" album...

AMSTRAD JUMP ONTO SEGA TRAIN

The Mega PC has a sliding panel which either uncovers the disk drive or, if you tweak it to the right, the cartridge port. Very neat design, we say.

The Sega market and the PC market haven't often come into a great deal of contact. But now the two are linked in a weird sort of marriage.

Amstrad, famous for several computer-type things, has invented the Mega PC.

The machine is basically a 386SX, with Super VGA monitor, 40Mb hard drive, Ad-Lib sound card, 1Mb RAM, a joystick, a mouse and a beige Mega Drive joystick. This is provided because at the front of the PC there's a cartridge port into which you can plug any Mega Drive game.

The cost of the Mega PC is £999, which, if you're prepared to do some fairly rudimentary arithmetic, could surprise you in an upwardly expense-wise way. In other words, it's cheaper to buy an equivalent 386SX PC and a Sega Mega Drive. The only downer is that you don't get the nice monitor to play the Mega Drive games through.

Still, if you're interested, take your wad down to the High Street, where this baby should be just sitting, waiting for you to purchase it.

RUMOURS

In the absence of any real news, we've made some up. Well, not quite. At any given time there are hundreds of juicy rumours floating about, so each month we'll print the slightly more plausible ones.

● Here's a rather interesting one currently doing the rounds in Japan and America. Console giants NEC are considering launching the Turbo Duo CD ROM console in this country next year. Anyone who reads this month's Played in Japan feature on pages 44-45 will realise the pant-dampening implications of this particular rumour.

● Here's a good one. There's a new bit of kit out guaranteed to revolutionise home gaming. Called the Super Gun this device connects to a SCART TV and enables you to play arcade PCBs (printed circuit boards) on your own television. Imagine your very own Streetfighter or Bomber Man 93 game in your own home. Watch this space for more info.

● Rumour has it that the follow-up to the Giger influenced adventure Darkseed which is previewed in this issue on page 32 will be programmed specifically for the new A1200.

A Cyberdreams spokesperson commented that they only found out about the new machine at the end of November but are now keen to see how far they can push it.

● This one has been doing the rounds for some time now, although it seems to have a fair bit of actual real truth to it. UK developers Argonaut have come up with a chip for the SNES which enables you to utilise super-fast 3D images. The chip will be built into their carts during development. It may make them a little more expensive but it should be worth it for more realistic 3D games.

● The word from Action Replay manufacturers Dattel is that, after the success of their Mega Drive, SNES, NES and Game Boy Action Replay carts, they are now developing carts to be used by the Master System and Game Gear. These projects are still in the early stages of development although no firm release dates have yet been set.

CANNON FODDER

MACHINE: AMIGA

PUBLISHER: VIRGIN

After their success with Sensible Soccer those boys at Sensible Software are about to release a war game for the Amiga - Cannon Fodder.

Unlike Mega-Lo-Mania where you have to build up your armies to kill the opposition, you already control an army. The main aim of the game is to conquer all.

Using the mouse, you point and click on where you want your troops to go. Armed to the teeth with guns and grenades you must take on all manner of troops and even an army of Predators (miniaturised, of course). Hostage rescue missions and search and destroy scenarios are all in there too along with other types of military campaigns.

So what amounts to be a cross between Sensible Soccer and Mega-Lo-Mania turned war game shall hit the streets sometime next year. Here's hoping the notion that war games are boring will be blown out of the water with heavy artillery.

Leg it over the bridges and ambush the huts - laying waste to innocence as you go. Great.

This is the four-man ambush where, er, you get four men to ambush someone... (No it isn't. Ed.) Well, it's probably something to do with shooting something. Those cross-hairs are a bit of a giveaway, you see.

Ah, now this... this is where you cross a bridge and shoot something - probably those well-camouflaged gentlemen in that dense clump of trees. (You don't know anything about this game at all, do you? Ed.)

DIARY DATES

And so we come to another glorious batch of impotent, er, important dates for all those "happening cats" who like to stay well on top of all that's fresh, hip and, well, generally cool in the crazy, mixed-up world of video gaming, daddi-o. (What are you talking about? Ed.)

JANUARY 21

Apart from being the exact date that this issue will "hit the streets", you can buy a Mega Drive game called G-Loc, today. The coin-op version is dead good. The Amiga version is crap.

JANUARY 25

Spending unfeasible amounts of money, belching loudly, tittering at the naff freebies. Yes - it's a trip to McDonald's. And, today, to celebrate the timeless wonder of the fast-food experience, Ocean release the Amiga version of McDonald Land.

Also, look out for the Lynx version of an ancient but brilliant coin-op, Joust, which should be in the shops as you read this.

JANUARY 27

Psygnosis may well give you the Creepers, today. Haw haw. Oh, that's on the Amiga, by the way.

FEBRUARY 3

Today is Reviews Ed James' birthday. So send him lots and lots of presents, sweeties and furry things. He's funny that way. We'll also be giving him the bumps in a religiously observed office ceremony which dates back to Sumerian times.

FEBRUARY 8

Streetfighter 3 released by Capcom/Nintendo on the SNES, today!! Ha! Just kidding. Bad Influence fell for it, though - look out for their - snigger - in-depth feature very soon.

FEBRUARY 9

Get all of the following for your absolutely fabulous Lynx today... Ninja Gaiden III, Super Asteroids/Missile Command double-pack and the excellent shoot-em-up Raiden.

FEBRUARY 14

Yippee, it's Valentine's Day!

Unless of course, you happen to be a bit ugly or unpopular - whereupon you won't get any cards or presents and it'll be just another ordinary day for you. Sob.

PRESS CORNER

An occasional series of jocular ribaldry at the expense of the grammatical and dramatical ineptitude of the software house press-release authors.

This month - the Revenge Of The Mutant Ambiguities.

"The noise. Yes... what is that noise? That thump... is your heartbeat... as you get set to confront the Aliens."
Ye-es. Absolutely petrifying scene-setting for Alien 3 from Acclaim.

With its hyper-supple interactivity, its hilarious gags and its crazy sound-track, Goblins 2 will have you holding your breath for hours.

Oh, really? I wish I'd remembered to pack my iron lung this morning...

Sit yourself behind the steering wheel, check your mirrors and

FEBRUARY 15

The epic RPG Eye of the Beholder gets released on the Lynx. It was a huge hit on the Amiga, but will a hand-held version really do the game justice?

Also, round about now, Thalamus offer us an Amiga game with the stupendously bizarre title of Nobby The Aardvark. Oh dear, oh dear

Oh, and for all the historical types among you, today is also February - an extremely famous Roman purification festival which is widely practiced throughout the land by, er, people who closely follow ancient Roman purification festivals. Basically, it involves a small gathering in a remote, but picturesque copse - preferably past midnight. The participants then take it in turns to dance ecstatically around a roaring fire, working themselves into a purifying frenzy by tipping water over each other's heads. This festival was actually banned by Milton Keynes council last year.

FEBRUARY 16

Thalamus deliver a spiffing Amiga title by the name of Beastmaster. It's based on the fantasy movie of the same name. Probably.

...and, hey, watch out for the X-Men and Captain Planet, two astonishingly marvellous Mega Drive games - out today.

FEBRUARY 19-21

Wembley, London. It's the 7th International Computer Show, today - apparently. Fulfil that details thang by calling 081 549 3444.

FEBRUARY 21

By this time, all of the people who received Valentine's cards seven days ago, will have discovered who actually sent them as opposed to who they originally fantasised. Lots of comforting will take place in the loos and on the stairs at break.

FEBRUARY 31

Well, that's another hearty load of rubbish for another issue. Tune in next month, when there may actually be some games released.

watch your front wheels preparing to burn rubber!

Hmmm. Gremlin's Nigel Mansell's World Championship scores an extra-high rating on the ill-phrased cliché meter.

Next month, we take a look at the thankless, clandestine careers of text translators and end-of-level boss designers.

DON'T AGREE, EH?

Here's your chance to do something about it. If you're sick of seeing the games you loathe riding the top of the charts, you can vote for your fave game and put it to the top of our Readers' Chart which will appear next month. Right on! Power to the people etc.

I'm a GamesMaster reader and my fave game is:.....on the .....

My address is .....

Run for cover! Here comes...

DOMINIK'S BIG PURPLE COLUMN

"...I've lived a life that's full etc."

Well thank you most kindly for fixing your beady eyes on my column once more. It certainly feels moist and yummy to be back between the sheets of the bulging four-poster of happiness that is GamesMaster magazine. By now, Christmas is just a distant memory, everything's either been eaten or broken, and Auntie Marisia is sober once again. I've always believed in kicking the New Year off with a bang, so it's especially tragic that this month's column is as awful as the last one. Never mind, there's always the next issue.

The first thing that has to be said is "respect" to all those who totted along to the fair city of Birmingham last month for GamesMaster Live! For those who were present, I thank you. For those who weren't, rest assured, we all bitched about you behind your back. Lots of the GamesMaster mag crew were there, including the boss "Mr" Jim Douglas, who, as well as helping me along with my live challenge commentaries (and believe me, the help was most prominent), accompanied me through the bottom of many a tall glass, as they say in the Midlands. No "respect" whatsoever to the father of one of the contestants who collared me after a show, bitterly complaining because I called his son a "tube" on stage. I can only apologise and add that (a) it was a live situation, (b) the boy is not really a tube and (c) the father is. Sorry if I caused any confusion.

DOMINIK'S TOP 5

It's time for another rundown of the five games which are filling my pants the most this month. All of the games listed are what my mother would call "a sound buy". Remember, these are only my opinions, so if you run out and buy the games and don't like them, don't complain to me, because I will find the whole thing hysterically funny.

1 Sensible Soccer 1.1 - Amiga

I know it was my number one last month, but it's still the best game ever. Its got the highest ever rating for a GamesMaster show review (97%). I'm playing it even more since the GamesMaster Live! show, because I took on the game's designer, Jon Hare, and he beat me 3-2, scoring in the very last minute. I was robbed. I will have my revenge. I think he played more than three foreign players and a re-match is imminent!

2 John Madden 93 Mega Drive

I know people are split on this. Some think it's a bit of a rip-off because there's not that much difference between this and Madden 92, but the Madden games are so stunning that even if they just changed the colour of

CLOSING CREDITS

This is the part of the column when I detail one of the people whose names appear on the credits at the end of GamesMaster. You can cut out and keep this series and all your mates will think you're sad. This month:

Cameron McAllister – Director.

Basically, Cameron decides what the show will look like. He is responsible for:

1. All those really lovely swooping camera shots.

2. Anything you see in the show and think "Coo that looks nice".
 3. My red jacket (respect to Cameron).
 4. The emergence of Auntie Marisia as a "mature" sex symbol.
 5. Being the first person in the entire world to complete Pilot Wings six million times.

6. Wearing dodgy roll neck jumpers that make him look like the Captain bloke from Tin Tin.
 7. The little voice at the start of GamesMaster telling the helicopter that it's clear to land.

Bet you feel you've known the man for years now.

Two of the Great Things In Television that wouldn't exist, were it not for Cameron McAllister, Director and all-round cardy-wearing geezer.

First – the swooshing camera. (Note in on the left and out above) And second, my red jacket. Respect, Cam, respect.

the bootlaces I would go out and buy a new version. This is slightly tougher, but it's the two-player experience that's essential. Speaking of which, if Mega Editor and GamesMaster mag contributor Neil "Neil" West is reading – I am ready for you!

because this football management sim does not take ten years of playing to complete a match. It's not as complex, but I've taken Woking to the middle regions of the Premier League. So, er, Woking must be brilliant or something like that.

3 Micro Machines

Mega Drive

This racing game was stunning on the NES and this version is even better. Race around table tops and baths in little racing cars, tanks, helicopters and other tiny ozone-destroying machines. Dead simple, but then so is Adrian Price. If you don't believe me about how good this game is, turn to page 48 and check out the mag's full review.

5 Pilotwings

Super NES

I know it's been out for a while, but this has to be one of the most original games released last year. The reasons I'm still playing it are because (a) I'm very busy usually, so I haven't had much time and (b) it's still fun to play even after you've completed it. Not that I'm that bothered, because (c) I haven't, because I'm crap.

4 Premier Manager

Amiga

Slightly more enjoyable to play on your own than US Gold's The Manager,

VILLAIN OF THE MONTH

It's that part of the column when I have a go at someone or something that's been making my nips a little bit frosty. There's an Indian restaurant in Birmingham called, inventively enough, The Taj Mahal. It advertises a strange thing called a He-Man's Grill. I (and the Editor of this fine organ, perchance), purchased the aforementioned grill and behold, it comprised of two chops, two sausages, scrambled egg and four chips. It wasn't terribly He-Man, more of a Girl's Knickers Grill. These men are

CAACK COMPETITION

Finally, it's competition time. Last month I was flooded with entries for both competitions. The postman threatened to quit as his sack was so severely strained. In fact, there were so many entries that Jim Douglas phoned me up and said "Phew! You've had a lot of entries this month, Dominik." And as for those comps, I'll announce the winners in the next issue. In the meantime, this month's Cack Competition is as follows.

Complete the following phrase in 600 words or more:

I wonder if .....

You might find it quite difficult to write on this coupon, but there you go. However, if any of the answers match mine, you'll win a Mega Drive, SNES, Amiga, Neo Geo, ZX81 and a timeshare villa in Swindon.

Until next month, my friends – be moist!

villains. Beware of any restaurant offering He-Man Grills.

DOMINIK'S FAMOUS "FRIENDS"

As promised last month, here's my exclusive rundown of teen pop sensations Take That and East 17. Both bands have been out to the rig – you'll see East 17 on a show very soon.

East 17 are so called because they come from Walthamstow, whose postal code is... E17!

Take That are so called because it rhymes with "total prat", which you are if you buy their records.

Take That, I have to admit showed signs of intelligence, but there was no intelligent life on planet East 17. Two members of the band were quite good at games, but they had a bad case of Dickheaditis. Only one member of Take That was any good.

CAACK GAME OF THE MONTH

Well, it's been a close one this month, with so many games being released in the run-up to Christmas, but the winner by a length is... every single movie/celebrity tie-in! Yup! They're all cynical attempts by "The Man" to suck you into the industrial global village of mass consumerism. (Steady on – JD). What's more, the games themselves are cack, usually.

TV NEWS

Top pop songstrel Cathy Dennis from out of the radio fully enjoys Dominik's guidance during her Mick and Mack - Global Gladiators challenge. Catch her on the 21 Jan show.

Find out weather (arf) Ulrika manages to defeat her brother on World Heroes on the 28 January. Apparently, on the day of the challenge, there was sunshine, and rain and snow, but it cleared up later on. Spooky.

Top speechchucker Steve Backley, er, isn't on in January. But here's a pic of him for the girls.

The excesses of New Year have been and gone in a dizzying orgy of spirit draining delight and mind addling adventure - let's hope the celebrity excesses of GamesMaster haven't been forgotten in the wake of this wanton celebration!

In case they have been, here's a full rundown of the treats to come over the next few weeks...

BABE BONANZA

Viewers are in for an absolute treat over the next couple of weeks, with a bevy of beauties gracing the screen. Indeed, the staff at the rig had to arrange special security measures to deal with the crowds generated by the two latest star challengers.

Cathy Dennis makes an appetising appearance on 21 January, marking the on sale date of the second issue of GamesMaster magazine in an environmentally friendly fashion. Will she master the Mega Drive or get to grips with Mick and Mack, Virgin's Global Gladiators? Who knows? Who cares? Who's watching the game?

Hot on Cathy's heels comes Ulrika Johnson, host of the Gladiators, ex TV-am weather girl and all-round

FEB 4 IS 3D DAY!

England and Arsenal striker, Ian Wright, certainly proved himself match fit earlier in the month with some soccer style antics on Super Kick Off. Thankfully the ref didn't need his glasses...

...but he will do on the 4 February for GamesMaster's exclusive 3D game playing spectacular. The 'Maelstrom 3D-Challenge' has been designed especially for the programme and can only be truly appreciated with a pair of rather natty 3D glasses perched firmly on your nozzle.

Some perfectly fitting 'specs' have been secured to the front of this magazine for your enjoyment - generous eh? Once this 3D extravaganza has been televised though, don't discard them in haste - if nothing else, you could use them to stare at Dominik Diamond's Big Purple Column. His girlfriend swears by the technique. "Nothing else works," she claimed - and we believe her.

WHAT TO DO IF YOUR GLASSES ARE MISSING...

- 1) Slap the newsagent's bonce and demand a pair.
- 2) Buy you own GamesMaster in future, don't just read your friend's lovingly fondled copy.
- 3) Steal your grandmother's wire-framed spectacles and colour in the lenses with a couple of felt tip pens.
- 4) Run backwards and forwards between TV screen and sofa to fully appreciate the 3D effect.

MS

Oh dear.

Scandinavian sweetie. She keeps it in the family on the Neo Geo beat-em-up World Heroes. Is she feeling under the weather or will sisterly love prevail when she faces her brother? There's only one way to find out. Tune in on 28 January.

HE WOULDN'T LET IT LIE

On 4 February the man with a stick... a joystick that is, appears on GamesMaster to ponder and play. Comic genius and advertising voice-over supremo Vic Reeves takes time out from his extensive research into dials to delight us all with a stroll through the living nightmare of Ocean's Sleepwalker, the official Comic Relief game.

Don that Red Nose for laughs a plenty.

For more information about SleepWalker and the third Red Nose day, turn back to the Network pages.

Hockey ace Sean Curley and Big Red Costume Wearing Ace Kevin Conway slug it out for a late February show.

Look! It's that bloke off the Double Decker adverts doing a Sleepwalker challenge. What a refreshing change!

TARGET AUDIENCES

We all know that GamesMaster is the only true test of mental agility and eye to hand co-ordination in the world. However, Gordon Burns, the presenter of the Krypton Factor, believes otherwise and aims to keep his career and pride intact. Join him on 11 February for a sure fire Super Nintendo challenge with a subtle twist on the classic Tetris. Despite his sober suit and question-master's air, he's a bit of a games star. Prepare yourself for a shock.

18 February marks the appearance of East 17, who abandon the House of Love for long enough to decimate everything in sight on Contra 3 – better known as Super Probotector in the UK, from Konami. For a fuller description of the East-ers' performance, turn the page and check out Dominik's Famous Friends.

Lastly, don't miss the GamesMaster's 'Gaming Grannies' feature or Nintendo champion Thomas Patterson. Tom takes part in a series of unsurpassed Super Nintendo head-to-head challenges, including an advanced preview of NCAA Basketball – a graphically stunning game that will soil underwear and perhaps be seen as one of the greatest sports simulations when all the other magazines catch up with reality. All this, and more top treats than your dear ol' Mum deserves on Mother's Day.

And with that, we draw a quiet veil over the comings and goings of celeb city, home of starry eyed spectacle and name-dropping nonsense.

Of course, megastars accept the GamesMaster gauntlet each and every week, but are they an essential part of the programme? If you have any opinions on this or anything else, write to:

Dominik Diamond's Purple Column

GamesMaster
Future Publishing
BATH BA1 2BW

And hey, who are we to dismiss democracy? Let us know which three celebrities you'd most like to see on GamesMaster and we'll have a quiet word with chrome dome himself. Not that we can promise anything mind you, but at least we'll be able to compile a suitably accurate top ten from your votes and laugh at anyone who plumps for Timmy Mallet. And by the way of a pert little compo, the first reader to accurately predict the chart's top three positions will win some exclusive GamesMaster goodies.

Next month, we'll be bringing you the final instalment of TV News for the current series of GamesMaster. After some six months of televised splendour, the big guy will be retiring from our screens briefly to dedicate himself to the pages of this magazine – until then though, keep watching!

Gordon Burns from the Krypton Factor tangles with the moderately ungainly Super Scope in a bizarre Tetris challenge. This is one you really ought not to miss.

G. I. Ant™ is a soldier ant. He's extremely clever, and highly trained in tactical manoeuvres. What's more he's extraordinarily strong and super smart! His latest mission is to gain access to the crazy world of Captain Rat's Treasure Caves. Very straightforward...NOT!

You see, this particular cave is a tunnel entrance to Domino Domain - a mini-world comprised of nine different continents. G.I. must negotiate many screens of mind-teasing problems. Each level has a door to the next. To open the door, the "Trigger" domino-block must be felled by causing a chain reaction with all of the other domino-blocks in that level.

SHOOT YOUR FRIENDS!

HOW DO YOU THINK THE GAME'S CREATORS CAME UP WITH ITS NAME? THINK BIKES...

Don't worry. This isn't what the game is like to play. These are in fact a couple of the builders "testing" it. When you have a go, it'll be all dark.

It's all well and good controlling rock-hard, hardware-handling heroes with a joystick, but wouldn't it be smashing if you really were, say, a space marine running around an alien-infested station, blasting the crap out of anything that moved?

Not in some sad type of CD-I interactive movie or Virtual Reality way, you understand. This would be for real. The laser gun is actually in your hand. Your surroundings are dark and ominous. There are a dozen unfriendly types out for your blood and that of your 11 fellow troopers.

What was that? It's hard to tell. Flashing lights puncture holes in the darkness which are quickly filled by the sound of screams. It's a jungle in here.

Red laser beams cut the thick smoke inches from your face. The noise came from over there! Or was it over there? There's no time to decide. You dive to the right, rolling like a pro, unleashing a stream of shots as you land, firm and unscathed, beside a ladder. The air around you is crimson with laser fire. The only way is up...

With your gun hanging around your wrist, you cautiously climb the ladder. The small bank of active green lights on your body armour seem like beacons, and the short climb lasts forever. Your head has never felt so large as you peep through the hole in the floor. Can you see anything? No, but that doesn't mean there's no-one around...

You pull yourself together and to your feet, hugging the wall. There's a rope hanging over a hole in the floor only a few feet away. Go on, make the break... You grip the rope and swing to the other side. That was close - falling into the safety netting would have made you a sitting duck.

You still are, and here are the trigger-happy enemy to prove it. Two of them. One. (Nice shooting, son.) None. But not for long. Move it! Look, another rope. It leads to the lower level. You take it, half climbing, half sliding down the three-way slope and end up swamped in a two-foot deep pool... of plastic yellow balls! Glooping sounds mock your attempts at dragging yourself out of your quicksand-like surroundings and on to an inflatable island sporting large erections. You make it, and not a moment too soon. The enemy's hot on your tail. Rapid fire Gladiator Lightning tangles with some dangerous aliens. Er...

Exploring the Labyrinth is a dangerous business. Armed goalkeepers try to prevent you from scoring. (Are you sure about this? - JD)

Deadly droids patrol the Labyrinth, blasting any careless explorers who are unfortunate enough to cross their paths.

Balls! And lots of them. These little yellow suckers litter various stages of the Labyrinth, providing soft'n'safe places for the players to dive into as they dodge incoming laser bolts. If you think this looks like the most fun you've had in years, you'd be right!

in their direction lets them know that you know.

You run for cover and clamber over icy blocks. As you dodge the huge icicles, the noise of freezing wind sends a shiver down your spine. Watch out! Laser fire from above. Quick! Take that narrow walk-way. Don't look behind you – just shoot. Climb that ladder. Over here. Now where?

There's a barely-visible hole to the left and another straight ahead. You throw yourself forwards, head-first into the blackness, and slide down the darkened tube, blasting like crazy as you emerge into the half-light. You arrive on the lower level with a splash to send dozens of blue plastic balls flying. There's no-one else here. Not yet.

Keep moving. Keep shooting. Keep your cool. And keep 'em peeled for that robot with its laser eyes...

This is The Labyrinth Of Doralia, in Cleethorpes, of all places. Its creators – Mitco Softlands and Laser Force UK Ltd – reckon it takes laser play into a new dimension by providing a more adventurous environment than its counterparts. Doralia's intended for "individuals of all ages, and any levels of fitness and ability", but you do need to be at least as tall as the 42-inch robot which is painted on the wall beside the entrance.

The scene is set from the moment you enter the changing room where you slip into your lightweight plastic body armour to which a laser pistol is attached. At this point you may well feel a little silly. But don't fret – you can't help but forget once the action has got underway.

Your fetching outfit allies you with one of two teams – red or green – and each has its own animated robot in a cage situated at opposite ends of the arena. The mechanical monsters are deactivated when they are shot 50

You just never know when one of these cybernetic fiends will pop up next. Here we find one barring the door of the gents' lav.

WHAT'S NEXT?

David Byrne of Laser Force UK Ltd reckons The Labyrinth Of Doralia is only the beginning. "The only limits are our imaginations," he says. With ideas flowing thick and fast, work has begun on new adventures, but the sites have yet to be announced. Let's hope they prove more accessible than Cleethorpes for the south of England.

There's certainly enormous potential here for bringing computer and console entertainment to life and creating more believable and interactive cinematic simulations. It looks as though real-world shoot-em-ups are just around the corner!

THE LABYRINTH VERY LOOSELY FOLLOWS THE FORMAT OF THE CRYSTAL MAZE. INTERESTING, EH?

Just one of the high-tech pieces of kit available to interact with is this cyber-cord. Alright, it's a rope. but it works and everything.

times in the chest by their opponents. Then, from the ceiling in the centre of the playfield, a target is activated. It spins slowly through 360 degrees, down and up, up and down, ready to be shot 30 times by the team responsible for deactivating a robot. The team which manages to shut down the target is declared the winner.

The 3,200 square feet, split-level playfield comprises four different themed areas: Lost Civilisation World, Ice World, Future World and Post Nuclear World.

In each world there are assorted outsized soft obstacles – some forming an integral part of the terrain, others hanging around – and appropriate sound effects to be heard. (Even though the areas aren't completely sealed off from each other and you can see and hear the other players in the arena, the spot effects don't mingle to taint the atmosphere.)

With the darkness, smoke, lasers, strobe lights, spot lights and sounds, the playfield resembles a Duran Duran video, or the set of GamesMaster even.

Running around The Labyrinth Of Doralia is a blast in every possible sense of the word. Confidence courses through your veins. It doesn't matter if you fall over. The body armour and laser gun are both made from light-weight yet sturdy plastic, and the floors and walls of the playfield are covered with the sort of plastic-coated foam found on Diner furniture, so you can throw yourself around with gay abandon – just like your favourite silver screen hero.

That's a laugh, but it's not as big a hoot as trying to negotiate the bouncy inflatable obstacles or the pools full of hundreds of plastic balls which feel like quicksand. It's enough to make you feel like a six-year-old dare-devil-may-care kid again.

A game costs £3.00 and lasts 15 minutes, which seems reasonable value given that you could blow the same dosh playing some comparatively boring arcade machines or a Virtual Reality system.

The Labyrinth Of Doralia is found at FairWorld Leisure Arcade, 50 Alexandra Road, Cleethorpes, South Humberside DN35 8LE. (If you are driving to the Leisure Centre, with the seafront promenade to your left, FairWorld's on the right, next to the chippy – you can't miss it).

Oh yeah. 3D. Right. All you get is green and red images and hurty eyes. At best you get a brief feeling of lightheadedness as your brain desperately tries to unscramble the confusing signals it's receiving. Well, that's the way it used to be. Now things are different. Maelstrom (the company founded by Mike Singleton, the man behind such gaming classics as Lords of Midnight and Midwinter) are nearing the completion of Starfighter Ace, a fully three dimensional game scheduled for release in March.

The design of Starfighter Ace grew out of the concept for a 3D challenge for the GamesMaster show (see opposite), but Singleton's involvement with things 3D goes back a lot further than that. "Back in the mists of time I wrote a game called 3-Deep Space for the BBC which also used the red and green glasses. The only trouble was, you had to have 20-20 vision for it to work.

"Since then, there's been a handful of 3D games, all of them using wire-frame graphics, and none are particularly successful."

There are two major differences between Starfighter Ace and its predecessors. For a start, the graphics are all solid shapes drawn in real perspective, making the game look rather splendid. And also, the 3D actually works.

The Maelstrom team are working around the clock to complete the game, and the results are looking nothing short of spectacular. The finished game will take the form of a fast and furious space epic, with the player embarking on various hazardous missions, each one guaranteed to present plenty of 3D thrills! There will be realistic planets with highly-detailed surfaces. There will be a massive array of weird and wonderful alien spaceships and there'll also be fully animated 3D heads of all the alien beings that you'll meet!

Of course, working in three dimensions allows for even more seat-of-the-pants action: "To succeed in the game, the player will need to judge distance and depth quickly and accurately so he can dodge or weave or blast at just the right moment," says Mike, "With the glasses on, it's so much easier to judge distance and depth."

So why isn't everyone doing it? Well, it's worth remembering, though, that programming in 3D is a pain in the arse. With any fast action game, the biggest technical problem lies in making the graphics run as fast as possible. With Real-3D, the problem is even worse; the graphics have to run twice as fast as anything else. That's because for every frame two different pictures have to be built in to the machine's memory; one for the left eye and one for the right. Then they've got to be mixed together before placing them on the screen. And that's aside from the usual nightmare of mathematics involved in drawing polygon shapes in the first place!

So, have the boys at Maelstrom tapped into the next generation of flat-screen entertainment? You'll just have to wait and see.

Don't worry if the 3D doesn't work for you immediately - just give it a couple of seconds and your brain will adjust...

Cor! What's going on now? There's a sort of stripey ship flying out of the screen at us! Amaaaaaazing!

Boom! Judging the distance of objects in 3D is lots easier, so how our player can miss this floating space-pebble is beyond reason.

3D TUNE IN!

Remember to don your specs as you tune into the 4 February edition of GamesMaster to fully enjoy the visual splendour that is The Maelstrom 3D Challenge.

The aim of the challenge is simple. In the far, far distance lies a huge, silent mothership. The challenger must pilot the starfighter as quickly as possible towards the mothership, dodging and weaving and blasting through a storm of meteorites and space junk. Eventually the aim is to successfully dock with the mothership. Every time the player crashes into a piece of debris, a piece of his ship falls off. If enough bits fall off, the ship is kaputt and the challenge is then over.

Whatever the outcome, it'll be a gripping challenge, and all in 3D!

WHAT NEXT?

The Maelstrom team are making confident noises about other applications for their 3D system, predicting that instead of being just a one-off, Starfighter Ace is in fact just the start of a series of 3D extravaganzas; "It's not just 3D Challenge. Any game like a flight sim or Formula One simulator where you could fly or drive into the screen would really spring to life with our 3D techniques. Not only would the screen look more real, but the game would be easier and better to play - when you're trying to overtake Ayrton Senna, you can't just take a guess at how close he is! Even Nigel couldn't do that".

The toughest part of writing a game in 3D is the speed, because you've got to draw the screen twice - once in red and once in green.

Whoaaa! In full effect! You join us as our intrepid pilot flies right into the heart of a spinning cosmic thingy!

This is the basement where lots of little furry things scuttle across the floor. So watch your step and look for those clues or secret passages. Then it's back upstairs for lunch.

Everyone's heard of the brilliant sci-fi film Alien. The grotesque and Gothic creature which systematically killed everything in its path and didn't care what anybody said. The man who came up with the design, HR Giger, was given an Oscar for his design and now he's let some of his artwork (some of it similar to the artwork used in Alien) be incorporated in the game of Dark Seed.

Dark Seed begins with you taking control of Mike Dawson. Mike's a run of the mill, ordinary, Joe Bloggs kind of guy... until today that is. You see,

Mike's had a bit of an accident - some sort of alien has got into his head and he's got three days to get rid of it. (And you thought you were having a bad day)

The alien is not the one from the film, but another of Giger's designs and this too looks quite horrible. The game is split into two parts, the Normal World and the Dark World, which is also known as Biomechanical World.

"Okay, okay come on guys, I'll pay my Poll Tax if it means that much. But is there any need for alien embryo implantation? Can't we just talk this through like man to alien, I mean really."

The alien culture in question is, in fact, an ancient and dying civilisation of evil biomechanical creatures (phew), who have, without asking, chosen Mike to help them procreate.

The game uses a point-and-click

GLOBAL GLADIATORS

Can't you just imagine the scene? A top McDonald's executive sitting in his office thinking "How are we going to cash in on the popularity of these so-called video games? I know. We'll phone Virgin and get them to do a game involving some seriously cool kids an' that."

The rest is history. A plot was hastily cobbled together, involving two trendy kids Mick and Mack, reading a comic called Global Gladiators in (yes, you guessed it) a McDonalds outlet. Then suddenly the unthinkable happens, Ronald McDonald appears and whisks the kids off to somewhere known as Slimeworld.

The kids, both of whom you're supposed to see as role models, end up in what can only be described as a multi-colour, multi-layer parallax scroller. And at this stage it is looking pretty impressive.

Mick and Mack is shaping up to be the sort of game which needs to be played rather than heard about. The idea of the whole thing is, to be honest, slightly off-putting. A McDonalds licence smacks heavily of band-wagonism which really doesn't do it any favours. But so far, the game itself, viewed just as a Mega Drive-related piece of entertainment, is seriously heading towards corkerdom.

There will be 12 levels, each packed with this multi-parallax thing. What this means you'll be able to view some totally amazing backgrounds. The lads don't do themselves any favours by shouting "Yo!" and "Awesome!" at various points in the game, but the samples used are very good quality; and the words the chaps use can be ignored when you see the stuff they have to deal with.

Splodge creatures, spawned of toxic waste, are attempting to take over the world, and only Mick (or Mack) can stop them. By cleaning up these guys, they're also ridding the planet of noxious chemicals and making the rain-forests grow again (or something). Thus, by playing the game, you're supposed to be gaining awareness of the damage being done to the Earth.

This could be slightly confusing because it portrays the ecological disasters facing the planet as a race of globby creatures who attack by spewing a particularly virulent strain of runny snot at you. You and I realise that this is something of a simplification of the real issues, but how many tiny toddlers would?

The only point with the game is that at the moment, there isn't a two-

And the review is steaming its way towards GamesMaster faster than you can say "A Double Whopper with fries to go." (That's Burger King. Ed.)

See if you can spot the tiny M symbol which means that this has been a McDonalds production. Yes, it's above the glop-creature.

AVAILABLE - FEBRUARY

In 1979, Alien, one of the best science fiction movies was filmed; in '85 Aliens made it onto the big screen and now 13 years later the third film in the series has been released.

Alien 3 is set on the mining planet and penal colony of Fiorina 161, affectionately known as 'Fury 161' to its inhabitants, all of whom happen to be murderers and rapists of women. The latest film in the cult sci-fi movie trilogy has Ripley facing the solitary Alien - weaponless.

As this would make for a rather dull game, Acclaim have used a little artistic licence to give you an impressive arsenal of weapons to ensure you get through the game without falling asleep. In the film Ripley only has her wits and cunning to protect her, oh yeah and a kitchen knife (whoopie doo). The only resemblance to the film appears to be the scenery - it contains loads of aliens, while there is only one in the film. You have to rescue prisoners who are being held ready for impregnation, unlike the film where they were just killed ruthlessly by the Alien. Not nice I know but, hey, that's showbiz. The Amiga version is basically a conversion of that for the Mega Drive, which to all intent and purposes, is absolutely identical to its console cousin.

The main aim of the game is to rescue each and every prisoner and get to the exit before the time limit expires or before you die horribly with an alien bursting from your insides. You have to scurry around the airways to get to different parts of the prison and save the hostages. You can collect

Er, I wouldn't go up there if I were you Ripley. If this alien was bleeding and it fell through that trap door, would that make it an acid drop?

On the floor is a time bomb. Ripley is standing too close to the bomb. She should climb up the ladder.

Grenades as well huh! There's no motion on the motion tracker so throwing it is a waste of ammo.

Why weren't there any weapons in the film? Ripley is running around with a pulse rifle.

Despite the fact that if she blasts this alien she would get covered in its acid blood, Ripley still lets rip with her pulse rifle. Talk about dim.

Ripley has about as much intelligence as she does hair. The alien is on the other side Ripper old girl. At least we won't see an Alien IV movie.

The big deal with the new Lemmings is the fact you can empower the Lemmings with crazy abilities. Here we have a bunch of balloonists...

Here in Dark world, Lems are covertly dressed as Ninjas. Bright fluorescent green Lems don't work that well and should be avoided at all costs. Plus it isn't fashionable.

As in all great games, unless they've got a scary green monster in them, they just aren't great.

Two years ago, a pack of small furry animals (well, rodents really) were released into the big wide world. They were the Lemmings. Small in stature and blue in colour, they were a bunch of clumsy suicidal maniacs and it was your job to save them. The game was a smash hit, and was translated to nearly every format you can think of.

Now, the Amiga has the sequel. Unlike the first game, the second allows the player to empower Lemmings with abilities specific to certain levels. On snow covered levels they can ski and throw snowballs. On other levels you'll need to master Lemmings that fly, windsurf, hang-glide, ice-skate, and swim. Just about any activity that you can think of - these little guys will do it. There are 60 different 'occupations' in all, and these are separated into 12 tribes. Scattered about the land of Lem, a sacred medalion has been split into 12. It's your job to regain all the pieces. The various lands are based on themes; Egyptian, Highlands, Darklands and Medieval are just a few of the 12 landscapes.

Here in Beach world the Lemmings do a spot of surfing on Daytona. The clam, on the other hand is wishing they weren't.

The most important differences between the two games are as follows. The screen scrolls in four directions (the levels are very big, just to add to the confusion). If a Lemming falls from a certain height, instead of dying horribly, he'll just get back up, dust himself off and carry on walking. If he falls from a greater height, it's off to the great Lemming heaven in the sky.

Nearly all of the original characters have had a major overhaul and now sport smarter designs in the way they do things. The vertical diggers now

This should have been released in time for Christmas, but has been delayed due to the programmers making it a tad more fiendish than before. # TORNADO

FROM - DIGITAL INTEGRATION

PRICE - TBA
AVAILABLE - FEBRUARY

The Tornado wasn't a very good plane at all, if Top Trumps were to be believed. It wasn't as fast as the SR-71 Blackbird, nor was it as powerful as the F-14 Tomcat. So what exactly was the point of the thing, then?

Well for a start there are two variations of the Tornado. The IDS (Interdictor/Strike) version is the one people in Wales continually complain about as it hacks down the valleys at speeds and heights which make your bot pucker.

The ADV (Air Defence Variant) is another kettle of fish entirely. It's designed to fly high and intercept those naughty foreign folk trying it on in British airspace, consequently it is a bit of a dog-fighter on the sly.

The other notable thing about this sim is that it gives you the chance to sit in either seat of the Tornado. Tornadoes, you see, have two chairs. The front one is for the pilot and the rear one for navigation and weapons selection. You can switch between the two with the practised ease of a Cabinet Minister or circus clown.

Digital Integration are busily cramming as much ground detail as they can into the game. It's played in combat zones of 100 miles square, and each of these zones contain over 16,000 static objects to fly around and peep at. As well as that, there are also fields, rivers, roads, railways and other natural stuff to bounce off at 600 mph.

The idea is that as the Tornado IDS spends most of its time below 200 feet, so the graphics must be both detailed "Are we nearly there, yet Dad?" No, son. We're stopping at this hangar for cluster bombs, airfield denial weapons, Kit Kats and a couple of items of that crap porcelain which garages always seem to sell.

Amazingly, the Tornado does have such a large tail-fin. It doesn't stop it from looking stupid, though.

The low-level flying is pretty scary when you're in the cockpit, but it looks great from outside too.

Psygnosis' Super Hero is a cross between a standard beat em up and a construction kit. In the first section of the game you enter a laboratory and design your awesome crimefighter - male or female - and, in the game proper, send him into battle against the scum-sucking criminal dregs of the diseased bowels of the city. (Please! Ed.)

The lab section is similar to those bits at the beginning of role-playing games in which you assign various abilities to your character - such as strength, mind power, codpiece size... Be sure to get the balance right - if he's too much of a beefcake, he won't perform too well in other areas, whereas a total weed with incredibly destructive psychic powers may find he gets his head kicked in occasionally.

The aim is to punch and kick your way through the levels towards the and fast. Sounds good to us. In fact, if there's one thing the GamesMaster crew like (apart from drinking in The Loft), it's quick 3D vector graphics.

Of course, the missionary position is as you'd expect. There are plenty of ground and air targets to hit, and you even get to use neat weaponry like the JP233 airfield denial bomb dispenser thing (as seen in the Gulf War). And the best way to see these things going off is by the multitude of outside views. Once you've got the weapons sorted, you can enjoy just watching the damage you can wreak.

The good news about Tornado is that there are loads of views, both inside and outside the aircraft, and you'll get to see some other beautifully drawn planes and ground vehicles as they zip around the screen. One to look out for is the train (which is very pretty indeed, and you can destroy it with missiles or gunfire).

Unless we're very much mistaken, there's a high-speed, peace-shattering, cluster-bombing, low-level, dangerous, scaring the sheep type review in the next issue of GamesMaster. Read it. You know you want to.

FROM - US GOLD
FOR - MEGA DRIVE

PRICE - TBA

Gamesplaying fans will remember when Another World appeared a year or so ago. It totally blew everyone's minds with its excellent graphics and sound, despite the gameplay being slightly dodgy. Well now the team who brought you it have delivered a sequel of sorts in Flashback, and this time the Mega Drive gets it first.

The story is your average run-of-the-mill stuff - to wit, clever scientist discovers that aliens have invaded the earth disguised as human beings. This poor chap is then kidnapped but escapes his kidnappers on a hover bike only to be shot down over a jungle on what looks like earth. But he soon discovers that it is in fact Titan, home planet of the aliens. He must return and warn the earth, but the aliens are hot on his tail. I think that about covers it (pauses to regain breath).

Flashback is a graphical extravaganza right from the brilliant intro sequence. From the preview version we've seen, it appears that the developers have solved the problem of the lack of gameplay and replaced it with a combination of arcade action and puzzle solving. It's a cross between Prince of Persia and Another World, with the playability of one and the sheer beauty of the other.

Sensibly a save game option has been included. Each level is given a password so you can skip out the early levels once you've finished them. Mind you, the levels are so big that the developers have even included game save points around the levels.

Mega Drive owners are in for a treat when this is released. The looks are breathtaking and playing it is more like taking part in a movie than playing a game. So much attention has been paid to the detail in the game, you even get close-up scenes when you pick up an important item. These items are all used somewhere in the game so you have to figure out what goes where. The sound creates a dark, mysterious atmosphere which will send shivers down your spine, especially if you play it with the lights out.

The Mega Drive has suffered just lately from not having all that many good releases while the SNES has been running away with all the praise. This is the game which looks as though that is all set to change. If it's anywhere near as good as it promises to be then US Gold could well have another hit on their hands. Look out for a full review of Flashback in the next issue.

After winning the prize of a lifetime trip to Titan you had to win your trip back. This reject from Blake's Seven is ready to take you home.

This guy thinks he's Bodie or Doyle, look at him posing with his gun. What a professional.

I've got an ID card. And there's a machine that takes ID cards up ahead, hmm, I wonder?

It looks more like Cool World than Titan, but there are more than just doodles to get you.

FROM - IMAGITEC
PRICE - £39.99

Ig models the new Swiss-Army tool. It's a spear, a shovel, a pogo stick...

The Amiga has already experienced this chunk of crazy Neanderthal tomfoolery and now, perhaps rather too inevitably, it's the turn of the Mega Drive owner to assist a tribe of simple chaps in their technological and intellectual evolution.

Obviously inspired by the relatively plotless Lemmings, it tries to offer more of a productive, platform-game appeal. You have a much closer control over the characters and there's more skill to level completion than just clicking accurately on icons as can be the case with some games.

This spear-discovering lark can be a rather difficult business. Particularly when the darn things insist on performing their hackneyed "comedy rake" routine.

The game begins at the very bottom of the Darwinian scale, with a small group of intellectually challenged fellows who, via some nifty icon manipulation, must be guided to a small piece of wood with a bit of flint on the end - which, for reasons of convenience, we shall call a spear.

Having completed this first task, the game begins to offer greater challenges - the cooking pot, the wheel, the internal combustion engine, nuclear power... you get the general idea.

Things get more and more lateral (if that's possible) and there's even a few intermission-style animation sequences to keep you amused should the novelty of having a hand in the development of the human race begin to pall slightly (you'd better ask God if it does in real life, though).

Cute and cartoony - and it's got loin-cloths in it.

"OK, guys. We've gotta pull together to get over this steaming pit of volcanic liquid. Let's... wait for it, wait for it..."

"Henderson, come back! It's hot, it's red, it's burning - and we don't know what it is." "Glub, glub. Frazzle." "Dear, oh dear. There's always one, isn't there?"

"Right. We're all across - and Henderson's been resurrected." "But we haven't told the readers how to do it, sir." "Ssssh!"

COOLWORLD

FROM - OCEAN
PRICE - £25.95

FOR - GAME BOY
AVAILABLE - END OF JANUARY

Just what is all this "Holly Would if she could" nonsense? It would appear to have something to do with a cartoon representation of Kim Basinger, but more than that is a bit of a mystery. Presumably a trip to the nearest motion-picture viewing auditorium would rectify this confusion.

Anyway, what can't be denied is that Cool World is a fine-looking game. It's a sort of puzzley platformer, with you as a bloke searching for the elusive and damned attractive Holly.

The game makes a lot of its beautiful screens, which look set to take the Game Boy to previously uncharted realms of 'looking nice-ness'. Combine this with more frantic action than the Buckingham Palace press office and you're talking about a serious contender on the Game Boy scene. And everybody knows how trendy that's getting (apart from people who live in the more remoter regions of Russia, obviously).

Ocean are busy getting Cool World out on all formats at the moment, and this version seems to be shaping up as one of those stylish little numbers no-one should be without.

FROM - OCEAN
PRICE - £34.95

FOR - NES
AVAILABLE - LATE JANUARY

Ocean are certainly going for this game as a biggie. And oops! Here's another wacky version on the good old NES.

It looks colourful at this stage, and the rumours flying around the industry are that this is the version Kim Basinger will be taking to her gorgeous cliff-top holiday retreat on the Greek island of Slash Club? Something points to a bout of cartoon-type violence. So luckily nobody can be hurt.

Domestos this coming spring.

The gameplay should be well up to standard, but it's the graphics that you should concentrate on in Cool World. All those colourful little, er, things under your feet and so on. Oh, and Kim looking as sexy as you can get with a load of pixels and movement routines.

Ugh. Scariness ahoj. This is erm, some weird nastiness from the very pits of Cool World. Hmmm.

IF THERE'S A NUCLEAR WINTER, THERE WILL BE A COOL WORLD - ALTHOUGH KIM BASINGER WON'T GET HER KIT OFF.

SUPER KICK OFF

FROM - US GOLD
PRICE - £39.99

For a long time Kick Off was regarded as the best football game of all time on the Amiga, only to be superseded recently by Sensible Soccer. Now all the action of this classic game will be winging its way to Mega Drive owners courtesy of US Gold.

Super Kick Off is an updated and vastly improved version of Kick Off 2. With the wealth of options now available and the far superior control method, fast flowing and accurate games of football are now a possibility.

FOR - MEGA DRIVE
AVAILABLE - MARCH

The only real criticism anyone made of Kick Off was that beginners could find the control method somewhat intimidating. The programmers at Tiertex took all this into consideration and have used the extra buttons on the joystick to make this version far more user-friendly.

Just about every aspect of football has been included, friendlies, internationals, leagues and cup competitions are all there. Other visual improvements include bigger and more detailed characters. Gone are the days when all you had on screen were coloured blobs running round the field - now you have players who look like real players.

Our early preview copy of the game looks very promising and it looks as though Mega Drive owning football fans will have something to look forward to in March when Super Kick Off finally appears on the shelves.

In a couple of issues time we will be bringing you the full review so you'll be able to take a closer look at the game then.

All eyes are on the pitch now. Just look at him go. He takes it past three defenders, he's round the keeper, he shoots, and he, er... he misses actually.

Fast action, accurate control and the chance to beat one of your mates at footy. What more could you want in a Mega Drive game? How about great graphics, sound and playability. Oh alright, just this once.

US Gold bring out a football game with Division One as the highest when along comes the Premier League to spoil it all. Still, it's a funny old game, ain't it?

LETHAL WEAPON

FROM - OCEAN
PRICE - £39.99

Yes, be prepared for Mel and Danny on your NES pretty darned soon. Here they come, with japes and sickening physical violence aplenty. Er, only there won't be that many japes because they're difficult to do on a console.

Lethal Weapon is looking to be a contender for the number one NES slot, which would no doubt please Ocean, Mel and his four children (un-talked of as they are).

Tree-related horror takes over the Lethal Weapon crew as they venture into, erm, a forest.

FOR - NES
AVAILABLE - END JANUARY

So expect the serious shooting and blowing up to commence shortly.

There could well be a review of Lethal Weapon in the next issue of GamesMaster. Look out for it.

Come on. You can see the resemblance, can't you? He does look a bit like Mel Gibson, doesn't he?

FROM - OCEAN
PRICE - £25.95

Riggs and Murtaugh are in trouble. Not only have they got a frighteningly large number of psychopathic loonies to deal with on the streets, but they've also got a little number being developed about them on the Game Boy.

Well Riggs has, anyway. Murtaugh looks like he'll be playing a decidedly minor role in this one. The idea is that you (as Riggs) clamber over a serious number of platforms, trying to rescue people, kill baddies and generally survive as long as you can.

There's a great deal of precarious balancing, carefully-timed jumping and violent shooting, and the whole thing is being structured so that you don't get a chance to catch your breath before being sucked into the next incredibly dangerous bit. Sort of like the film, but without the humour element.

Oh, and the sprite looks as much like Mel Gibson as the Game Boy can make it, which should please fans of sprites that look like famous Australian film stars with four un-talked-about kids and current American citizenship.

Only one thing remains unclear. The game is entitled Lethal Weapon, but the film bearing the same images used on the box is Lethal Weapon 3.

Never one to pussy-foot around, Mel blasts somebody right in the head, for no apparent reason.

THE MOST LETHAL WEAPON IS A NUCLEAR BOMB. IF IT GOES OFF THERE'LL BE A NUCLEAR WINTER.

Is it a bird? Is it... (Stop this caption now. I absolutely will not have this caption in my magazine. Ed). Er, here's RoboCod, fighting a plane, then.

Our fearless hero tangles with the army, and gets his head kicked in for his pains. All this and sort of Lego platforms, too. Marvellous.

ROBOCOD

FROM - OCEAN
FOR - SNES

PRICE - TBA
AVAILABLE - MARCH

It's taken a while, but now is the time to rejoice. Hang up the bunting, declare a national holiday, telephone the Pope, fax the Maharishi. RoboCod makes it to the SNES (Get on with the preview. Ed).

The whole thing takes the form of an amusing jape-let at the expense of James Bond, RoboCop and other great and exciting cinematographic institutions. Yes, it's taking that cutesy sort of game one stage further, into the realms of, erm, humour (as it could loosely be called). The thing is, because RoboCod is a fish, there is a wealth of crap undersea puns to include (sea-cret agent, motor-pike, tench, nervous haddock - you know the sort of thing). It's a veritable Davy Jones' Locker of contrived underwater gags, a Kraken's Magic Undersea Domain of ill thought-out word games, involving aquatic life.

This fish-tastic barrage is relentlessly piled upon you, in the game, in the packaging and even in the manual. There is even a special RoboCod club you can join, with membership cards, stickers, tons of secret agent paperwork and decoder rings.

All this is good fun, but it gets in the way of the game. As a marketing ploy, the fishy nonsense has got to be deemed a success, but the best thing is that if you take the marketing ideas away, you're still left with a storming platform game.

The SNES version, eagerly awaited, would appear to be no exception. At this stage it looks... well, have a peep at the screenshots, why don't you? We are talking about something which could elevate the Super Nintendo to even greater heights. Ocean would certainly hope so.

This version has got everything the original Amiga has got and more.

OK. Try this 'carp'tion - guitar fish, tuna, bass, drum fish, et cetera.

'Eel' have to be 'turbot'-charged to save his 'sole' here, 'shoal'y'?

Cute cars, cute trains and - look! There's even a cute bathtub!

The SNES looks like it's easily going to be able to cope with the packed screens, quick scrolling and amusingly-shaped baddies, with their inherent pun-value.

RoboCod is a huge affair with tons of levels and some spectacularly massive screens, so be prepared for a lot of coverage. The review should be in the next issue of your favourite games magazine. And we'll be covering it too. So don't get com'plac'nt before the game is o'fish'ially tr'out' - 'Cod' knows you'd 'batter' believe that it will be an essential 'perch'ase, costing a few 'squid', so 'kipper' your ear to the ground and you'll be 'herring' more about the dude with the licence to 'krill'. (That's enough of this 'carp'. Ed).

Robo, scared by the number of appalling fish gags in the GamesMaster preview, hides in a weird sort of, er, underwater 'plaiice'. (Stop it. Ed)

PLAYED IN JAPAN

The NEC Turbo Duo – the only machine on the market at the moment to have a really usable CD unit built in. With loads of US games available for it you won't be plagued by Japanese speaking games as you would with certain other CD ROM units available in Japan.

At last the Mega Drive and the SNES have some serious competition in the console stakes. In Japan NEC have been producing the PC Engine for around five years. The machine has never been released officially in Europe, denying most gaming fans the chance to play on an excellent machine. That said, it has been available from importers in various forms and has sold very well for a machine which has never been officially launched.

Two years ago NEC launched their own CD ROM version of the machine, way ahead of the competition. Both Nintendo and Sega have only just come to terms with CD technology while NEC have been doing it for years.

The latest version of the PC Engine is called the Turbo Duo, and it's very impressive. The unit comes in a tidy black case which looks the business. It is a normal 16-bit PC Engine with a superb built-in CD ROM – this means you can access an instant games catalogue of hundreds of titles on the system's rather natty, pocket-size data-card. American and Japanese titles will work on this US console so you won't have to worry about any of the compatibility nightmares which plague other systems.

When you buy the machine you get five free CD titles with it. The titles are Bonk's Adventure (a whimsical platform affair otherwise known as BC Kid), Bonk's Revenge – the sequel, Gate of Thunder (one of the best shoot-em-ups ever) and two storming adventures. If you were to buy them separately, the games alone would cost nearly £200.

The big advantage of CD titles are the stunning soundtracks. The speech in It came from the Desert, for example, is amazing – although it lacks something in the gameplay department.

So is the Turbo Duo worth buying? Well for techno freaks who love little machines – yes. You get a slick looking 16-bit console with plenty of existing games – titles appear at the rate of around a dozen a month. Of course, you can use the machine to play your normal audio CDs as well as any CD+Gs (compact discs with graphics).

Weighing in at a price of £350, the Turbo Duo is one of the more expensive machines on the market. Bear in mind that this price is partly due to the fact that you can only buy through importers. The machine is huge in America and, as a result, the price is significantly lower. With the 32-bit A1200 costing £399 and the Mega Drive and SNES both costing under £150 it might seem as though the Turbo Duo is destined to be labelled an expensive gimmick. But if you tot up the costs of adding CD ROMs to your existing system, then the Turbo Duo makes a lot more sense – with the added attraction of being the only real CD ROM unit available with English software up and running. It's such a pity that NEC still refuse to release this excellent machine over here.

PC ENGINE SOFTWARE

Here's a selection of some of the most notable Turbo Duo games.

GATE OF THUNDER

Blasting aliens need not be mindless. It can be sleek and sexy, plush and pert, sumptuous and sassy... Gate Of Thunder blows away other shoot-em-ups – including the Mega Drive Thunderforce series and SNES classics UN Squadron and Axelay. Being shoot-em-up maniacs here at GamesMaster, we're not easily impressed by the lazy, coded-it-all-before attitude of many programmers, but this is bulging with original, head-spinning detail and plays like an insane combination of your greatest dream and your worst nightmare. Ultra-cool music, split-second dodging, blinding power-ups and some vicious, rock hard guardians. What's more, it's free with the machine!

The ship in GOT – or Cecil, as it likes to be called – is rather partial to the odd cheese and tomato pizza. He also plays Pool at weekends.

Shoot-em-ups, eh? Explosions, speeding streams of plasma, dodgy space wars, nonsensical captions... GOT is a brilliant example – such a shame you can't buy it here, eh?

Our Jackie is an environmental hero, here he comes across a lost frog and what does he do? He gives it a good hard kicking, we always knew these martial arts guys were hard.

JACKIE CHAN'S ACTION KUNG FU

This is cartoon beat-em-up action at its best. Jackie must wade through level after level of oriental nasties. The game is great fun although your moves are limited to a few basic ones. The difficulty curve has been set at just the right level – it seems that just as you are about to admit defeat and turn the game off you get to see a new section and just have to keep on playing.

When a game is as much fun as this is, you don't worry about there not being too many moves. The guardians are big, mean and, most importantly, original. You really should consider buying this.

Ooops, the tigers obviously proved too tough so Jackie goes back to kicking frogs. There are some human opponents to kick in as well but the animals don't fight back or sue you so they're easier to take on. He may not be Bruce Lee, but at least Jackie is still alive to keep making those martial "arts" movies.

Just one of the amazing power-ups you will come across in Air Zonk. Here our hero has changed from an airborne BC Kid into a flying dump truck. Well, it beats a couple of extra lasers tagged onto the bottom of a ship. And they said the worlds of comedy and alien blasting would never meet.

AIR ZONK

Air Zonk (featuring a BC Kid lookalike as the hero) is one of those strange colourful shoot-em-ups that, while not exactly breaking new ground in the genre, are certainly fun to play, the Americans and Japanese seem to have a knack for producing these games. It has all the makings of a great game.

Loads of colour, tough guardians, stacks of enemies on screen at the same time, no slow down and loads of power-ups. Combine this with a real comic element (especially with the power-ups) and it becomes one of those games destined to become a cult classic. Air Zonk is a thoroughly decent shoot-em-up that is well worth a look.

DRAGONSLAYER CD ROM

Dragonslayer is the latest adventure that will take you to the limit, and then beyond. With the aid of an over-the-top CD soundtrack this game has been lifted from a solid adventure to one that is a pleasure to play. The quality of the speech and music is such that you'll be reaching to turn up the volume for a change. Just imagine playing the game when someone with an Irish accent starts talking to you, well it happens.

The game plays very much like the classic Zelda game on the SNES which is no bad thing. It's tough and there's loads of exploring to do before you start making progress. Asides from the huge game map there are hundreds of different creatures that will need dealing with in many different ways, do you kill them, use magic on them or even just talk to them? Adventurers will love the game with the boost that the soundtrack gives it, and this soundtrack is an ideal way of getting newcomers to stick with the game when the going gets tough. The sheer size of the game could make it intimidating so be prepared for some late nights if you are going to get into it. The control system is easy to get to grips with using simple pop-up menus to select actions and will appeal to veterans and beginners alike. Dragonslayer is one of the best adventure games to appear on any console and is the type of game that will spawn many clones.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW ANYTHING MORE ABOUT THE TURBO DUO, THE HANDHELD TURBO EXPRESS OR ANY OF THE SOFTWARE, CALL CONSOLE CONCEPTS ON 0782 712 759. MANY THANKS TO THEM FOR SUPPLYING THE MACHINES AND SOFTWARE.

This time the cool dude has donned his shades to avoid those bright colours hurting his eyes.

Dragonslayer on CD is bigger than anything Sega and Nintendo can offer at the moment.

Dragonslayer's destined to take you beyond the limits of adventure gaming. What it lacks in the graphics department Dragonslayer more than makes up for in the depth of its gameplay.

REVIEWS

Oh crikey! Can you hear them coming? Rumbling over the horizon like big rumbly things. Just turn the page for a second and you'll see one looking you straight in the eye. It's a review. And there's another twenty five after that one. Every one challenging you with its information. Every one daring you to ask a question it cannot answer. We thought it only fair to warn you.

WHAT'S GOING ON:

Er, anyway. Each review has a number of regular bits and pieces to keep an eye out for. Use this handy guide and you'll be able to find your way around in a jiffy, or even a page. Aren't you glad we dropped that awful Safari theme from the intro?

Each monitor contains different information. Monitor one contains info on the machine the game is for, the publisher, the date available, the memory size and not forgetting the price. Monitor two will furnish you with gen on the in-game options, the number of levels, the difficulty, number of players and whether there's a save game feature.

Between them, the monitors give you all the vital data you need.

PLAYABILITY

LASTABILITY
It's great fun for the first couple of sessions. But why oh why don't there a save game option? This really cripples the testing interest.

OVERALL
I'm a sucker for cuddly creatures and Rolo to the Rescue is one of the cutest games I've ever played! It's very clever, extremely playable and packed with hidden levels and things to discover. Sadly, it doesn't know whether to be a kids' fun game, or a testing skill test for real hard Mega Drivers, since the later levels get quite tricky. It's a lovely game, but until a save game option is added in, I'm about the 90% region in my list of bounds.

GREETINGS!
And welcome to my own particular area of the reviews, the GamesMaster Tip. Here I shall give information to help you through the first tricky stage of each game, so you won't be completely stuck if you grind to a halt before the next issue with the proper tips appears. The tips dispensed here should also give an indication of how the game works, and should help you decide if it's the sort of title you'll enjoy. Tremendous.

I completely disagree! Well, I don't in this case, but sometimes I might. Whenever you see this shape, you'll know that someone like me has got something to say about the game. In fact, these will crop up rather a lot, since we're such an opinionated bunch.

These dials are used to rate the quality of the various game elements. The higher the number, the better the element. There's also a sort of "heat" motif, which we rather like.

ANDY LOWE
Andy's had a dream of a time this month. He's reviewed Micro Machines and Mickey Mouse. And he's still had enough time to play more Dynablast than anyone else, which can be the only reason that he keeps winning.

LES ELLIS
Enjoying a spacey, shooty sort of month, Les has had the immeasurable pleasure of reviewing his all-time fave Wing Commander on the SNES and Super Star Wars on import for the same. Lucky blighter.

ADRIAN PRICE
Fresh from his recent success in the Western Regional Under 21s Ballroom Dance Championships, Adrian enjoyed a date with Steel Talons this month, but made his excuses when Predator 2 came calling.

STEVE JARRATT
Being the sort of snarling, slavering, sneering shoot-em-up fan that he is, we knew Steve would want to review the most balls-out blaster of the month. But there weren't any, so he had to do Rolo to the Rescue.

NEIL WEST
Neil is our tip-top Mega Drive expert. He is, some would argue, the premier authority on all things Mega Drive. Few people know more about the old Mega Drive than Neilly. This month he reviews Krusty on the Amiga.

ANDY SMITH

THE REVIEWERS

■ Flicker, shudder and slowing we can do without. Parallax, smoothness and variety we like. Clear? It's got to be.

■ Where would Mario be without his spadoing? Where would Sonic be without his ferwhizz? Nowhere, that's where. So we demand catchy tunes, scene-setting interludes and punchy effects.

■ We want to see games with instinctive, responsive controls that reward and challenge the player's increasing skill. Games need to make a variety of demands of the player – requiring a fast firing finger is not enough.

■ Call us greedy, but as well as glorious graphics, super sounds and peachy playability we demand that games actually keep you entertained for a considerable amount of time.

■ The above factors taken and shaken, analysed and adapted. The bottom line – is it worth buying or not?

Mega Drive owners can now sample the delights of the finest, most competitive NES two-player racing game. Micro Machines is an example of that rare beast – the game that is both critically lauded and played to death. The NES version was a huge work-stopper in the GamesMaster offices. Now, with a slightly improved 16-bit version to fiddle with – some new, curiously imaginative terms of abuse look set to take to the air.

The real-life Micro Machines are sort of tuned-up Matchbox toys dragged from the 70s into the 90s. They feature tanks, helicopters, powerboats and cars. Their fans tend to be irritatingly innocent youngsters who have bizarre pretend races on their breakfast tables or dad's workbench, emulating engine noises and spraying everyone present with liberal amounts of saliva.

But why bother scuffing your knees on the kitchen floor when you can just slot in the cartridge, sit back with a Curly Wurly and race with your, probably temporary, mates.

You get an accelerate, a reverse and – tanks only – a fire button. Merely race around a multi-scrolling landscape – avoiding obstacles such as glue, rubber ducks and marmalade stains. If one machine gets too far behind, the driver loses a point. Once the assigned laps are over, the player with the most points wins. In one-player mode, you can challenge a series of computer drivers – the best of whom are annoyingly good. But, as with Streetfighter 2, Dyna Blaster and, er, the other greats,

Micro Machines was surely conceived as a two-player game with thrills and spills galore as you battle it out with a hotshot chum of your choice, blasting him off the track in fits of vindictiveness.

Use the one-player mode to learn the course geography and generally become a bit of a demon. Then, if you have any friends, invite them over and ruthlessly "kick their bottoms".

Micro Machines may seem a bit basic, but cowering beneath the apparent simplicity is a rollicking, unreasonably playable game that you'll return to over and over again. Quite wonderful.

ANDY LOWE ■

Micro Machines is probably the most playable game I've ever seen on the Mega Drive. It's got all the elements of a great game; fab graphics, brilliant controls, plenty of variety, a smart two-player mode all mixed together to form (when played with the right people) a heady cocktail of laughing, swearing and table-kicking. The trouble is, it's the sort of game that really doesn't look that great. I mean – be honest, you've looked at the graphics and the overall score and thought something was on the wrong page. And in a sense, that's what's so great about it. All that matters is what it plays like and feels like. I'm so impressed that I can hardly find the words. This is really really what games are all about. Marvellous.

JIM DOUGLAS ■

Crap. Utter, utter crap. Dreadful, dire and not worth 2p. Ha ha. Fooled you. Micro Machines on the NES was excellent, which is why I gave it 91%. On the Mega Drive it's even better. We are talking addictiveness the size of Canada, including Alaska and the Aleutian Islands. It's faster, smoother, has better graphics and, oh, everything. You just can't go wrong. It's got very similar tracks to the NES version, plus extra bits. The sort of game you want to take to the movies and snog in the back row.

GAMES MASTER TIP

GREETINGS!
 When playing the one-player version of Micro Machines, try to win three races in a row - without any race repeats. You'll then enter a bonus time-trial round featuring some extremely tricky terrain - including marsh into which your car can sink without trace. Also, during the standard game, you don't have to follow the tracks. Look for short-cuts to increase your chances against fellow drivers - computer or human.

GRAPHICS

The machines are effective and dainty, the backgrounds amusing and pleasantly detailed and everything moves along smoothly.

SOUNDS

Roaring engine sounds propel the action along, while some mildly irksome tunes accompany the character selection process.

PLAYABILITY

I defy the most jaded, cynical gamer not to become hooked. A basic concept made slick and luxurious by brilliant game play.

LASTABILITY

Awesome value. Sure, you'll play it to death and get bored eventually - but it's a game you'll keep crawling back to.

OVERALL

Fun for all the family - as they say. A dream of a game - superbly crafted, consistently playable and, best of all, terrific fun. For our older readers, it'll bring back fond memories of Scalextric and Tonka Toy days and, for the less crusty among you, Micro Machines will introduce you to a plain and simple top class two-player, er, race-em-up. Don't hesitate.

The first training mission gets you flying through some rings...

...but there's some sort of dragon fly in the way. Oh no, it's your 'copter.

Coo, what lovely weather for a spot of tank bashing, mission three starts to warm up.

They'll never know what hit them, especially with Spiffy Squires at the helm.

In the middle of a dog-fight, you manage to get a quick shot in... and unfortunately miss.

When Leonardo da Vinci came up with the plans for a new flying machine, little did he know that 500 years on it would become a reality and used for deadly operations.

This game puts you in training with the 'Steel Talons' - America's elite helicopter wing. You take control of the army's newest and deadliest attack helicopter. First, you'll have to undertake a training mission that ensures you have control over your chopper. By the end of this initiation stage you'll know how to search out and destroy the enemy.

The ensuing combat section of the game is spread over 12 missions which become increasingly difficult with more targets and stringent time limits. As you progress the enemy grows in numbers and even the scenery becomes hazardous.

Controlling the helicopter is difficult. The controls are wildly over-sensitive making flying in a straight line tricky. The scrolling is very jerky, and doesn't really give you the feel of flying a helicopter.

One of the drawbacks is that there are only 12 missions, all of which are very much the same. Pass them all and you become accepted into 'Steel Talons', then it's game over. Fail one, and you're history. It's all too cut and dried.

My second quibble is that Steel Talons fails to recreate the intense speed and action of the original arcade game. The arcade machine used thrills and spills to make things happen, this uses slow motion graphics, bad control methods and boring action.

One look at this suggests that the Mega Drive isn't yet ready to handle polygon graphics. When it is, this could be a better game.

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A 'STEEL TALON'

You know the feeling, you get up in the morning feeling a bit poorly, and then you've got to go and fly an attack chopper. Ow my poor head.

First things first, let's bag us a tank for brekkies. Then the orange juice.

Next we swing around and boy are we in for a big surprise, it's an...

...enemy attack helicopter about to turn us into shredded wheat. Fire!

Now we have a AAA bunker to deal with. Easy - use your machine guns.

And finally we have a poor defenceless convoy of trucks. Have no mercy.

With only seven targets to go, our boy in the 'copter is about to waste a tank. If I was in the tank I'd get out and run for it.

God this is abysmal. How a pathetic piece of software like this ever gets produced is beyond me. The controls are unresponsive, the polygonal graphics are a joke and as for sound effects, ha ha. Nice one Tengen, I do like it when a software company has a sense of humour. After all they couldn't have been serious when they decided to release this game.

Tengen may be responsible for some classic arcade conversions in the past, but this won't be remembered as one of them. I think Adrian was being too generous. I'd give it less.

LES ELLIS ■

THE ONES TO WATCH OUT FOR

Below are the main nasties which will try and stop you from joining the Steel Talons.

Triple A: Anti-Aircraft-Artillery. Will repeatedly fire at your chopper.

Attack Helicopters: Can manoeuvre as well as you and have the same fire power.

Tanks: Will fire at you, but they are heavily armoured and can move around.

Trucks: Move supplies around, not dangerous but they move quite fast.

What an abysmal second opinion from Les. I didn't like the way he used some gratuitous alliteration in his second sentence and surely polygonal graphics are the result of a series of complex mathematical calculations - humour cannot be inherent in their appearance. Also, Tengen are a reputable company who must generate a healthy cashflow and make considerable profits to survive. It is, therefore, highly unlikely that they would have released a game merely to give everyone a laugh.

Anyway, enough of that. Les happens to be right. This is a horribly misguided attempt to convert an excellent arcade game. Over-ambitious and terribly repetitive with some rather duff graphics chucked into the already crowded brew of crapness. If you really do feel the need to fly a high-tech attack helicopter in clandestine attack missions over enemy territory, Desert Strike's your game. Avoid this very carefully indeed.

ANDY LOWE ■

GREETINGS!

One of the best ways to complete missions in as short a time as possible is by using your radar as much as possible. You can then destroy everything quickly and join the Steel Talons.

GRAPHICS

All 3D polygon stuff. This gets to look a bit samey after a while. The graphics are not too smooth in the way they move either.

SOUNDS

Spot effects are fairly good with the explosions and gun-fire. The speech telling you what to do is a bit muffled and could be better.

PLAYABILITY

Only the 12 missions to play around with. There's an option to play the Mega Drive in a head-to-head, but even that's limited.

LASTABILITY

Not very long. After working through all the missions the only real challenge will be to get to Ace level, and that's only if you want to.

OVERALL

Although it's fun for five minutes, it does get a bit tedious after a while. It won't take long before you finish it, and there won't be much to draw you back. This was a fun arcade game but has lost a lot in translation. Desert Strike is by far the better desert shoot-em-up.

The game works so well because it offers such a variety of fighting moves, acrobatic manoeuvres and showy jumps, spins and somersaults - 36 for each character, actually. In joypad and two button joystick mode there are three speeds of punch and kick, high and low blocks and various aerial attacks. Also, each fighter has a special move which is accessed via a series of joystick/pad movements.

Beating up a series of progressively difficult computer players is all very well

- but the game really takes off in two-player mode. Many a battle ended in intense bouts of sulking and protesting about joypad quality. It gets incredibly competitive and addictive as you keep getting your head crammed in and become more and more worked up - desperately fingering the start button in anticipation of just one more rematch. This is a brave and thoroughly playable attempt to convert a slick and complex piece of programming. The characters could have used a little more momentum and inertia to make them more convincing, but there's that tangible, satisfying feeling of the Amiga working flat out to satisfy your blood-lust. Let's face it. Two things in this life are certain. One is that everyone who owns an Amiga will buy Streetfighter 2. The other is that everyone knows that it isn't going to be as smart as the coin-op or the Super Nintendo version. There just aren't enough buttons for all the moves. So in order to get the most from the game, you have to come to it fresh. And if you do, you'll be impressed. Visually, it's probably closer to the original than you'd imagine, and play-wise it's pretty sharp.

The players don't have the awesome range of moves, and it doesn't really feel like you're controlling real people because there isn't much inertia on the characters. Nevertheless, it's certainly the best beat-em-up the Amiga has seen in a very, very long time. Just don't expect the coin-op.

JIM DOUGLAS ■

COMPARE AND CONTRAST

Visually, the Amiga Streetfighter 2 (right) fares quite favourably in comparison to the SNES version. Obviously, the reduced palette has dictated a change or two - but one of the beauties of the game is the wide choice of backgrounds, which the Amiga artists have kept surprisingly faithful to the original. The electrified character can look severely crap, though.

It's not fair. This game has got to live in the shadow of the SNES version which, as everyone knows, is one of the best games ever on any machine ever.

But don't give up on the Amiga version. It's worse, but it's not too bad. The graphics are pretty good and the speed of the thing is okay. But the awful thing is the lack of buttons, of course. Pulling away from your opponent to kick is seriously disorientating at first. But practise, get yourself a Mega Drive joypad and you'll learn the moves. This problem is pretty much impossible to solve, so the Amiga programmers have really done the best job possible with what's available.

But once you've got the moves (such as they are) sorted, then you start having fun. But you won't have as much fun as you would with the SNES.

JAMES LEACH ■

FELICITATIONS!

To combat the rather aggressive jumping dragon punch executed by Ken or Ryu, simply wait until the character is on his way down from the jump...

GAMES MASTER TIP

...As he lands, he is slightly vulnerable for a second.

Offer a well-timed floor sweep and follow with a suitably ruthless combination.

GRAPHICS

Beautiful backgrounds. Apart from the lack of parallax and occasional dodgy animations, virtually identical to the other versions.

SOUNDS

Good music - a different piece for every scene. The effects seem to have been sampled from the SNES version. All pretty competent.

PLAYABILITY

The one-player mode is limited. It's the two-player game that lifts the whole thing above the "just another beat-em-up" protest.

LASTABILITY

Many new tactics and move combinations to discover. It's a game which inspires sad little tournaments and play lengthy sessions.

OVERALL

It's as close to the original as you could hope for. There was always the danger of the programmers simply importing things over and relying on the "name". Happily, that hasn't happened. Considered as a stand-alone game and with the limitations of the machine in mind, this is a good value, thoughtfully programmed, impressive piece of software. Get yourself a couple of joypads.

MICKEY'S MAGICAL QUEST

Another timeless and sickeningly cute superstar makes the inevitable transition into video-gaming and, in the capable hands of Streetfighter 2 programmers at Capcom, comes up grinning inanely. Well, it's what Mickey does best, you see.

Grinning. He's just about to be spiked by some hideous, er, spiky thing – he's grinning. The jaws of fearsome undead beings become inadvertently embedded in his head – he's beaming his ears off. I mean, come on. Is he a man or a mouse? (I thought I said that one was banned. – Ed.)

Mickey's Magical Quest seems to take its cue from The Sorcerer's Apprentice section of Fantasia – in which the mouse fancies himself as something of a sorcerer – hence the title. Here, Pluto – your trusty, if not a little hyperactive – mutt has been nabbed by the Emperor Pete (more translation problems) and, it probably won't come as much of a surprise to learn that you have to rescue him.

Now, let's clear up a few things. You're a mouse.

A pretty dotty mouse with silly pants and a suitably high-pitched girly voice. So, what problems could you possibly pose to an evil ruler with lashings of potent magic at his disposal?

Well, you can run, jump, pick things up and get brutally slaughtered by walking eggs. Happily, there's a wizard chum on hand who augments these somewhat meagre abilities at various points along the journey.

Although it's instant cutesy alert as soon as the game appears and although the structure is the old familiar walking from left to right, meeting and avoiding suitably goonish nasties and gurning end-of-level bosses, Mickey's Magical Quest has some quite astonishing depth to its gameplay. There's plenty to explore, discover, get annoyed with and, finally, scrape through.

Yeah, you'll be oohing and aahing over the cuddly soft-focus graphics and the almost child-like simplicity of the whole affair – but don't be deceived. It ain't easy. Admittedly, the infinite continues are quite a blow to the lastability and SNES gamers used to the challenging grind of games like Super Probotector won't have too much trouble with it, but resist those continues and keep it on Normal level – you'll soon be duly humbled.

Overall this is a luscious and hugely playable piece of software with, surprisingly, more gameplay than gloss. Nice one, Capcom. Now, about that Streetfighter 3...

ANDY LOWE ■

Some sections of the game are a bit tricky and conveniently give rise to terrible double entendres. Careful here – you may feel a little prick.

When it comes to dealing with Pete's minions, Mickey shuns diplomacy and plumps for the Mario approach – he stomps on their heads.

...before confronting these winged vases with flames shooting out of their head. They're difficult to avoid, but they definitely need cooling off.

This guy can be rather a pain in the head. Approach carefully and jump up. As you reach the top of the jump, switch that hosepipe on full blast. The water should fly over the cannon and duly dislodge him.

Billowing flames propel some platforms upwards. Best get off that one, then. Sharpish.

Now, as a mouse faced by this open-mouthed cat-cave, would you just happily wander inside?

MICKEY'S PILGRIMAGE IN FULL

You know, gambolling aimlessly around sickeningly cute backdrops is where it's at these days. Here are the areas in Mickey's Magical Quest...

1. TREETOPS

The first and easiest level. Free and easy among the clouds... soaring with birds... getting killed by irate, incongruously animated foliage.

2. DARK FOREST

"A-ha, Mr Plant. We meet again." Leaves, trees, ominous woodland creatures and a smattering of sorcery.

3. FIRE GROTTTO

Mickey quenches those raging flames with a panache to render Red Adair speechless.

4. PETE'S PEAK

Fancy a spot of impromptu yodelling and climbing? This is the level for you.

6. PETE'S CASTLE

And so the final confrontation with the Emperor - Pete becomes inevitable as Mickey, prompted by some familiar barking, tenuously takes the first steps into his castle.

5. SNOW VALLEY

The obligatory bit involving slipping 'n' sliding, skaters, ice monsters and huge, Mr Frosty contraptions.

AS IF BY MAGIC, THE SHOPKEEPER APPEARED

Throughout the game, Mickey acquires three different costumes which avail him of one or two natty characteristics not normally associated with mice....

Each time a costume change occurs, Mickey nips behind this curtain to, er, change...

Discovered at the end of level one, this one lets our hero shoot energy bolts from his fingertips. And he can stay underwater.

Distinctly handy in the Pete's Peak section, the mouse dons this Swiss-type outfit complete with grappling hook and silly hat.

When being chased by torrents of flame, it's an idea to have a large quantity of water handy. Here's where this costume comes in handy.

It would give me no great pleasure to say that Mickey's Magical Quest is a boring game, trading on the name of a famous cartoon character endowed with a suspiciously high voice.

But luckily that's not the case. This is a totally brilliant game which has everything you could ever wish for in a platformer. There's humour (well I laughed a bit), there's excitement (if you get excited by console games) and there's danger (well, no there isn't, actually).

The graphics are up to cartoon-quality, and Mickey's expressions really work on screen. Everything is smooth and quick, and the puzzles are set at just the right difficulty. Oh and the tunes are well good too.

JAMES LEACH ■

Just to offset the fluffy cuteness of the game, here's a few gratuitous pictures of Mickey dying.

I'm absolutely gobsmacked. How much better can these games possibly get? SNES owners are going to have a good couple of months what with this and Star Wars coming out. It just goes to show that at the moment when it comes to classy games Sega just can't compete. Great graphics, cute and funny throughout, addictive gameplay, Mickey Mouse really does have it all. It may prove to be a little easy but it is still a gem of a game to play, and even when you've finished you'll want to come back for more.

HE CAN, FOR EXAMPLE, VOMIT TO ORDER. HAVE YOU GOT A MATE AT A PROGRAMMING HOUSE WHO CAN DO FUNNY TRICKS? IF SO, WE WANT TO HEAR FROM YOU!

Oooh! It's a big one! Aim for the head! This will stop the Terminator firing at you and will destroy him more quickly than body shots.

Ammo crates yield all sorts of goodies. Most exciting are the bits and pieces which make your gun fire faster. Like this one.

This is John Connor. A critical part of your mission is to protect him from the machines. No Connor, no resistance, no humans.

TERMINATOR

THE ARCADE GAME

This is a game about shooting. It pretends to be nothing else, and so the fact that it contains absolutely nothing but stage after stage of frantic lead-spitting, muzzle-flashing firearm action is hardly a detractor. The only thing that matters is how good a shooter it is.

The game begins in the nightmare wasteland of future Los Angeles, with Terminators clanking their way out of the screen and Hunter/Killers zooming towards you firing missiles. Guiding your cross-hair sight around the screen with joystick or Menacer (by far the preferable option), it's your task to blast every last machine into a million bits.

Of course, it's not just you up against the machines. As well as the option to team up with a mate and go gunning together, there are resistance fighters huddled behind walls and burned out cars who fire (largely uselessly) at the Terminators and HKs. Their main purpose, however, is to prevent you spraying the screen wildly. Hit a friendly body and you'll have many points shaved away in the stage-analysis bit.

And on it goes, out of the wasteland and into the human's hideout, where infiltration unit droids – dressed up as SS officers, so far as I could tell – need to be eradicated.

Playing with a Menacer lightgun is a hundred times more rewarding than using the joystick. For a start, you can wave the gun around scything down Terminators (especially the gold ones who explode in a most pleasing way) in a far more carefree manner than is permitted using the joystick. Also, the cross-hair moves a lot faster with the Menacer, actually making the game easier.

Life quickly becomes incredibly difficult when you get to the third stage. Here, it's your job to protect John Connor as he bounces along in a converted pick-up truck/mobile cannon.

Terminators run alongside the truck and Hunter/Killers fly overhead. The aim, of course, is to avoid shooting John Connor and the truck while picking off the Terminators and Hunter/Killers before they can get to him. To be totally honest, this stage is a real pain in the neck. It's far too long and completely out of step with the difficulty level of the rest of the game.

Nevertheless once you've got past this point, the difficulty eases somewhat and you'll soon find that you'll slip back into straightforward, all-out blasting. If you've got a mate to play with, and a Menacer, Terminator 2 is an absolutely ideal purchase. If not, it's not so hot. JIM DOUGLAS

These sort of orb things drop down, crack open and horrible flying robots appear. The solution? Rocket them as soon as they land.

The graphics, as you can see, are actually pretty great. Especially when you're blowing hell out of one of these infiltration units.

GAMES MASTER TIP

GREETINGS! Budding Schwarzeneggers should take heed of this particular piece of advice if they wish to maximize their firepower. As well as blasting ammo crates for extra weapons, always be sure to shoot all background objects such as fire extinguishers, walls and lights (shown here). More often than not, especially on level two, extra lives, smart bombs and other bonuses will appear, aiding the termination process no end.

Off with their heads! A particularly enjoyable aspect of Terminator 2 is the ability to slice off the robots' heads. As well as looking great, this tactic is actually the fastest way to do away with the terminators.

TERMINATOR 2

Despite its rather terrifying appearance, this end-of-level droid is a complete pussycat; its only form of defence being the twin rapid-fire photon cannons and the rocket launcher mounted in its middle. Sort out a blasting system (head, guns, middle and rocket port) and you'll be laughing.

The first Terminator on the Mega Drive was very good, albeit too short. This game on the other hand is a bit longer but not as good. It is, as the name implies, taken from the arcade game, which was an Operation Wolf-style game with you trying to blow away as many enemies as possible.

The aim remains the same – although this time without the huge loss of money involved. However, this is not as good as the arcade version. All of the sound effects are there but it just doesn't capture the feel of the arcade. As it stands, it's a good game made even better with the Menacer option.

ADRIAN PRICE ■

Let's get something straight here and now. You seriously do not want to play this with the Menacer. It's a nice idea but it just doesn't work. However, with a joypad it is almost fun for the first few goes and then it goes downhill from there.

The graphics are okay and some of the sound effects are neat but there just isn't enough meat to the game to make it really playable. The two-player mode adds a little to the game but in general I would avoid this if I were you. For the money, there are better games around than this.

LES ELLIS ■

GRAPHICS

Largely excellent. The Terminators are well defined and explode in a pleasing manner. The static humans in some scenes are a bit crap.

SOUNDS

As you would expect. Eerie clunking noises and screeching death wails from the Terminators. Healthy gun sound effects

PLAYABILITY

But only if you've got a menacer. Otherwise it's a 7. As playable as shooting games get, with a great two-player mode.

LASTABILITY

By far the most enduring Op Wolf-style blaster to date, thanks to the wide variety of levels and the variations on blasting.

OVERALL

If you liked the coin-op, as the old saying goes, you'll love this. You'll love the blasting, and you'll love the Menacer option, but you probably won't love getting stuck on stage 3 for ages. Also, joypad play seriously depletes the wide-eyed-battle frenzy that the Menacer offers.

OF THE CHAOS ENGINE

The Gentleman and the Brigand are running into trouble here. Big trouble. Huge trouble, really. Massive, in fact.

The forest section has got loads of space to move around in. And luckily neither player's shots harms the other.

There are up to four levels in each, er, level. And you can't shoot things above you, either.

Special weapons, like this attractive ring of bright fire are often littered around the place.

Baron Fortescue has been tampering with nature again. But this time he's gone too far, and his evil, twisted brain has given birth to an unholy machine with a dead cool name; the Chaos Engine.

So what's needed are some Victorian adventuring types.

Ideally some from widely varying walks of life to make the game a bit more interesting. (Oh, sorry. Spoiling the atmosphere a bit there).

It's a two-player game, and even if only one human is taking part, the computer will furnish you with another little chap to play with (as it were). You get a choice of six characters: Each has a different set of specifications. For example, if you choose the Navvy, you'll get a rough, tough, jolly sort of fellow,

THE BITMAP BROTHERS, WRITERS OF THE CHAOS ENGINE, AREN'T BROTHERS AT ALL. THEY'RE COLLEAGUES IN REAL LIFE.

THE VICTORIAN PLAYERS

THE BRIGAND

He's a bit of a lad, is Briggie. Well known for fighting in bars, punching in restaurants and wrestling in coffee shops, he favours a big weapon and little brains.

THE THUG

Specialising in punching the heads off goats, he's only in it for the violence. He's more inclined to look after himself (if he's played by the computer) rather than protect you.

THE MERCENARY

Mean, ruthless and well-versed in the art of brutal smacking, he's a good guy to take along to a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, especially if you're planning bloodshed.

THE NAVY

A fleet of ships including an aircraft carrier, destroyers and the odd minesweeper, the Navy comes with a wing of F-14 Tomcats. (That's Navy, you total git. Ed.)

THE GENTLEMAN

Everybody knows his sort. Trilby, mobile phone, filofax, expensive fountain pen. Possibly comfy boxer shorts in preference to tight underpants. The Gentleman isn't the sort to refer to females as 'slags'. A nice bloke, with lots of intelligence. And a gun. Oh, and a rather dubious pipe. But the less said about that, the better, really.

THE PREACHER

You'd sort of expect a man of the 'cloth' to be into peace, harmony and godly stuff, wouldn't you? But with this guy, you'd be sadly, sadly misguided. In fact, he's a bit of a lad, is Preachy. Known for fighting in bars, punching in restaurants and wrestling in... (We've done this one. You haven't got a clue, have you? Ed.) slow but capable of taking some serious punishment. Choose the Gentleman and you've got a quick fop, with his long hair and his fancy city ways. It's all relative, and the characters are about equal in the survivability stakes.

So once you've selected two characters, you're pitched deep into the world of the Chaos Engine. Well, quite near it, at least. There are four worlds, each with four levels to get through before you manage to see the evil contraption itself.

The game turns out to be an obliquely-viewed Gauntlet-style affair, with eight-way movement and scrolling. Both of the quest characters stay on screen at the same time, and they must stick together as they charge around the levels, blasting frenziedly.

Each of these levels has a maze of paths through it. The idea is that there are a great many ways to get through each level. But on every level you must find several power nodes and shoot them, thus opening an, er, opening through which you and the other guy dive.

There's a serious puzzle element, too. You must use your brain to get past certain baddies and work out how to negotiate seemingly impenetrable things. There are keys, power-ups, special weapons and various collectables, all of which require some common sense to operate. This game really blurs the lines between arcade action and mind-bending puzzle gameplay. Add to that the role-play element of the characters and you've got a rather marvellous blend of all three genres.

The game plays beautifully too, as you'd expect from the Bitmaps. It's hectic blasting action, with gorgeous scenery and great monsters (different ones on every level, too).

The style of the whole thing is very Jules Verne, and it's complemented by one of the best soundtracks I've ever heard on any game ever. It's a dance-rave-rock sort of thing and goes brilliantly with the steam-punk look of the Chaos Engine. It even changes tempo as you move from the violent bits to the more puzzley, secret bits.

And as if that wasn't enough, there are loads of samples. In fact, every time you collect something new or do something quite impressive, you hear a really clear, excellent voice telling you what's going on and what you've just done.

The two-character idea works excellently when the computer's playing the other guy, but when there are two humans it gets even better. You and your

There's a paltry prize for the first person to write in and tell us that the Mercenary looks like that bloke off the Sega ads. Anyway, here you see the stats of the guy, as well as his weaponry and how much money you can spend on getting him even tougher (£4,000, it would seem).

That yin/yang thing is a restart point. You must collect it in order to progress safely. Oh, but first, kill that baddie coming over the bridge.

chum must co-operate to get through the levels, but you must also compete to get the money and special weapons. It adds a brilliant element to the game, getting the balance right between beating the other player and staying alive. In fact, it's really worth getting the GamesMaster himself to tip this in his own inimitable style. So look out for that little nugget of a gem, then. (It's sort of down there, by the way).

It's nice when this happens. You can collect these special weapons at the places where you really need them most, er, like here.

Anyway, to get back to the point, The Chaos Engine has successfully brought together arcade, role-playing and puzzle for perhaps the first time in any game. The whole thing has got bags, nay bin-liners of style and immense addictiveness. There's no question - we are talking quality product, here. Buy it, play it and enjoy it, because it's seriously good.

GAMES MASTER TIP

GREETINGS!

The Chaos Engine is most excellent as a two-player game. But my tip is not to compete too much with the other player. Don't rush towards the edge of the screen to try and get the next set of power-ups. You will be attacked by all the monsters, who automatically go for the nearest player to them.

Also remember that if you collect most of the money and special weapons, you will ensure that your character remains well, but your partner will die. Once that happens, you're on your own, and to be honest, you haven't got a chance. So by all means get the upper hand occasionally, but remember to co-operate!

Remarkably good. Each of the 16 levels has a different look. Superb detail and that distinctive steam-punk look make it gorgeous.

SOUNDS

If this was a CD, I'd buy it. It may be released, so look out for it. You can dance all night to it, especially if you've "done" some Lucozade.

PLAYABILITY

Eight-way violent mayhem, with tons to see and do. Every game is different, with more than just completing each level to achieve.

LASTABILITY

You can finish the game without even seeing half the stuff in it. There's so much in it and the addictiveness factor is very high.

OVERALL

Three cheers for The Chaos Engine. It's a class release, and every time you play you find more weird stuff in it. It gets pretty tough, too, which has got to be good. Oh and there are some gorgeous things to see later on in it.

And with that soundtrack, it's deserves a place in the 'Hall of Bloody Excellent Games'. So three more cheers are in order, probably.

Cute. That's what this game is. It's got a lovely squirrel, a sweet li'l mole, a cuddly bunny and one of the nicest beavers I've seen for a long time.

These are all friends of Rolo - a chubby elephant who was stolen from his mother at an early age and forced to do tricks in McSmiley's circus... (Oh god, I'm filling up. C'mon Steve, get a grip. And try not to think of Dumbo... Dumbo...? WAAAHH!)

(Sniff). Sorry about that. Anyway, little Rolo has escaped and is busy tracking down and releasing his furry friends. Rolo must be a bloody popular little pachyderm, cos he's got hundreds of 'em, locked up in cages and scattered around whatever land this happens to be.

Rolo's escape plan is brilliantly simple: jump on the evil ringmaster's head, thus rendering him somewhat, er, dead.

Collect his master key to all the cages on that level. Walk past the cage to open it, and guide the liberated creatures to the transporter. Which, of course, is easier said than done.

You'll find that Rolo often needs his chums to help him achieve his goal and so it's all about using the jumping, swimming, digging and climbing talents

As with Super Mario World, you follow Rolo's quest across a sprawling map, which fits together like a jigsaw as levels are completed. Like Super Mario World, you can re-enter completed levels to find secret exits and stuff. But, sadly, unlike Super Mario World, there's no battery back-up (or passcodes) so completing the game will have to be done all in one go. So, there's no room for mistakes.

I almost finished two of Rolo to the Rescue's four areas in a single evening, and while I did enjoy battling through the puzzley levels, I soon got tired of playing them again (and again) whenever I had to restart from scratch.

Given Rolo to the Rescue's incredibly high cuteness factor and its massive kiddy appeal (I'm just a big kid and I think it's toppas), it's a shame that the programmers couldn't have chucked in a save game option to make it as player-friendly as it is cute 'n' cuddly.

STEVE JARRATT ■

Now here's something a little different. Electronic Arts, masters of the sports game, have produced a cute little platform number

I found Rolo to the Rescue quite enjoyable at first. It's cute, there's no killing involved and it's easy to play.

The map is huge and there is no way of saving the game which means you will have to complete in one very long play session. This is the major drawback of the game. A battery back-up would have been a godsend.

Yeah, I agree with the verdict. It's as sweet as a pack of Rolos but will probably last a little bit longer. It's one of those big platform games that always prove to be popular, although with no way of saving the game there is a problem.

LES ELLIS ■

This game has started me wondering just how cute things can get. I mean, just look at the cuddly, pink, fluffy gorgeousness of it all. Makes you glad to be alive, doesn't it?

But what's impressive is that there's a really tough sod of a game underneath the sweet exterior. It's not something that you're going to complete in a few minutes, that's for sure. So if you're partial to cutesy graphics, and you're challenged by tough gameplay, give Rolo to the Rescue a try.

JAMES LEACH ■

GRAPHICS

Great cartoony scenery with bright, bold backdrops and slick parallax scrolling. Rolo and his mates are beautifully drawn and animated.

SOUNDS

Real tromp-tromp elephant music, with various themes. Tunes and spot effects are ideally suited to the jolly action.

PLAYABILITY

A clever platform puzzler Loads of secrets to discover requiring brain-power and arcade skills. Best suited to the young.

LASTABILITY

It's great fun for the first couple of sessions. But why oh why isn't there a save game option? This really cripples the lasting interest.

OVERALL

I'm a sucker for cuddly creatures and Rolo to the Rescue is one of the cutest games I've ever played! It's very clever, extremely playable and packed with hidden levels and things to discover. Sadly, it doesn't know whether to be a kids' fun-game or a testing skill-fest for real hard Mega Drivers, since the later levels get well sticky.

It's a lovely game, but until a save game option is shoved in, I'm afraid the 90% region is out of bounds.

Of course, it's all about money. Gold opens doors (well, keys open doors, but gold pays for stuff once you've gone through). Here you see our hero, Toby (or whatever he's called) collecting a small bag of monies after punching and kicking a baddie to death.

There's a great deal of rather repetitive baddie-blasting to be done. It's not just the winning, it's the taking apart...

Oh yes, and, interestingly, in the background there's a switch which will allow our hero to hitherto unreachable parts of the level.

You have failed to become a god, and must work in an estate agent's office forever...

Here's the perfect answer to all those sad gits who complain about violent video games corrupting the kiddies of today. Just say "What about the legends of old, eh?"

All the ancient legends involve serious face-punching and the odd hefty shoeing as well. Heads come off, blood frequently spurts and people get charred, chopped and mutilated in the most disagreeable ways. And these sorts of stories were told to nippers as young as four, apparently.

Anyway, the basic idea in Gods is to become immortal. This can only be achieved by smacking in the heads of anybody who gets in your way.

Luckily you're wandering around a series of platforms littered with keys, weaponry, potions and other stimulants.

Also luckily, there are a vast number of mythical creatures to chop up. These generally take the form of weird oven-ready chickens and are easy to kill. Rather more horrible are the end-of-level bosses, who are modelled on legendary heroes like Hercules, Odysseus, Ulysses and, er, more.

For a start, the game is a great deal quicker than the Amiga version, which has been out for absolutely aeons. Both the movements of your man and those of the baddies are smooth and as rapid as you please, making the whole playing experience a pleasurable one, to which you will return on several occasions, perhaps more.

There are four worlds, each of which connects pretty solidly with the last, making it like one continuous level with the occasional guardian thrown in for good measure. This limits the variations in graphics, however, and the game looks pretty similar most of the way through.

But never mind. It plays very well. Although platform collect-and-shoot games are two-a-penny, this one stands out above the rest. We're talking good graphics, nicely thought-out puzzles and tricks combined with extreme playability and a large chunk of style. It looks like nothing else, and the legendary plot, although also in Myth, works better in Gods, giving it a different sort of feel.

But the question which shouts out to be asked is, "Does Gods stretch the limits of what's possible with

The key to Gods is successful manipulation of the levers on the walls. But sometimes it's a mistake to pull them all. It's best to go past without touching them. If you can get a couple of rooms further into the game, the lever probably has a detrimental effect, and should only be tried if you can afford to lose a life.

the SNES?" And the answer – no, it doesn't. Sure the game runs quickly and the whole thing is slick and colourful, but it's just a slightly updated Amiga game. More bits to it would be nice. There's surely more room inside the cart, and it wouldn't take that much more programming.

But these are mere dreams. What we've got is a damn good game. It's tough, fun and you'll want to play it lots. But a bit more variation and SNES gorgeousness would have been nice, so I'm going to give it 78% probably.

JAMES LEACH ■

I first played Gods on the Amiga and to tell you the truth it was very slow. It looked nice and had great gameplay but the character sprite lacked speed. The SNES version is basically the same game with excellent graphics and addictiveness. This format sees the sprites speeded up, dramatically improving the game, so it no longer takes half an hour to walk across the screen. A fine game which has been made even finer.

ADRIAN PRICE ■

Although it's quite a plush and compelling platform-em-up, Gods doesn't have the "Goodness Me" factor which is so crucially required in this particular game genre.

Sure, it's a step up from the Amiga version – but, in line with James' niggles – so what? It was bound to be. The SNES is capable of greater things than this and a deluxe conversion of an ancient game doesn't exactly induce instant arousal.

Okay – so it could be justified by saying that the original game pre-dated the console boom and so the new generation of console owners have a right to play a new, improved version on their very own machine. But this terribly uninteresting conversion-by-default trend is emitting some evil smells of laziness. If you haven't played the game before, it's worth a fiddle. Just don't expect to be waylaid by the baseball bat of technical excellence. Or something.

12 Health restorer (dead powerful, this one). It really is, definitely.

13 Spear. Certainly better than those broccoli spear things.

14 Death star. Sort of smart bomb that clears the screen.

OVERALL

Gods is a good, quality product. It's better than the Amiga version by far, and you can easily get hooked and lose a few hours in it. But I still reckon that it's a bit too samey all the way through. Each world seems to be a wooden door away from the next. Pity about that, but the game is still fun.

WING COMMANDER

Ah, the typical hero. Square jawed, handsome, rugged and tough. Bit like me really (Stop that right there - Ed). Well alright, here the hero models the latest in fish bowls.

Wing Commander, one of the most eagerly awaited releases for the SNES, is here at last. For those of you who don't know, this is the game which managed to switch on the serious PC community to games. Evidence enough that this game is something special.

Wing Commander is one of the most gripping and interesting shoot-em-ups I've ever come across. There aren't many 3D space blasters around for the system, and this is by far and away the best of the lot.

At the start of the game the storyline is extremely simple - the humans are pitted against the Kilrathi in a conflict for universal domination. But as you progress through the game, the plot twists and turns to reflect your performance.

You begin as the new recruit on the front line of the war against the Kilrathi. However, if you mess up the first few missions, you'll find that your assignments have less and less bearing on the war. Escorting minor transports in a safe section of the system is hardly appropriate work for an interstellar combat pilot, is it?

If this guy knows so much, why doesn't he get out there? Then again with all those enemy ships around he's the sensible one.

Once you start bungling these simple missions, you will find it a real struggle to make it back to the front lines. One of the most successful features of Wing Commander must be this truly addictive, interactive plot. This gives a genuine purpose to the deep space zooming and blasting.

Visually, Wing Commander is one of the best I have seen on the SNES. It's right up there with Star

Looks like it got a little hot out there, sir!

No sh... or kidding. Drag up an ammo box and let me tell you about it. Well there were these ten Kilrathi ships and I was out there on my own... well there was only one of them, I flew a bit too close to an asteroid, that's where the dents came from.

I'm really not convinced by this. The shots here look great don't they? But when they're moving, it's a different story. I've got a big problem with the way the graphic engine makes the ships flick and flit about as your view point changes.

One second you'll be chasing down a Kilrathi ship, about to put a photon torpedo up its exhaust, and the next it will be pointing in a different direction. Of course it's understandable given the amount of mega-maths the machine is having to do, but it's still pretty ugly. JIM DOUGLAS

Okay so let me get this straight, this stick in the middle steers the ship, right, where's the on board CD player? Where do I hang my furry dice. Right what do I do about those mine things floating towards me?

You got 5 of the hairballs, LES...

"Yeah I know, it was easy really, honest skipper. Do I get my medals now?" Promotions and medals only come with multiple successes and lots of Kilrathi kills, so keep practising.

 STOP ■

The presentations are more longwinded than the Queen's speech. At least you can flick past, if you can't stand to see yourself rewarded.

Wars and Mickey Mouse. The intro sequence alone is stunning. Combine this with all the bits in between and you'll start to wonder why you ever played normal shoot-em-ups - you'll never look back once you've seen this. Never having actually flown in deep space combat I'm not exactly sure what it's like, although a shot at Wing Commander is probably as close to the real thing as you are going to get, for the time being at least.

The only criticism I have of Wing Commander is that it can get a little repetitive, especially if you keep dying on one mission. That aside this is going to be one of the biggest selling SNES games ever. Only the possibility of Mario becoming a space pilot could possibly rival this one for a top slot in the ratings.

The GamesMaster crew in their natural states. Hyped up and ready for action, there's never a lapse moment here at GMHQ.

If you are looking for a shoot-em-up for your SNES this has to be the one. It has an epic storyline which changes according to how you perform during the game. Ultimately it's this brand of interaction which drags you in and gets you hooked. The graphics are stunningly detailed - the first time you see them, you'll be taken aback.

It is a safe bet that no-one is going to finish Wing Commander in a few days, this is one of those games which will keep you going through the long, dark, winter nights.

Yet again the SNES shows how to lead the way in the video game wars. There is no way you can call yourself a real shoot-em-up freak until you have locked horns with the Kilrathi in Wing Commander. Go for it.

LES ELLIS ■

Talk to SHOTGLASS.

Old Shotgun is one of those who thinks he knows it all after a few simple escort missions.

...and the medal ceremony is still going on. All I did was find the ship's supply of toilet rolls.

HOW NOT TO FLY A MISSION

Mission Briefing, Enyo System, 06:00 hours, 2654.110.

1 Spend the all-important briefing time flicking elastic bands at your wingman.

2 Complain to the maintenance men about not putting the go faster stripes and the furry dice on your ship.

3 Perform the coveted wheel spin in the docking bay just before you launch.

4 Spend ten minutes wondering what those red blips are on your radar screen.

5 Think "cor, what a nice firework display".

6 Oh, those aren't fireworks, they're the enemy lasers. No problem, I've got a secret new manoeuvre up my sleeve.

7 Oops!

8 He won't be missed.

GREETINGS!

Most of the characters you meet in Wing Commander are combat veterans. Listen to them in the bar on the Tiger's Claw and they will give you advice on the best methods to use to take out the Kilrathi forces. The only person who isn't worth listening to is MANIAC.

LES, right? I'm Knight. Welcome to the Blue Angels.

GRAPHICS

As close to perfect as you're going to get. All the story screens are brilliant and the flying sequences are simply breathtaking.

SOUNDS

A pounding soundtrack adds to the wonderful atmosphere of the game. The music has to be one of the game's strongest points.

PLAYABILITY

With the storyline and the all-round stunning looks this is a pleasure to play. Once you start the game you won't want to surrender.

LASTABILITY

One of the more difficult shoot-em-ups I've come across. The game is structured perfectly to keep you blasting away.

OVERALL

What can I say. I love this game. Play this in a dark room with the volume turned up and you are in a different world. The interactive storyline creates such an atmosphere that you can get quite carried away. After a few conflicts with the catlike Kilrathi the neighbours' cat had better watch out. I keep coming back to this time and time again. Buy it and you'll find yourself doing the same. I recommend this game to every SNES owner.

LES ■

All is quiet, when all of a sudden the radar picks up a mine field, blasting them is out of the question (although why is never explained) so you will have to take evasive manoeuvres.

Another mission completed - time to head home for Horlicks and a bedtime story. It's tough at the top, but someone's got to do it.

If your asteroid evasion or combat flying isn't up to scratch then this is what you will find happening to you very quickly. No time to hit eject you are about to become space dust.

Converted from the excellent PC version, Wing Commander appears to have all the necessary components of a great game.

It doesn't take too long to get into this game (despite its epic proportions) and battle for the freedom of the known worlds (well, something along those lines).

The graphics really are gorgeous and everything has been animated smoothly. The scene where you see your character running down the hall to his spaceship really has to be seen to be appreciated.

The gameplay involved is, to say the least, deep. There are countless missions which range in complexity from easy to hard, making it a challenging game. With passcodes to let you continue this will certainly find its place in the 'great game' league.

Wing Commander is an excellent game which has been polished till it shines. Get it now, that's all I have to say.

The adventure begins at Barnett College. Indy has a mysterious gift from the mysterious git, Mr Smith, AKA a crafty Kraut called Klaus Kerner.

Indy meets amateur scholar, part-time poet and professional dreamer Alain Trottier in Monte Carlo... and later on becomes caught up in a gripping car chase through the streets.

From blubbery AI's, Indy rides either in a balloon or on a camel across the desert to a dig site. The bad guys are conveniently tagged 'TROUBLE'.

INDIANA JONES AND THE FATE OF ATLANTIS THE GRAPHIC ADVENTURE

NOT ONLY DID THE JEERMANS LOSE TWO WORLD WARS, THEY ALSO LOST THE WORLD CUP ONCE TO ENGLAND!

Watch out cos the man with the hat and the whip is back. Indiana Jones' latest adventure on the Amiga apparently comes from a comic book rather than being based on a film. This time around those conniving Jeermans are in search of the legendary city of Atlantis, for among its many secrets is a never-ending supply of a potentially devastating mineral called orichalcum.

With it, the sausage munchers can rule supreme. In short, they must be stopped. Will Indy beat the boche to Atlantis and save the world? Will he get a decent snog at the end of it all? Well, all that's up to you. In his quest Indy goes globetrotting - so, no surprises there. Along the way he picks up Sophia Haggood (a former assistant who's now turned psychic), and bumps into all sorts of chummy and not-so-nice characters. He encounters a fair few problems en route which can be solved using objects picked up along the way combined with the help of your intellect. Your first big job is to retrieve Plato's Lost Dialogue - a valuable book of clues which point to the whereabouts of Atlantis. Once the novel aid is found, the adventure splits into three paths (Fists, Team or Wits), which are essentially the three difficulty levels of the game. Most of the locations presented have subtle additions or omissions, but

The bead is made of ORICHALCUM...

GREETINGS! Buying a hard disk drive would be a good start. But if you can't afford one, use the following advice to speed your way through...

On no account should you get involved in GBH with the bouncer, Biff, when you're in New York. Push a few crates and sneak into the theatre round the back way.

If you're having trouble finding your way out of the Cretian labyrinth then try constructing a makeshift orichalcum detector. All in all it's quite a simple solution provided you can find the necessary parts... that is, some string, a comb and a scarf. Now give it a good rub to make it work, the detector that is - but make sure any orichalcum on your person isn't exposed!

Nope, Indy and the Fate of Atlantis isn't the bee's trouser-stains when it comes to graphical adventures. Monkey Island 2 still beats it hands down. But it's a good attempt, and a lot of chuckles can be had playing it.

The plot is pretty cohesive, but it just doesn't come to life as you wend your way through it. It doesn't have the playability that it should, and you could find yourself getting weary of the continued Nazi onslaught, becoming incredibly annoyed by the eleven (count 'em) disks the whole thing comes on.

Overall, Indy and the Fate of Atlantis isn't bad enough to be consigned to a watery grave, but nor does it deserve a place on dry land. Perhaps it should be left in a bog, swamp or marshy area with no footpaths.

GRAPHICS

Smart animations and lots of 'em. The quality varies between pretty to pretty rough. The scrolling's a bit poo, too, come to think of it.

SOUNDS

An ill-fitting soundtrack rubs you up the wrong way and there are beggar-all spot effects to lick your ear drums.

PLAYABILITY

Easy-peasy lemon-squeazy mouse-driven interface, and you can't help but get off on the (by and large) cinematic atmosphere.

LASTABILITY

Plenty of puzzles, and three paths to play. Even if you manage to complete it, you can try to finish it again with maximum IQ points.

OVERALL

IJATFOA:TGA is the best adventure of its type available for the Amiga. Sure, it slows down in parts, and if you haven't got a hard disk drive you might take offence at the disk swapping involved. Tough. Put your brain in gear for once and give your tired trigger finger a well-earned rest. Those dashed Hun deserve another good kicking.

JIM ■

All the action happens in the top two-thirds of the screen. You see animated sequences and dialogue and interact with the scenery via the verbs shown in the panel at the bottom of the picture. All objects collected by Indy are shown on the right-hand side of the panel.

I can't remember much of the Indy films. They seem to have blurred into one seven-hour epic that'll have you diving for the bathroom cabinet before they get under way.

But this game seems to be a pretty good rendition of the Indy-style adventures. For such a big game it feels and looks quite easy to get into; there's always something going on (and it's usually quite loud). You get to crack your whip at various National Socialists, and there's a lot of nice graphical detail in the background.

A fine game. LucasArts have pulled off another one. It's not amazing, but competent and well worth getting stuck into, especially if you're a fan of the films and you fancy yourself as a bit of a Harrison Ford-style rugged type.

LES ELLIS ■

ATLANTIS

the problems are usually unique to each path.

Non-interactive animated intermission sequences are occasionally shown. These are a nice addition as they impart a film-like atmosphere and provide a breather from the exploration, character discussions and puzzle-solving.

Those are only a couple of many nice touches in Indiana Jones and the Fate of Atlantis. Another, which isn't explored quite as deeply as it might be, is the option to play the part of Sophia. She's the only person capable of sweet-talking a certain character, but sadly that's about all she's good for.

The plot is top-notch, the look and feel of an Indy adventure is spot-on and there's a smorgasbord of puzzling shenanigans to feast upon. But – and it's a big one (honk!) – all this is tainted by the adventure being spread across 11 disks and mucho-disko accessing and swapping is involved. There are other (minor) faults such as not being able to use Indy's whip as often as I'd like.

Overall though, I have to admit that I found Indiana Jones and the Fate of Atlantis to be far more entertaining than, say, those smug, ugly Sierra romps or even the impressive Monkey Island 2.

It may not be a laugh a minute, but the dry sense of humour will often raise a smile and relieve the frustration of not being able to solve a particularly taxing problem.

IJATFOA:TGA isn't as interactively action-packed as some Indy fans might like, but anyone enamoured by Dr Jones' more intellectual side is in for a rare and tasty treat.

In the jungle of Tikal lies a temple and the shady Charles Sternhart. Unfortunately Chas won't allow the duo to explore his inner-sanctum until they prove just how smart, or honest, they are by answering a question, parrot-fashion (hint hint).

Meanwhile, the Nazis are busy discovering the explosive power of orichalcum.

"Nice shot kid, now let's go home". Trench warfare takes on a new meaning when you're fighting swarms of TIE fighters on the Death Star.

There may not be much traffic congestion in the desert but that doesn't stop the Jawas from trying to prevent you from overtaking their sand crawler. Blast them all and take to the skies to avoid the pits.

Where would the movie industry be without Star Wars, eh? Never before had a film created such a buzz – even if you weren't a sci-fi fan, it was the film to see. Now the SNES version of the Star Wars epic is fast becoming the game to play, whether you liked the movie or not. At last a game has come along that could well live up to the hype. Forget the old days of movie conversions, when the games failed to live up to virtually everyone's expectations. Star Wars is on the scene, and we're closer to the interactive movie than ever.

From the start you know you are in for something special. It's like watching something from the movie itself. There's the scrolling message, the fighting spaceships – everything you would expect to be there is there, along with the glorious soundtrack. The game itself is divided into sections, each depicting a scene from the film, although some of the scenes portrayed seem to be rather a curious choice. I mean, for how long did you see Luke in the Jawa's Sand Crawler? Not long, if at all, methinks. However the levels that are included are pretty stunning.

The action ranges from a romp through the desert where you blast the hell out of everything in sight to the platform blasting of the Sand Crawler. Between them you'll find the amazing 3D effects of the Land Speeder racing to the Crawler and many others. There is something here that will appeal to all kinds of gamers, but believe me, only the best will get to see the later levels – this is one tough cookie.

As far as looks go this game can't be faulted. Even the platformy stages look as though they could have been taken straight from the film. Great detail has been incorporated throughout the scenes – the backdrops are breathtaking at times. It is rare for a game to look as sweet as this and still have any semblance of gameplay left in it. How many SNES games have there been that look really nice but which completely suck when it comes to gameplay? Too many, that's for sure.

Graphics and gameplay may be what ultimately sell a game, but a stunning soundtrack like this makes things so much more interesting. It certainly attracted a lot of attention around the office when I turned up the volume. I can't think of any game which has better sound effects and music than this. It makes you wonder what could be achieved with a CD version? >>>

It seems like a bloody age since Star Wars was out up the cinema. 15 years. Shocking, isn't it? Nevertheless, what with it coming out on rental vid, then sell through, then sell through widescreen, and laser disc, and what with it being one of the greatest ever films of all time ever, public interest in the official game of the exploits of Luke, Han and the others is still pretty hot news. This is a jolly enough effort, with the plot of the game keeping just close enough to the film for the die-hard fans' benefit yet still throwing in enough surprises to keep you on your toes.

Nice enough Mode 7 stuff down the trench (ahem) too, but nothing oh-my-god-it's-so-incredible, I'm afraid.

JIM DOUGLAS ■

I can't remember this being anywhere in the film but I guess in such a superb game creative license is allowed. This defence droid stands between you and escape from the Death Star. Come to think of it, it's pretty offensive for a defence droid. (That's enough of that – Ed.)

This very horrendous thing is the Sarlaac Pit Monster. This actually came from The Return of the Jedi – but what the hell, just make sure you blow him away before he wastes you.

Going down, keep firing to take out fire pits on the side of the crevice.

Luke has blaster, Luke finds droid, droid gets blasted, dead simple realy.

Inside the crawler you will come under attack from all manner of automatons. Luckily Luke can use high powered guided missiles against them. These'll make short work of any machine.

GRAPHICS

Beautifully drawn scenes and an intro sequence which has to be seen. Far superior to any other space blaster/platform game.

SOUNDS

As close to perfect as possible without a CD. Great blasting effects. Some in-game effects sound just like their movie counterparts.

PLAYABILITY

Instantly playable. The controls are easy to master and there is enough variety in the missions to keep you interested.

LASTABILITY

There aren't many missions but they are long and tough. Brave the higher levels you'll find yourself with a real fight on your hands.

The action switches to Han as he makes his way towards the Millenium Falcon.

This game is a lot better than I thought it would be. Star Wars is a high target to aim for, and I expected the game to sprawl all over the place, trying to keep up. But not a bit of it. Smart graphics, marvellous gameplay and a great deal of variety all combine to make it a seriously good chunk of hot gamesplaying action (as we say in the trade).

Super Star Wars hasn't got any real faults. Maybe it's a bit too tough, but this has got to be a good thing in the long run. It looks well, plays well and you should buy it.

Don't listen to Jim. He's just in one of his moods.

JAMES LEACH ■

It really is a bit much. All Chewie wanted was a quick bevvie or two with his mates and ends up having to tear up some alien scumbags. This bar brawl is getting out of hand.

►► All this praise is doing my head in, is there anything wrong with Star Wars? Well actually - yes. There aren't many levels to it, which is probably just as well because some of them are so hard that it would take forever to finish them. There are also a hell of a lot of things in here that don't actually appear in any of the Star Wars movies. Come to think of it, there isn't much from the movie in here at all. The Death Star trench sequence is a disappointment. With the SNES's capabilities the programmers could have gone for a Mode 7 frenzy, but didn't. The trench is a tad slow and jerky for my liking.

These criticisms aside I think that Star Wars is a classic game. It's a perfect example of the sort of polished graphical cavalcade that makes the SNES look so effortlessly dreamy. Oh, er, I've come over all strange.

Still, you get the point. This is a great game and well worth the sponds. Or zonks, or meebles, or whatever the space currency happens to be these days.

LES ELLIS ■

GAMES MASTER TIP

GREETINGS!
 To become a true Jedi knight you must locate the droids in the Jawas' Sand Crawler. Remember your laser shots will bounce off its metal walls. This is an easy way of taking out ceiling targets and mid-level guardians.

OVERALL

Star Wars is an amazing game, breaking new ground in video gaming. It's rare to find a game that is strong in all departments. With great sound, graphics and action there isn't a lot wrong with it. There may not be many levels and the fact that you have to start from the beginning of the level every time you die is annoying, but this is a classy piece of software. This and Mickey Mouse show how powerful the SNES can be. Recommended.

KRUSTY'S GUIDE TO SQUASHING RATS

So what do you actually have to do in this game then, eh? Well, here's a quick walk through one of the levels...

RATS: "(Squeaky giggles). Look - it's old Krusty and he thinks he's going to kill us..."

KRUSTY (THINKS): "Hmm. A couple of fan-type things on the floor and wall. Intriguing..."

"...first I'll hop up to this platform and add this useful block of wood to my inventory."

RATS: "Hey, that was nice of Krusty to place that block in that position. Let's go, guys!"

RATS: "Aaargh - we've been blown up by the screen and into Bart's squishing machine!"

KRUSTY: "Indeed. The rats are gone and I am the skillster. Now, I shall depart."

Krusty's Fun House is full of rats. Krusty is worried for his business and he really is anxious to get rid of them ASAP. Enter one Bart Simpson (and assorted other Simpson characters) manning a boxing-glove-on-a-spring style mashing machine. The sadistic Krusty realises that all he has to do is get the rats to walk into the machine and all his troubles are over.

Now any of you who have met a rat will know that getting a rat to walk anywhere near where you want it to is quite difficult. Some would say impossible. But luckily for Krusty these rats are spectacularly stupid. Either that or on drugs. They just keep walking (Lemmings style) in whichever direction they happen to be facing until they either walk into a wall too high to climb over or fall off the edge of something. Realising that this bizarre (and, quite frankly, stupid) behaviour is their one weakness, Krusty must simply scuttle around each level placing objects in the way of rats to turn them around, bridging gaps in order to save them from falling down holes and generally orchestrating their progress from whichever point on the screen they started from to the mashing machine. Once all the rats are mashed, Krusty returns to the point at which he entered the level and it's time for the next challenge.

Combing two sorts of gameplay in one game usually ends in mediocrity. But Krusty's Super Fun House almost makes a welcome exception to the rule. The game is basically half Lemmings/half AN Other Platform Game and the two game styles almost merge effortlessly together as Krusty has to scuttle frantically around his world collecting blocks, dropping blocks, and generally guiding his rats to doom. But one problem is that it's often impossible to work out where you are on the screen in relation to your rats. The levels get fairly big fairly quickly and getting around them takes time. Pipes, blocks, walls and floors quickly combine to form mazes and, as a result, it's occasionally damn tricky to get simply from, say, one end of a table to another because a) there's a bloody great wall in the middle of the table, and b) the room is so full of stuff you have to go via Norway to get to the other end.

I guess if you spend enough time playing you'll get to learn the level geography and can map your progress, but the idea of a puzzle game is to work out a solution - not wasting all your time trying to implement that solution due to confusing level design.

But enough of the griping, on the whole Krusty's Super Fun House proves to be a lovely, challenging game which comes recommended to anyone who thought that they might have liked the idea behind Lemmings but found the game to be just a tad too slow for their tastes.

NEIL WEST ■

Well, at least we seem to have lost the "Eat My Shorts" business. The SNES and Mega Drive versions of Krusty didn't exactly push the machines to their limits and so the Amiga handles the conversion quite capably.

This is a hugely entertaining and progressively challenging game which upturns the concept of Lemmings and mutates it into a deceptively devious platform thang with layers of playability and a spot of extremely satisfying graphic violence towards rodents. Seriously stonking.

GREETINGS!
 Many of you may feel that the palm trees are purely decorative, but try jumping on the leaves to gain the extra height needed to reach certain power-ups.

After working with the Simpsons, good old Krusty the clown has finally got a game of his own. The aim of the game is simple, eradicate all the rodents in his house of fun.

This is not as simple as it sounds because this is a puzzle game and they aren't normally that easy. Krusty's Super Fun House does have a progressive learning curve and is quite easy to get into, although some of the later levels can be tricky. This is quite a good variant on the puzzle game theme and takes the boring element out of playing them. This will definitely keep you busy for a while.

ADRIAN PRICE ■

The dynamics of the game are simple in the extreme. Simply waddle around and pick a door - any door. Enter and, er, the game appears.

Krusty and ol' Snakey begin to execute their notorious comedy dance routine. "The stars! In, out, in, out... Yeah!" (Here's your P45. Ed.)

GRAPHICS

Not bad - not bad at all. The Amiga attempts to carry off what the SNES and Mega Drive achieved effortlessly and almost manages.

SOUNDS

Nothing to send you screaming for a balaclava helmet, but nothing really to play on your Walkman either.

PLAYABILITY

There's all sorts of things going on - puzzles, exploration and platform adventuring to keep the interest up.

LASTABILITY

Lots of levels - but the password system means you'll butch your way through fairly quickly then not come back again.

OVERALL

Krusty's Super Fun House attempts to combine Lemmings-style brain abuse with standard run-jump-dodge platform action. It almost works very well indeed and is easily the best Simpsons game for the Amiga.

The controls and plays all take a while to get used to, but that was always the thing about John Madden. With every NFL team in there - plus some of the best ever to play - you won't put this one down in a hurry. If only the gameplay were a little more polished.

JOHN MADDEN 93

I've never had such an extended bout of Electronic Arts bashing as over the last two days, when I've been subjected to the bosh-em-up-and-sell-em-on travesties which were originally NHLPA Hockey and now this, John Madden '93. This is the first appearance Madden's made on the SNES, and pretty good it is too. It should be excellent, but it's not quite there. True, there are more plays and strategies than you initially know what to do with, and the options enable you to fine-tune the game's parameters exactly as you want 'em. All this is exactly as it should be.

What isn't so good is the gameplay - the speed of the on-screen characters is strangely erratic. Call the hut, drop out of the pocket and everything is nicely under control, then catch the ball in a crowd and everything gets faster by at least 10%. It's something you can learn to anticipate after a while, but this stop-go action is a real pain to start with.

The main sprites are perhaps smaller than they should be, but the sonics are top quality. As a Gridiron game there's still nothing that can touch John Madden. The 1994 version should see all the bugs ironed out, so roll on next year. LES ELLIS ■

NHLPA HOCKEY 93

Oh good lord, what's this? I love NHLPA Hockey 93 on the Mega Drive - it's fast, the gameplay's tuned to perfection, and the two-player mode is the last word in frantic action - but what the hell have the programmers done to it on the SNES?

For a system which blabs on about its superior graphics, sound and colours, I don't see much of them in evidence here. What's more, the animation and graphics are so stilted and chunky you're left wondering whether this really is the SNES that you're playing on.

The range of options is all present and correct, however. You can compete in the full league and work your way up (or not) to the top to win the championship. Alternatively you can choose to play one-off games versus the computer or a friend.

To keep the SNES's processor speed up to pace with the Sega system version, the programmers at Electronic Arts had to cut the animation frames down to a minimum. The result is that the fluidity and gameplay suffer.

Still, there's a good feeling of impact as you go belting up the pitch, only to have the puck whipped out from under you.

The klaxon blaring and fanfares all add to the atmosphere. Taken in isolation, it's still a fine game, but as sloppy conversions go, this one's as guilty as they come.

PGA TOUR GOLF 2

Wasn't it George Bernhard-Shaw who once said that golf was a waste of a good walk? Well, he could be right. Thankfully though, someone invented computers. You can now play a full 18 holes on a selection of courses without the hassle and expense.

PGA 2 is the sequel to one of the most popular golf games on a range of formats. It's easy to control, full of options, graphically competent and excellent fun when there's a group of you playing. So what are the changes? There are three new courses; these on top of the original four give you more than enough variety. The Draw-Fade meter is helpful for accurate shots as your play progresses. The new Hole Browser option is useful, although it really only serves a cosmetic role as everything you need to know is shown to you by the fly-past at the start of every hole.

Next, we have the skins feature where you gamble huge stakes of readies on each hole of an 18-hole round. Up to four of you can take part. The winner takes the loot and the guy with the most at the end is the winner, simple really.

There aren't that many decent multi-player games, but this one's got to be near the top of the pile although I'd think twice about getting this if you have the original. The original game was a classic and this update has improved on it - what better compliment could I give it? ADRIAN PRICE ■

Not much changed here. Thankfully not many of the game's actual mechanics have been altered - it's still easy to get into.

Here we have the amazing 'Watch the rotating green' screen - as long as you've got an hour to kill between updates that is.

ROAD RASH

Road Rash takes all the elements which made Super Hang Off such a hit in the arcades and doubles 'em. Instead of a nice, safe race track, this time you're out on the public roads. There are no braking markers, there are blind crests and hairpin corners, cars come the other way and there's debris all over the tarmac. And as if surviving that little lot wasn't enough, there are also fourteen other racers to overtake before you come in first.

Anarchic, violent and anti-social, it's a mix that's just got to work. The scrolling effects off the road are superbly handled - though there could be a greater sensation of high speed - and the bike you're riding behaves just like the real thing. Get the wrong line and you'll fly smack into an oncoming car; get the right line and you'll get serious air off the crests.

The sounds are minimal but efficiently handled, but the main criticism has to be that it all gets too samey too soon. Qualify on all five tracks and you get to race 'em again - except this time they're two miles longer. But the high speed action and the fact that you can belt other racers off their bikes as you storm past makes this one of those games you can never get enough of.

What it really lacks is a two-player option (since cured in the Mega Drive sequel Road Rash 2), but as such the strong gameplay carries it through. Techno-buffs will hate it - it's one of those pick up and play titles - but just because it's easy to get into doesn't mean it's short on the longevity front. You'll be coming back time and again to beat your previous track record.

F-15 STRIKE EAGLE

Taking off is a tricky manoeuvre to learn. It's not easy to press the joypad when you're this excited about playing a game.

It would appear something has been hit. Quite possibly your sense of pride, your wallet and your faith in flight sims.

F-15 Strike Eagle?
The original? Isn't that, er, a tad old? With F-15 3 just about to hit those shelves (as games seem to these days), the first version is just about grazing the NES.

Now the NES has come up with some pretty respectable games in its time, but not many of them have been flight sims. Sadly nor is F-15 (respectable, not a flight sim, that is).

After choosing a suitable fighting ground, you're launched from a carrier and head unnaturally swiftly towards the primary target. Along the way some roughly plane-shaped things attempt to fly in front of you, explode somewhat pathetically when you shoot them, and then come back for some more. Eventually you happen upon a target, primary or otherwise, blow it up and immediately get whisked back to the carrier. The only skill involved is in convincing yourself that you're flying a multi-million dollar fighter. It can't be done.

The NES just wasn't built for flight sims, and the NES incarnation of F-15 is a tattered, bleeding and probably very annoyed travesty of a sham of what it used to be.

Ocean. Film tie-ins. They are not two phrases that trip off the tongue lightly without getting hopelessly tangled together and creating a huge mess. After last year's rather shocking excursion into original licenses with Robocop 3, Ocean are back to their old ways with a platform shoot-em-up.

Choosing to play Daniel Glover or that great Shakespeare Sir Mellerick Gibson, or at least a sprite which looks nominally like them, you're plunged into the usual tedious round of sprinting, shooting, dying and wrestling with the odd shark. There are four missions each covering largish areas, mission four only being accessible after completion of the first three. It's all waterfront scenes, industrial bits and ominous warehouses, so the missions look pretty much the same. The sprites, which tend to be a rather large part of the appeal in a platform game, are quite small and sparsely animated, and flicker like a wild thing at times.

In between stages there's a gratuitous level select screen in the form of your office, which doesn't seem particularly busy for high level crack, secret and highly dangerous team of agents.

The game's not hard so much as pointlessly annoying most of the time. It's all very workman-like, and never even comes as close as a gentle brush to originality or flair. It is, in short, yet another platform game, which you might play for five minutes in Boots and then instantly forget. Sadly, it's to be expected, really. Not one of Ocean's (or Sir Mellerick's) finest hours.

Somehow deluded into believing his cape and mask give him super powers, Bombjack jumps straight to his doom.

BOMBJACK

So Bombjack, the arcade game that was very nearly quite good on many computer formats, finally limps onto the Game Boy almost ten years after its original release. But as with malt whisky and veiny foreign cheese, it definitely gets better with age.

Our antagonist, presumably known as Jack, is trapped in a series of static screens plastered with bombs and platforms. Using his amazing super power which enables him to jump an almost mediocre distance, Jack (or you, rather) collects the bombs, avoids the frightening things and occasionally chances upon the odd power-up, which either gives a bonus or turns the nasties into collectable objects. Get the bombs in the right order (that is, go for the one that's fizzing next) and you end up with a massive bonus.

Yes. Not really up there with Ulysses, is it? It may not sound rivetting but once you start playing you're drawn bodily and quite painfully into a heady world of pure arcade action, or something like that. As with Street Fighter 2, the draw of the game lies in controlling Jack's moves (particularly the jump) well enough to go for the bombs without barging cape-first into a nasty every time. Bombjack's an excellent time-filler which has stood time's test.

This time, however, his renegade antics have got him into hot water. He's in the Chief's office getting a roasting. The Chief's orders are clear - he must try, just once, to do things by the book. He's got to get himself over to the Knight Shade hotel and pick up Harold Snuff, a notorious drug dealer.

Having wrecked three squad cars in a week, Larry's been ordered to carry out his new assignment on foot. Now you might think your local shopping precinct is pretty rough on a Thursday night, but it's nothing compared to Steelburg! Enormous women with bike chains attack Larry as he walks about. Gun-toting homeys blaze away at him, lunatics on motorbikes roar past and knock him down and psychopathic suicide cases set fire to themselves and try to run into him.

Fortunately, Larry knows exactly how to deal with such low life and brings into play his anvil-like fists and trusty .44 whenever needs must.

As Larry works his way through the city, increasingly bizarre thugs will attack him. Fortunately, Larry can collect extra bullets and health points and even a sub machine gun to help him reason with his misguided assailants. It's hardly the most innovative game concept ever, but it's funny enough, and far from easy.

BATTLE CLASH

Let's get this straight. The Super Scope Gun is an astounding piece of kit. It's a brilliant idea, well executed and no SNES owner should be without it. It is not a gimmick. The available games are all original, highly playable classics which complement the unrivalled excitement of aiming at your TV screen and blasting away...

...And then you wake up. No. Sorry. It's a bad idea, a terribly bad idea. It's up there with the C5 and the Poll Tax for sheer unpracticality and unworkability – unless your idea of a fabulous time is to stand by the TV screen squinting into a tiny plastic tube, shooting various robotic challengers. If you do fancy it, be sure to have a gallon of Optrex handy, as the eye-strain can be severe.

The basic premise of Battle Clash appears to involve an assortment of increasingly lethal and smug aliens who fancy tackling you in a futuristic gunfight. The duels take place in various exotic locations which act only as a picturesque backdrop to the repetitive tedium of the gameplay – a problem the programmers have half-heartedly tried to alleviate via the inclusion of some hilariously sad and badly translated "dialogue", the aim of which is to try and convince you there's some sort of plot at work here.

It's way too easy – so long as you take 15 minute breaks between each round to compensate for your hurty eyes as a result of that stupid lump of plastic. Only slightly preferable to eating a razor blade and crushed glass sandwich.

SUPER PANG

Yeah okay guys, I get to review the game where all you have to do is shoot the bouncing balls. Very interesting, I'm sure. But wait, Super Pang may be simple in concept but in execution it's great. It's not exactly a fast-moving, sci-fi shoot-em-up – but for fun and unbelievably addictive action you could do a lot worse than this.

Pang is a very deceptive game. It just goes to show that looks aren't everything. But if you are one of those people who think that they are, you will be pleasantly surprised. The backdrops in Super Pang are breathtaking. Each scene is depicted in a bright and colourful way, so much so that they are a real pleasure to look at. But as always, the real hook of this is in the gameplay. Yes, I agree shooting balls may sound a little easier than taking on a multi-stage end-of-level guardian, but don't be put off. The first couple of goes is all it will take to get you totally and utterly addicted to this game. It is so enhanced in comparison to other versions that it will be have a much longer gameplay life.

I was amazed at just how long I was able to play the game without getting bored. The first couple of skill levels are easy enough but as you progress it turns into quite a challenging little blast. The levels can be varied and most of them hold a few surprises for you. If you are looking for something a little different – give it a try, you'll find it creeps up on you and gets you hooked before you know it. Take it from me you will still be playing Pang long after those other boring space shoot-em-ups are gathering dust on the shelf.

PREDATOR 2

As you can see the Slaughter House lives up to its name, save the FBI and waste the crims.

The Predator, silent, deadly, unseen – unless you play this game, that is. He's noisy not so deadly and very visible, things don't look good.

I'm a big fan of all the great sci-fi movies but I was very disappointed when I saw this adaptation of the film. For starters, the game is too easy. I finished it within an hour, and I really had no desire to play it again. This is the game's major flaw, for an easy game it's a crap one. I'm sorry to appear so negative but this really is awful and should not have been released without some proper care and attention.

You can pick up extra weapons throughout the game and even add some of the predators' weapons to your arsenal, but this still doesn't make up for the dire gameplay.

On the graphical side of things, while they serve their purpose, they are a bit on the small side. As for the sounds, they're annoying – the music is the same all the way through the game and, again, is not very good.

The gameplay in general is very disappointing. Although it tries to stick closely to the film's plot, it doesn't quite manage to give you the impression that you're actually there. In between levels there are digitised pictures taken from the film, but these don't help much. Even token appearances from the Predator's head, as he watches you from above, will fail to inspire you.

Make sure you give this game as wide a berth as possible. ADRIAN PRICE ■

Take this one for example: Hulk Hogan, he bogged off to Japan after a steroids scandal, The Ultimate Warrior has been sacked, Legion of Doom aren't going any more and The Nasty Boys have now changed to good guys. Anyway that's a minor gripe. Last year the original WWF game was the Christmas number one, and here we are a year

DRACULA

"I," says the little beardy man in the cosy armchair by the fire, "am Bram Stoker." At which point it's rather tempting to get all cynical and arched-eyebrowed about this adventure. It's true that converting a 19th century horror classic to the 2" square Lynx screen is a trifle ambitious. And no-one was more surprised than me to discover that this is a fascinating and atmospheric game, loaded with innovative touches and splendid sepia toned visuals.

Presented in classic adventure style, with a graphic window dominating the upper portion of the screen and a natty, if initially confusing, command window beneath. The game is so absorbing that you immediately forget you're playing on a supposedly limited handheld machine.

Play begins with your character, Jonathan Harker in a guest room in Castle Dracula. There's the usual poking around, examining objects and fruitless endeavours to use everything with everything else. But more importantly, the level of interest and mystery generated by the visuals and clues, (combined with some pretty excellent source material of course) is simply incredible for a handheld game.

If you're fed up with blasts and arcade games, you would be well advised to get yourself a copy of Dracula. I reckon you'll be well impressed.

Certainly for a sad old BBC adventuring git like me, it makes a refreshing change. JIM DOUGLAS ■

"I am Bram Stoker, and by the magic of technology etc, etc." Not a good start for what turns out to be a rollicking romp.

COOL WORLD

Hmm, another film licence from Ocean, how do they do it? Not too well judging by the slightly dubious quality of some of their licences, although lately they've been pulling some goodies out of the bag. Cool World is set to continue the trend.

If looks could kill then this game would be a mass murderer. The graphics and animation are so slick that they even put the consoles to shame. And if you include the dancing Kim Basinger from the intro sequence, they are even better. The real world and the Cool World are all well depicted.

Cool World is a very strange game to play at first. You appear to spend a lot of time running around shooting doodles without a lot else happening. However once you do get the gist of what you're supposed to be doing the game actually becomes a lot of fun. With the game being so fast and smooth you may find your head feeling like it's going to explode after you have stared at the TV for a couple of hours, so play sparingly.

Cool World is not the first film you would chance upon when you try to think of potential film licences - after all there is not all that much in the film which lends itself to a game. But Ocean have managed to come up with some novel ideas to make Cool World one of the better licences for the Amiga.

The gameplay leaves a little to be desired at times. Even though there is a lot going on, it doesn't always make a lot of sense. On the whole Cool World is good, but not brilliant, so think carefully before you splash out your hard-earned money for it.

OVERALL

Cool World has the appearance of a console game on the Amiga. It does get a little confusing at times but it is worth persevering until you get used to it. I fully expect this to be a smash hit over the coming months.

FOR £19.95 FIX YOUR

Well, alright. That's not strictly true. Okay, it's not even remotely true. But what we will do for £19.95 is fix it for you to have a whole year's worth of GamesMaster mags delivered straight to your door.

Every month we'll be bringing a similarly excellent package or reviews, previews, tips and news covering the entire video games scene. If there's anything worth knowing about, we'll be the first to tell you. Isn't it about time you got it regularly? (Or something.)

But hang on. Isn't the act of subscribing the sort of boring gittish thing that the kid with Sellotape on his glasses would do? The sort of thing that no self-respecting, Satan-tauntin', game-crushin' rider of the cyber software apocalypse would even consider? Well, possibly, but since you're neither of those, that doesn't really matter. What matters is this:

ETEP

5 - WE'LL LIFE!

1 Your copy of the mag will be sent straight round to your house, so you need never brave the desolate post-sale wasteland that is your high street again.

2 With good will and a prevailing wind, you may even get your copy of GamesMaster just a little bit earlier than the official in-the-shops date. This, obviously, is a great thing, as you'll be in possession of all the hottest games news first.

3 You pay less for the magazine than everyone else. In effect, you get one issue a year free.

4 Your copy is, of course, guaranteed. So there's no chance of you missing out.

To sum up, subscribers to GamesMaster magazine get the best mag in the universe, delivered to their homes, as early as is humanly possible and for less money. Not a bad deal, eh?

Guaranteed early receipt of a whole year's worth of GamesMaster magazines for the measly sum of £19.95?

YES PLEASE! .....

No thanks, I'd rather run the risk of missing out on GamesMaster and paying more for each copy when I do get it. I am also, for the record, an utter git. ....

GLOBAL W

Do you ever wonder what it would be like if the aliens and bad guys in games were more intelligent? What if they were as clever as real people, and could make rational decisions?

"Don't be stupid", you're probably saying, "they can't do stuff like that yet". Well, no maybe not, but you can play games remotely against other people using an ordinary telephone socket and a modem.

Leading the modem field is a company called On-Line. They have produced a game called Air Warrior, which is an interactive multi-player flight simulator. To play, you simply connect a modem to your ST, Amiga, PC, Macintosh or whatever, plug into a standard BT phone socket and load the Air Warrior program from either hard drive or floppy.

Then you click on a couple of menus, your modem 'talks' to the main system at On-Line and it's chocks away (keeping confectionery near the modem causes interference, apparently). Once you're in the air, any other planes you see will be controlled by other humans. This is more exciting than it would seem. The thing is, you can talk to them... so, by a spot of quick typing, you can introduce yourself, issue a challenge or threaten them with localised pain.

The best Air Warrior pilots call themselves 'The Few' after Churchill's plucky speech expressing thanks to Fighter Command for giving the Luftwaffe a good shoeing, despite being heavily out-numbered.

The system is available in every country in Europe, and the beauty of it is that the cost is usually that of a local call. For example, if you buy the Air Warrior boxed set, you pay only £1.49 an hour for the first 17 hours of playing. This apparently is the cost of a local call.

The thing about Air Warrior is that it's such immense fun. As you play, you're aware that the other aircraft are being flown by real folk, most of whom are actually pretty good. So when you finally do get to shoot one down, you will be ecstatic.

TALKING TECHNICAL

Air Warrior is available on several machines: the Atari STFM, STE and Mega ST, the Commodore Amiga (all machines, including the A500, the A500 Plus, the A600 and A600 Hard Drive, the A1200, A3000 and A4000), the Apple Macintosh (both colour and mono screen, from Classic upwards, the IBM compatible PC (CGA, VGA, EGA) and SVGA PC with 4 Meg of RAM, CD-ROM and CDTV.

But what you'll also need is a standard BT-approved socket (you know the sort of thing), and of course a modem. This has to be of the following speed: 1200/1200 modem (or, of course, faster).

In fact, On-Line recently arranged a cross-Atlantic 'Battle of Britain' involving seven of the best British pilots flying against 32 American guys.

The Americans, flying German Ju-88s and Messerschmitt Bf109s, threatened to slaughter the plucky Brits in their Spitfires. But, as in all the best fairy-Cranking the plane over, our man watches the baddie into his sights.

Rivers, lakes and, even something that looks like the sea all appear in Air Warrior. This is certainly an expanse of water, at least.

You can even attack real folk in targets on the ground. They tend to shoot back with devastating accuracy, though.

THERE ARE NO 'SIDES' IN AIR WARRIOR. WHICHEVER PLANE YOU CHOOSE, YOU CAN TEAM UP WITH OR SHOOT DOWN ANY OTHER PLAYER AT WILL.

WARRING!

A RECORD IS KEPT OF YOUR PERFORMANCES ON THE NETWORK, SO IF YOU'RE A BUDDING ACE, EVERYBODY WILL KNOW!

Anatomy of a kill. The bad guy (in real life an accountant from Chester) slides into the gunsight, just in time to get hit in the wings and crash.

tales, we kicked their asses solidly, and turned the Yankee rabble back at our gallant English airfields. This proves several things. First, how excellent we British are, and second how much fun Air Warrior is.

But, you're thinking, what has all this got to do with me? Well, if you want to get into modeming, you'll need a decent computer. So we decided that a prize of a 486SX, SVGA monitor, modem, hard drive and copy of Air Warrior (the impressive SVGA version, of course) would be rather pleasant. Just turn the page for details on how to enter the competition.

There are absolutely loads of views (as long as you're not scared of heights). This is one, sort of looking out of the side.

You can fly planes like the Heinkel He 111 or Marauder, which have two pilots. You play the Captain, and can look at the other guy if you want.

Presumably for what are reasons of realism, you can look at intimate parts of the non-player folk in your plane...

...or even intimate parts of yourself, if the desire so takes you. This is what you'll see prior to evacuating your stomach contents.

And there are even historically accurate views of the, erm, steering wheel, rev counter, speedo and digital clocks on board.

Finally, as the sun sets and you nurse your battered plane back over the sea to home, you reflect on the real people you've annoyed by winning.

HINT FOR THAT TRICKY QUESTION 3: THE 'TEAM' IS MADE OF JIM (NOT AS OLD AS HIS TITLE SUGGESTS), JAMES, ANDY, LES, ADRIAN (EVERY YOUNG), ALISON, DEBS (OUR NEW PRODUCTION ASSISTANT WHO ISN'T SO NEW), WAYNE (WHO'S BLOODY OLD), LAM AND SIMON.

WIN EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO START GLOBAL WARRING!

Here's a PC. Just think - you could soon have one of these in your own home. Well, not necessarily this particular model. And you don't get a free copy of Lemmings, either. Still, just look at those graphics, eh? This competition could well make your life complete. Simply fill in the form below. Go on. You know you want to...

1) What is a modem? Is it...

- a) a device for sad old gits to pretend they have friends by 'talking' to bulletin boards.
- b) a woman buying expensive clothes in a boutique.
- c) a great piece of kit which lets you play games against human opponents all over the country, or world, even.

2) What on earth is a baud rate? Is it...

- a) an illegal one-off payment to prevent men smashing in your car windows at night.
- b) a rate at which information is passed along the phone lines between modems.
- c) an Italian sausage made from wild mink and badger phlegm, and coated in iron filings and nicotine. Serves two to three.

3) Using your skill, judgement and by phoning up their old schoolfriends, simply determine the aggregate age in years of the ten people who claim to 'work' on GamesMaster. Is the answer...

- b) 238
- c) 242

Pretty easy, eh? Well, alright, except the last one. Simply write your answers on a postcard or sealed down envelope and send them to Dead Smart PC and Modem Compo, GamesMaster, Future Publishing, 29 Monmouth St, BA1 2DL.

Your missive must reach us by the 28 February, otherwise it's Bin City, Arizona. Employees of Future Publishing, their friends and enemies, their bestest mates in all the world, their hamsters, their second cousins on their Great Uncle Ebenezer's side and anyone with tenuous professional connections to any of the companies involved who attempt to enter will have their physical inadequacies publicly mocked. Oh, and multiple entries, or cards carrying stupid drawings of Sonic will be flung into the River Avon.

One more thing. You can try, try and try again to warp these guidelines into a more personally acceptable shape. But it's no use, you see. The editor's decision is final. Jim Douglas is a hard man, but fair with it. He will not, however, be swayed on such matters..

Air Warrior - the game that you could win the right to play, via modem. This means that you can dial your mates and then, instead of wibbling on about the weather, you can blast them out of the skies in a hectic dogfight. Cor.

FANCY WINNING A PC, THEN?

To win all the kit you need to wage global war, you'll need to sort out the answers to the following questions. In line with the compo, we've desperately tried to make the questions as modem-oriented as possible. We did slip up on the final question however, because Reviews Ed James couldn't think of a suitable poser.

Still, it's a stupendous prize, there are only three questions and they're all dead easy to those of you who are "into" modems and things. Oh, apart from the last one, which is pretty tough. Very tiebreaker. But then we've said all that, haven't we? Hmm. Well. Oh, just get on with it, for Chrissakes!

On this form (which you have so thoughtfully provided) you will find my answers to the absurd questions you posed on page 98 of your monstrous games bible! I have filled it in using my very best pen and remembered not to be an utter imbecile and forget to include my name.

JOHN MADDEN

Welcome to the toughest sport of them all - American Football. In this guide to one of the Mega Drive's best games, we'll show you how to smash your way through any opposition and into the Super Bowl. It's then up to you to win.

PLAY OPTIONS

1 When you are about to choose which play you wish to execute, study the plays. Three examples of various plays are shown - two offensive and one defensive. You can only access the offensive plays when you are running towards the goal-line. Defensive plays are left until you're in trouble and the opposition is attacking.

2 OFFENSIVE
The main aim of an offensive play is to get the ball as far forward as possible with the intent of scoring a touchdown. There are two kinds of offensive play: pass and throw. With a throw you simply call up the throwing windows and you are given the positions of three Running Backs A, B or C. As you can see from the three windows, no. 32 is in the clear and is the best choice, 81 and 83 are having a bit of a hard time and should be avoided.

3 With a pass, the plan is to give the ball to one of the Running Backs and he will then try and run through or around the defense. In the bottom window, the play HB Off Tackle is shown. The white line running up through the middle of the window is your Running Back. Some running plays also allow your Running Back to throw the ball like a QB. Obviously they won't be as good but it's a last ditch attempt.

4 DEFENSIVE
With the defense you must stop the opposition's offence from scoring. The best way to do this is to 'sack' the Quarterback while he still has the ball. If you send men in through the middle or round the side it doesn't matter - just as long as the Quarterback doesn't pass or throw the ball to a Running Back.

If you're new to the game and you're determined to win, let the Mega Drive carry out all the plays. As soon as you touch a button or move the D-pad, you'll stop the play and take over, which could be disastrous if you don't know what you're doing.

The best way to gain some serious yardage is to select a team with a strong Quarterback and good Receivers (Denver is a good team for this task), and then try lots of passing plays. When the Receiver gets the ball, take over and use the joypad to direct him towards the line. Don't try and run round too many people because you'll lose your momentum (and get hammered to the ground in the process). Hitting button C gives your player extra oomph, so keep your thumb on it.

Number 21, Legs Mcfadden of Washington, stays true to his name and legs it up the field. Legs is a good example of a Running Back.

Don't be tempted to use the Quarterback sneak move. You're bound to end up shattering his collarbone, and have to watch him being carted off the pitch in agony. Worse, you have to use your rather poor second Quarterback. Avoid this at all costs.

DEFENSIVE PLAYS

Goal line, Attack Center.

When the opposition snaps the ball, let the Mega Drive play your team. They should all rush forwards. Watch where the ball is going and as soon as you see your chance, press B. This will activate your nearest player and you can take over and try to get to the ball.

This particular play has been quite successful, the oppo's QB has been sacked, losing 3 yards. Meanwhile, Legs limbers up for a final push.

MADDEN 93

KICKS

The maximum distance you can kick the ball is about 40 yards, so never take a field goal further than about 25-30 yards. This is because the ball will get thrown back about 10 feet and will be at its maximum range.

Field Goals: The same rule as above. About 40 yards is the limit.

Conversions (Extra Point): Just put the power bar on half and kick, it should go straight in.

Kick-Off: As close to full power as you can get. Aim to kick the ball to one side of the field. This will narrow the avenue of escape and give the opposition less space to run to. They can only run out of bounds, or straight into the cuddly arms of your 400 stone man-mountain Defensive linemen.

TWO GOOD DEFENSIVE PLAYS

1 3-4, Cover, Attack, Center. This is a good play to start off with. It keeps all the linemen at the front busy, and lets you sneak one of your men round the side to sack the Quarterback.

2 Dime, Read, Double Blitz. This opens up a hole to let your players charge through, but it has to be done quickly or the Quarterback will get rid of the ball to a wide receiver – keep your eyes peeled.

THREE GOOD PASSING PLAYS

1 Shotgun, Flood Right, To B. Snap the ball and then a few seconds later throw the ball to receiver B. Keep your man running up the field to catch the ball, tricky at first but when it works it can get you a lot of yards.

2 Run and Shoot, Up Hook to A. Use the windows that pop up and when you see that player A is in the clear, chuck him the ball and watch him sail through the air. A touchdown is easily possible from this play.

3 Run and Shoot, Post Up to A, B, C. This is a good way of catching out the opposition, because you have the choice of using all three receivers. This leaves your opponents guessing as to who you will use.

THREE GOOD RUNNING PLAYS

1 Far, HB Option. With this play, the idea is to fool everyone into thinking that the ball is going right, when in fact it's going all the way up the left-hand side. Do it well and you might be able to grab a touchdown.

2 Pro Form, HB Toss Pass. This has two uses. First, it acts as a dummy and lets your Running Back leg it off with the ball. Second, the Running Back can still throw the ball or run straight as he runs up through the middle.

3 Goal-Line, QB Sneak. This is best saved for when you are near the Goal-line or in need of an extra few yards for a 1st down. Snap the ball and follow the line men in front of you, when you see your target dive onto it. But be careful – he could get his face smashed in.

PREPARING FOR BATTLE

The first and most crucial thing to remember when this pre-match screen appears is... whatever you do, don't keep pressing the fire button in anticipation.

Otherwise the game remembers your moves and punishes you by dropping a bomb as soon as you appear on screen... resulting in an untimely decapitation.

If you do manage to get started without blowing yourself up, start laying down bombs and grabbing power-ups as swiftly as you can.

Dig a hole for yourself in your particular corner and don't attempt to bomb through to the other players until you have sufficiently lethal power-ups.

DYNA BLASTER

Ubisoft's excellent bomb-em-up is one of the most popular Amiga lose-your-mates games ever.

Last seen on GamesMaster, showcasing the hysterically inept talents of those pop superstars, Take That, Dyna Blaster is a deceptively simple affair with bags of hidden and extremely nasty little strategies. Avoid blowing yourself up and turn yourself into a demon bomber with the help of our ultimate player's guide.

SPECIFIC TACTICS

"Alleys" are particularly handy for trapping the other players. Wait until a power-up appears and, if you don't fancy getting trapped yourself, hang around until another player ventures in to swipe the booty...

Then, laugh wickedly as you lay a bomb which directly blocks their exit. Now simply move away from the blast-line and watch your opponents fry.

To get the maximum effect when collecting the power-ups, don't just go around dropping bombs randomly. Lay your bombs at the most strategic junctions - particularly in areas which will blow away the most blocks and increase the likelihood of a power-up appearing.

A Dyna Blaster maestro must master the art of power-up thievery. Sometimes another player will lay a bomb in a useful place - see picture. He'll need to run away and hide, while you hang around at the other side of the block. When the bomb goes off, nip in and nab the power-up.

A particularly evil one, this. If you're playing a four-player game and throw in a dummy fifth player in the centre of the screen, the monsters will not appear - making things considerably easier. Now, walk past the dummy player and lay a sneaky bomb underneath him...

Now, run away and hide...

Then, with a bit of luck, the other players won't have noticed the bomb and one of them, in this case the blue player, will be satisfyingly fried.

THE SKULLS

In a multi-player game in skull mode, it's worth knowing your options should you decide or be forced to collect one of these random power-downs. The range of the explosions will be tiny, the speed of your bomber may increase or decrease or you will either instantly drop bombs or be unable to drop them for a certain period.

Go on then, go for it...

Ah - it's the one which quadruples your player's speed - making it extremely difficult to position him correctly.

So - make it extremely difficult for the other players by whizzing towards them and touching them - thus infecting him with the same hindrance. Snigger...

LASTESTER

In the final stages of a round, when all the players are wandering about laying bombs everywhere, simply wait until a particular player is moving into a four-by-four section in this way.

At the precise moment, move across and lay a bomb which blocks off the intersection...

...and watch him wiggle around in trapped desperation until the inevitable happens.

If, during the later stages, there are still quite a few players remaining, watch out for the chain reaction - when explosions collide with dormant bombs and create an extremely unpredictable devastation effect...

...which has an annoying habit of toasting everyone on screen and bringing about a drawn game.

MONSTER BLASTER

If you're a sad old git and you enjoy playing the game by yourself, then you're going to have to battle against some slimy creatures, as opposed to other well-armed human beings. Some - like the blue blobby git - are mere annoyances, but watch their randomness. The orange fireball sort-of-thing is a tiny bit more intelligent, but he can only travel around empty channels - just block him with a bomb and he'll soon be toast.

The turquoise, bug-eyed creature and the yellow and red Pacman monster are a touch more worrying. They're faster and seem to display hints of intelligence. The purple guys with big ears are slow but they're far from dumb - treat them like other human players. Oh, and there's an orange teddy-bear face who's very fast and very intelligent. As he homes in, block him with a bomb at the last second.

Fun 15: Along the quaint terrain we stroll. Ahhhh!

Sunsoft 30: This level was beyond Adrian. No shock.

Tricky level 27: On this level you must guide all the Lemmings to the exit and save them from perishing. Sounds a bit like all the other levels really.

Easy-peasy. Level 10 shouldn't cause you any problems. No problems if you're a Mensa member.

Level 24 and things are warming up. But there's still a long way to go, especially as there's 100 levels.

This is the penultimate level. Yep, level 99 looks sort of easy doesn't it? Well, in fact it's a real pain in the bum and will cause you all sorts of difficulties. Never mind there's always Lemmings, ha ha.

CURSE ENCHANTIA

GREETINGS!

Welcome to my extensive, if not entirely complete Curse of Enchantia guide. If you're sitting comfortably...

1 Call for help and a guard will come in, have a fit and run out leaving the key on the floor. Pick up the key and use it on the chains to release yourself.

2 Walk to the pillar on the right and examine it. Push the wall to reveal a cubby space. Inside is a paper clip. Pick this up and use it on the main door to pick the lock.

3 Freedom at last! But not for long. Get the goldfish bowl and run like hell to the left. Avoid the hammer-wielding statues and the guards that chase you.

4 Open the door on the left and step through. Agghhh, don't worry you won't die when you fall off the edge.

5 The first thing to do is wear the goldfish bowl. Yeah, so it sounds a bit silly, but at least you'll live.

6 Take a look at the fish on the right. Go over to him and set him free. Then go to the bottom right and get the gold coin from behind the rock.

7 Walk right and look at the patch of sand that stands out. Get the worm.

8 Give the worm to Mr Fish, he will give you some more air before he closes the shop for the day. Continue to walk right.

9 As you near the eels a fish will drop something. Collect it and give to the turtle when he gets close. He will then carry you over to the other side of the eels.

10 Look carefully at the weed and you will see something hidden there. Collect the cattle prod from the weed and walk left.

11 When the shark is about half a screen away attack him with the cattle prod. While he's in shock walk a bit further. Do this about four times.

12 Walk down to the giant clam and when it is shut, jump over it. You've now managed to complete the hardest part of the lakebed.

13 All that is left to do is walk up to the plug and insert the cattle prod in it. It will lift up and suck you into the next part of the game.

14 Go from the pool to the bottom right, until your man disappears. Collect seaweed, and push the pointed bit of the centre rock to open a secret door.

15 Pick up all the various sized rocks and take them to the Rock Basher Room. Keep giving the rocks to the man until he gives you some string.

16 Take monitor and plank to the Seesaw Room. Put the plank on the rock and the monitor on the plank. Collect the magnet, then jump down.

SE OF ANTIA

In next month's installment, we'll introduce you to characters you've never met before, show you places you've never visited and explain things that have baffled you for a long time. Cos we're great, we are.

17 Go back to the Monitor Room, tie the magnet to the string and throw it down the hole. When it comes back to you, there will be a wire attached to it.

18 Stand outside the Rock Basher Room, avoiding the Mud Monster. Fix the wire onto the loops where the monster ends his run. Collect mud on the loops.

19 Go to the room with the holes in the walls and keep looking in the hole on the right until the twigs appear.

20 Throw a gold coin into the wishing well. A man appears and offers you 3 choices. Take the hard helmet or you won't be able to get out of the caves.

21 Go to where the rocks are falling from the ceiling and wear the hard helmet to avoid getting hurt.

22 Go to the room with the bucket in. Tie seaweed to the mud, add twigs and wear the mask that it gives you. Climb into the bucket to be hoisted up.

23 The monster thinks you look beautiful with the mask on and pulls you out. When the mask falls off he'll dive down the shaft to escape your ugliness.

24 After he dives out of the way, walk to the top of the screen and start heading towards the town in the distance.

25 As you walk along, you are charged by a mugger who falls over his feet and drops his sword. Pick it up then kill him. Collect the money he leaves.

26 Carry on walking towards Dragon's Pass. Go to Frank's shop and buy some food. Eat it straightaway.

27 Try and go in the Red Dragon pub but you will probably get thrown out.

28 Go towards the fountain and then straight on. Enter the Shop of Wonders, give the Mage some money, to transport you to the Edge of the World.

29 Falling off these ledges is harder than it looks. Keep walking right under the small rockfall until you see an alcove.

30 Go into the alcove and pick up the red rubber gloves on the floor. I know they're a strange thing to find but they'll come in useful.

31 Walk up to the large rock and push it so that it falls into the gap. Then jump it to reach the other side of the ledge.

THE SOLUTION: PART TWO

Last month in GamesMaster, we gave you the complete solution to levels one and two of this very difficult game. This month we give you the final part of the solution, levels three and four. The solution below tells you what to do, but actually completing the game is a totally different matter. You must make sure that you take things very slowly and steadily, then you should be alright. This is the final instalment in our Shadow of the Beast Guide, and we will have for your delight next month, another top new release, with a full players guide on how to complete the game. So, fret not, help is at hand.

ment in our Shadow of the Beast Guide, and we will have for your delight next month, another top new release, with a full players guide on how to complete the game. So, fret not, help is at hand.

LEVEL THREE: THE CAVES OF BIDHUR

1 Run right past the two creatures on the bridge, jump up and kill them, then carry on running.

2 Jump up onto the first branch and face left. Now jump up the branches and shoot the nest and four birds at the top.

4 Jump up, shoot the head on the wall so it drops on the plank. Push left until the head is under the cage; go up the ladder and walk off the edge.

5 This will catapult the head into the cage and smash it. The bird will now be free, so get on it and fly around.

6 Fly up and right until you see some metal balls. Adjust the runners, so that the first set of balls will go into the top cave.

7 Release the first three balls. Next adjust the runners so the balls go into the next cave down. Now release the rest of the balls.

9 Select hammer. Push one ball to the side and hit the slab over the first ball. Put another at the front as the first gets to the middle.

10 Keep doing this until you get the slab all the way across the pit. Make sure you keep two of the balls in the middle.

11 Push the slab back and jump on it to the higher platform. Select the star. Shoot the monster in the eye. Collect the empty flask.

LEVEL FOUR: NOSTHOMAL

1 Run to the right and shoot the flamethrower, while avoiding the flames that shoot out at you. Run to the right after you shoot it.

2 Continue right past the large steel ball. Go down the stairs and climb down the ladder and go to the table.

4 Push the bookcase left, up to the library sign. Climb the ladder and jump onto the bookcase. Jump to collect the hammer.

5 Climb the ladder and go upstairs to the ball. Shoot twice with the throwing stars. Select hammer and shoot until the ball's in full swing.

6 Swing on ball to highest ledge. Select the throwing stars and shoot ball at its highest point so it rolls down the stairs.

8 Pick up fish at bottom of the top-left tank, feed to top fish in tank 3. Then, feed it to top fish in tank 1. Then give to fish in tank 3.

9 Take the fish from tank 3, feed it to the small shark in tank 2, who won't harm you. Move to the exit box and press fire.

10 Climb up the ladder and run through the tanks while avoiding the spikes.

12 Jump onto the ledge and shoot the switch to turn on the furnace. Stand next to the furnace, select the hammers and keep shooting the furnace until it won't move any further. Spikes on a chain, hang from the ceiling. Select throwing stars, jump up and shoot the spikes twice, then switch back to the hammers. Keep jumping and shooting the spikes with the hammers until they are at full swing, then quickly change back to the throwing stars and shoot the spikes at the highest point of their swing (to the left). The spikes will then detach from the chain and plug the shallow pit on the floor.

13 Go left and climb ladder, jump over the large ball. Push it right so it falls in the furnace. Go right and onto the platform next to the furnace switch. Wait for the ice to melt, and once the top is just below your platform, jump onto it and to the ledge on the right. Hit the switch to turn off the force field below. Wait a few seconds for the molten metal on the floor to cool, then drop from the platform. Collect the crystal and walk right until you are underneath the other crystal embedded in the next ice block. Keep shooting the ice with your stars until it shatters. You'll then catch the second crystal.

ANOTHER WORLD

If guiding slightly deranged scientists from hostile, parallel dimensions and back to their existence within reality isn't exactly your mug of Choc-a-mint, then you're probably well and truly stuck on one of the more devious levels of Interplay's fantastically weird Orwellian, Kafkaesque, sci-fi, allegorical whodunnit. Er, I think. In that case, here's an astonishingly helpful guide to the first half of Lester's exploits and, as if that wasn't bloody brilliant enough, we've also thrown in all the codes. But don't worry if you can't get anywhere on the later stages - simply buy issue three of GamesMaster. Take it from me, it will soothe your worries, ease your mind and tell you how to do the final levels. But for now, onwards...

LEVEL TWO - CODE HTDC

Having been imprisoned in a cage with another sullen-looking geezer, you make friends with him and plot an escape...

1 By moving left and right on the joypad, swing from side to side. Time it correctly and the cage will eventually fall and crush the guard below.

2 Before you go anywhere, walk to the right slightly, crouch down and pick up the gun.

3 Now run to the right immediately, go through to the next screen and fire off a few shots as soon as you enter. This should pick off the guard quite neatly.

4 Run right. Your chum will head to the electronic lock and start to fiddle with it. You must move over to the centre of the screen, turn around and keep putting up shields to protect as you shoot the attacking guards.

5 As he breaks through the door, follow him and head for the lift. Pull down on the joypad and go to the very bottom of the shaft.

6 Enter the room carefully and shoot the guard on the left straightaway. Then shoot the power line on the wall.

7 Now go back to the lift shaft. Go right to the top and check out the view. Lovely, isn't it?

8 Go back down the shaft to the second opening from the bottom. Enter and, using a power bolt, blast through the barrier.

9 Use the transporter thingy to get down to the lower section of the room.

R W W O R L D

LEVEL THREE - CODE CLLD

Completing this level of underground tunnels is simply a matter of rolling in the right direction and pausing occasionally to avoid the steam pipes.

1 Roll to the extreme left and drop down.

2 Roll to the right. Drop down.

3 Roll to the right. Drop down.

4 Roll left. Drop down and roll to the extreme right and onto the next stage.

LEVEL FOUR - CODE LBKG

A fairly short section which sees Lester penetrating the depths of the enemy's subterranean stronghold. I think.

1 Recharge your gun and blast through the triple doors using three power-blasts. Recharge your gun again and move into the room to the right.

2 Enter carefully, gun in hand... Waste the guard and head to the right.

3 Slowly ease your way to the very end of the ledge. Don't worry - you don't have to actually jump over the gap. Simply jump, the screen will scroll downwards and you will land on another ledge a little further down the chasm.

4 Use a power-blast to break through the wall to the right and go through...

LEVEL FIVE - CODE FXLC

2 Stand by this pit with jaws-which will open and close, giving you a fair idea that you need to...

3 ...jump very carefully over.

4 Jump this gap as soon as you land from the previous leap.

5 These two jumps are more accurate. Jump once over the first pit and don't touch anything on the joypad. Stand perfectly still inbetween both jaws.

6 Then, carefully jump again.

7 Execute two extremely dainty and careful jumps over the jaws...

8 Jump over the first jaws and stay there. Turn around and edge to the right slightly.

11 Wait for the bird to become ensnared in the tentacles.

12 Now jump onto the stalactite, climb to the very top and jump to the left - onto the next stalactite. As you get to the extreme left, jump off into the next screen.

13 Blast the rock and walk up the incline. Head right, jumping all the gaps, until you come to a large pool of water being precariously held up by a bit of rock.

14 Use a power-blast to cut through the rock and get ready to run away very, very quickly indeed.

16 Now head up and right.

17 Blast away the door.

18 Head up the staircase and then out of the stage.

THE FABULOUS WORLD OF THAT LESTER CHAP

And so, with heavy hearts and damp trousers, we come to the end of the first instalment of our Another World solution. Coming next month...

How do you shoot the geezer with the gun? How do you get down the ruddy stairs?

Swimming with Lester. The backstroke. The butterfly. The sadly rather obvious caption.

So, tune in next time and find out how to shake this guy off and kick his head in.

DEAR GAMESMASTER

For the past 18 months I have tried to make sense of Shadow of the Beast 2 on the Amiga, but to no avail. I am especially stuck at the section where you have to get the rock onto the see-saw. I have released the beast. Have you got the answer?

Colin Knox Johnstone

DEAR GAMESMASTER

On WWF Wrestling on the Amiga, I can't beat Sgt Slaughter in the final match. I've tried typing in "Hulk Hogan Wears Tight Yellow Knickers". I've done everything possible and still can't beat him. Please help me.

Ben McElvoy
Address unknown

All you have to do to beat Sgt Slaughter is continuously pin him to the floor. The first couple of times he'll get back on his feet but if you do it often enough he'll eventually lose.

Shadow of the Beast 2 - a tricky little number if ever there was one.

If you run right you will meet a sort of goblin. Start talking to him and type in TEN PINTS. This will give you infinite lives, so you should be able to overcome your little problem.

MEGA DRIVE

DEAR GAMESMASTER

Please could you tell me how to kill the witch at the end of Castle of Illusion on the Mega Drive. I've had the game for over a year and still can't get past her. Please can you help.

Sue Jarman
Essex

When the witch is just about to materialise you must jump onto one of the platforms which are near to her head.

Then dodge her bolts of lightning and jump onto her head. Repeat this step until she explodes. You will then have completed the game.

CASTLE OF ILLUSION (MD)

DEAR GAMESMASTER

In Sonic 2 I've heard that there is a way to get all the chaos emeralds very early on, could you tell me how to do this?

Gareth Smith Newquay

It is possible to get all of the chaos emeralds over the first two levels. There are in fact eight lampposts and if you can collect 50 rings every time you can enter them all. If you manage to get all the emeralds then you will be able to carry on the game as Super Sonic. Collect 50 or more rings and you will turn into the most excellent of hedgehogs.

Another little cheat goes like this... once you've got a chaos emerald, press the reset button. Now go to the option screen and press start. The game will remember that you had a chaos emerald and you can repeat this until you have all seven (all the emeralds will have come from level one).

Here we see Sonic finishing his second Gem run...

And thanks to the marvel of Sonic, here are two Gems.

Swing along with Mickey and read the cry for help. Nothing's too big or small for the GamesMaster.

DEAR GAMESMASTER

I have LHX Attack Chopper on the Mega Drive and would like to play some of the later levels. The only problem is that I don't have any codes, could you help me out?

Paul Worthington
Essex

Here are all the codes to use on the easy level of the game to give you some practice for the harder levels.

Streetfighter 2 (Amiga)

The best beat-em-up of 1992 is now out on the Amiga (see review on page 52). Here at GamesMaster we've got an excellent and exclusive cheat to turn it into the Championship Edition. (Well almost, but without playing the bosses). When you're playing the game, pause it and type in "7KIDS" you will now be able to play Character vs Character.

The first battle sees Ryu having a go at Dhalsim. Nice try boys. Check this...

Chun Li and Chun Li get it on in style and leave the rest for dead. Next.

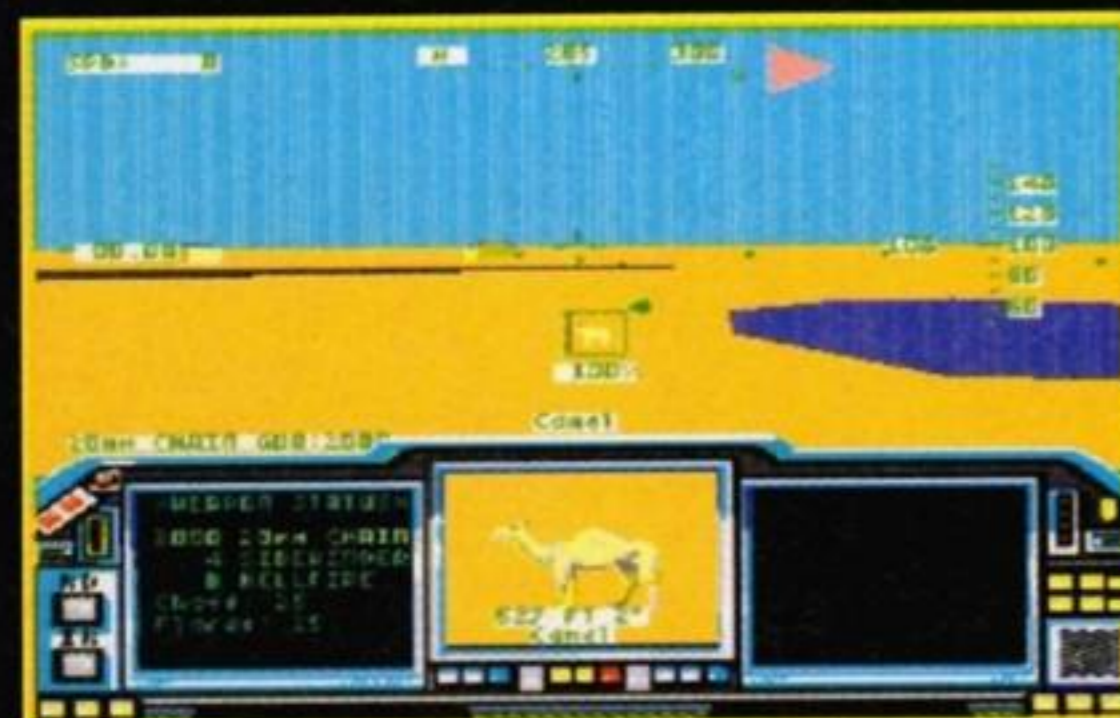

Ryu and Ryu, not to be thwarted by the Chun Lis, have a fight of their own.

TEST THE DEPTHS OF THE UNQUESTIONABLE, ER, SIZE OF THE GAMESMASTER'S KNOWLEDGE...

Here in Libya, second home of the chopper crew, things are looking nice and rosy. But here we have an Abrams ready to spoil the fun.

Even the camels are joining in the desert destruction. Right enough of that, have some 20mm cannon fire in yer face.

SUPER NES

DEAR GAMESMASTER

I'm having a bit of trouble with the Addams Family on the SNES. I can get a fair way into the game but keep getting killed. Are there any cheats? Simon Forrester Nottingham

Try the following password, BLRRR. This will give you 5 hearts, 36 lives and what's more, you'll have rescued Puggsley, Wednesday, Granny and Uncle Fester, with only Morticia to find.

The Addams family. The source of constant amusement in the late 1950s. Not all that funny, but good to click your fingers to.

SUPER MARIO WORLD (SNES)

DEAR GAMESMASTER

I'm stuck in Super Mario World. I can't find the red switch palace and therefore can't complete some of the levels, so could you please tell me where it is? Patricia Cullinane Streatham, London

I certainly can. It's in Vanilla Dome 2. Swim along through the level until you see a single block just above the water. Jump out onto it and jump over to the right. Find one of the prize block switches and carry it back over to the left. When you can't go any further, activate the switch and drop down the left-hand gap. You should now find the key and keyhole and be able to enter the red switch palace.

3 Drop down and collect the coins, and run left.

1 Get to this block and jump up to the right.

2 Now take this block to about here and press.

And so the great Krusty stood before his flock of meece and sang. The meece didn't find this funny and ran away. Krusty had failed, miserably.

DEAR GAMESMASTER

I have got Krusty's Super Fun House for my SNES, but can't get off level 1. I would like to try some other levels. Do you have any codes for the English game?

Graham De Mornay Arbroath

I certainly do have some codes. These are the UK passcodes for this game...

- Level 2: Skinner
- Level 3: Scratchy
- Level 4: Bartdude
- Level 5: Bouvier

DEAR GAMESMASTER

Every time I get to the end of Super Ghouls and Ghosts, I seem to get sent back to the beginning of the game to collect Guinevere's Magic. What is this and where is it?

Matt Brace Bristol

When you're at the beginning quickly get the gold armour (working your way up through the power-ups until you have the gold armour). The next chest you open will release two fairies who will turn into a bracelet and drop to the ground. Pick up this bracelet and you will have obtained the magical weapon. There isn't a set point in the game at which this has to be done, just as long as you obtain the magical weapon before the end.

Lots of Ghouls 'n' Ghosts being very ghoulish 'n' ghostish.

Arthur cast an eye over ghost land. All the ghouls looked crap.

Once the weapon is in your possession, when you are hit you'll keep the weapon, although if you pick up another weapon without the armour you'll have to get the weapon all over again.

DEAR GAMESMASTER

In Super Probotector on the SNES, I keep losing all my lives. Do you have any hints or tips that could help me?

Carlton Saunders
Manchester

I certainly do, try this. It only works in a two-player game and you'll have to be a bit sneaky (or have a friend who's nice). Once all your lives have gone, press the A button and you'll re-enter the game. You can keep doing this until your partner runs out of lives.

DEAR GAMESMASTER

I would like to get to the end of John Madden on the SNES and play in the Super Bowl. Do you have any codes?

Hugh Pastor Bournemouth

American Football action with the most revered footy player of them all... John Madden.

I certainly have, if you try this code it will put you into the Super Bowl.
Super Bowl Code: BBBB5nZ5C.

DEAR GAMESMASTER

Please could you help me, I'm not exactly the best gamesplayer (unlike you) and I would like some help on Great tip! Pop the white dots and you'll receive a two second bonus.

Flying off course as usual, Mr P Wings tries desperately to get back on track. He fails abysmally.

Pilotwings on the SNES. Do you have any tips or cheats which you could give me?

Martin Willis Birmingham

I don't have any cheats as such but I can give you some level codes...

- Level 2: 985205
- Level 3: 394391
- Level 4: 520771
- Secret Command 1: 108048
- Level 5: 400718
- Level 6: 773224
- Level 7: 165411
- Level 8: 760357
- Secret Command 2: 882943

DEAR GAMESMASTER

I can never build big enough cities in Sim City on the SNES and always lose the game. Do you have any cheats which will enable me to improve on my current state of play?

Kevin Mason Plymouth

No sooner said than done. All you need to do is spend all of your money in a single financial year.

Now when the Tax screen appears in front of you hold down the L button and exit from the screen. Continue holding down the L button and re-enter the Tax screen, then increase everything to 100%.

Exit the screen and let go of the L button. As the year goes on, your money will grow to $999,999.

On the other hand, if you don't want to cheat, just wait until you reach City status and then take out a loan from the Bank.

From this poxy little town we turn to the teeming city below, and there's a hell of a difference.

This is supposed to be a two-player screenshot but player two died.

And boy are we in trouble. Radiation everywhere. Mcdonalds anyone?

WIN A DECADE WORTH OF

(Well, sort of).

Right. Firstly congratulate yourself on turning to this page, sit down in a comfy chair with a cup of tea and listen up. This is a great competition. And like all great things, it's based on several fundamentally simple principles.

The main tenet around which these two pages are constructed is that you can win yourself a year's worth of games from one of the biggest forwards on the muddy rugby-pitch that is the software industry - none other than Electronic Arts. Of course, you might have been misled by the heading referring to a decade's worth of games. What it means is that 10 people can win a year's worth each.

We're talking about quite a large number of items here. Every game that's released for your machine will be sent directly from EA to your door. Not only to your door, but through it and onto the mat below, next to that manky pair of old wellies which nobody's cleaned for six months.

EA have been going for years, and their products are highly regarded on all formats. This is why the prize is so special. A rough calculation would show that you'll probably get around £1000 worth of software, maybe more in that year. So do your best and get into the lucky 10.

SO WHAT CAN I EXPECT IF I WIN?

Ah, glad you asked that. Well let's have a look at a few of the items Electronic Arts (EA) have got in their Berkshire-based pipeline. Here are a few previews. Obviously there are loads and loads of other things, just waiting to be announced.

JOHN MADDEN FOOTBALL 93 SNES

A totally storming game, with stunning 3D action, which means that you're right in the thick of the offensive, defensive and, er, in-offensive plays that occur. There are dozens of plays to call, and you can control any of the players, or you can let the processor do the hard work.

ROAD RASH 2

Mega Drive

Climb on your powerful motorbike and charge around the USA in a lethal display of competitive riding and face-punching. The idea is to win each stage, in order to earn dosh for a better bike.

DESERT STRIKE

SNES & Amiga

Blow up things! See folk run for cover! Fly around smoothly! Do loads of missions! It's all in this game, and the addictiveness will grab you by the, er, throat and shake you 'til your shoes fall off.

ROLO TO THE RESCUE

Mega Drive

You can "be" a cute elephant in this gorgeous-looking platform game. Rolo must be guided through the attractive levels, whilst avoiding the baddies. It's so cute and playable, you'll weep long into the night for the poor chap.

PGA 2

SNES & Mega Drive

Play golf like they do on TV! In fact, play golf on TV with this golf-playing game.

Marvellous scenery, an excellent golfing 'feel' and plenty of holes, bunkers and trees make this a jolly good golf game.

SPACE HULK

Amiga

Roam around a hulk (in space, presumably). Also get a chance to kill things. Probably avoid other things (which might not be possible to kill). Realise that GamesMaster don't know that much about the game, other than it's going to be completely excellent. Mock their ignorance.

CADE'S F GAMES!

AND NOW THE QUESTIONS

Of course, you'll be thinking that the questions are going to be simple and obvious, so that loads of people write in and the competition can be judged a success purely by the number of entries.

Well you're wrong. Here we have some tough queries. Necessarily so, in fact, to sort out the truly dedicated fans from the other garbage that enters our competitions. Each question requires you to write an answer clearly on the form. Feel free to photocopy it if you don't want to hack up your mag, but don't send multiple entries, because they always arrive together, we always find out and they always get their stamps ripped off and then get hurled into a big blue wheelie-bin with a permanent coffee-sludge at the bottom, to be ignored for ever.

THE QUESTIONS

- 1 What three geometric solids make up the EA logo?
- 2 Who hosts the American Football on Channel Four?
- 3 Name a successful British motorcycle producing firm.
- 4 Name two famous people who are currently in prison (in any country).
- 5 Which helicopter features in Desert Strike?
- 6 Rolo (out of Rolo to the Rescue) is an elephant. Name a film with elephants in it (not Dumbo).
- 7 What band was Billy Idol first in?
- 8 What's Bill Clinton's wife called? (Spell it correctly.)
- 9 Where are Rioja wines produced?
- 10 Who is the Associate Producer of the GamesMaster TV show?

All you need to do now is write the answers in the spaces provided on the form, tick one box to choose the machine you want your software to run on (SNES, Mega Drive, Amiga or PC only, unfortunately), and send to the address at the bottom.

Send the form to: Let's Hope EA Release Loads of Stuff Next Year Compo, GamesMaster, 29 Monmouth St, Bath BA1 2BL. Don't forget your name and address.

Some more rules: get the entry to us by 28 Feb, and don't bother if you work for EA or Future. Hell, you can get the games free anyway, probably. The decision of Editor Jim is final. Don't enter into correspondence with him, and whatever you do, don't sit on his leather jacket in the pub.

THE BEST GAMES BY

Welcome to the GamesMarket!
Over the page are hundreds of dynamite deals demanding your attention. And in order to help you get the very most from the topper trades overleaf, we've drawn up a special GamesMaster Guide to Buying Things. HOORAY!

CHECKLIST

- Make sure you know what you want. Check that the supplier can provide what you need.
- Will the goods work with your existing equipment (TV?)
- Get a demonstration if this is possible.
- Are there any hidden extras? Do you need to buy extra memory, another controller etc?
- What technical support can you expect?
- Check the guarantee terms.
- Make sure you keep a record of everything.
- Check the price and delivery details.
- Check everything works when it first arrives.

BUYING BY PHONE

1. Speak Clearly!
2. Check the tech specs of what you're buying. Will it run on your TV? Will the software run on your machine?
3. Take the time to compare prices from different ads.
4. Make sure that what you are ordering is in stock.
5. Check whether or not there are delivery charges to be added to the cost of the items you're buying. And check how long your goods will take to arrive.
6. Make a note of the date and time when you ordered your goods.

BUYING BY POST

If there's a form printed as part of the advert, use it! If you don't want to cut up your mag, photocopy it. Make sure you fill in the form correctly. If there's no form, state clearly what you want to order, in which issue of the magazine you saw the advert, what page it was on, how much all the various parts of your order cost and the total amount. Remember to put a date on your order and keep a copy of it.

RETURNING GOODS

Whether you buy them in a shop or through the post, goods have to meet all the following criteria:

1. The goods must be of "merchantable quality".
2. The goods must be "as described" in the advert.
3. The goods must be fit for the purpose for which they were sold.

If they fail to meet any of the criteria above, you are entitled to either:

- Return them for a refund.
- Receive compensation for part of the value.
- Get a replacement or free repair.

When you return anything, make sure you have proof of purchase and that you return the item as soon as possible after receiving it. For this reason it is important that you check the goods as soon as they arrive, make sure everything has been supplied and it works properly.

HOW TO PAY

Pay by credit card where at all possible. This way you may be able to claim the money from the credit card company even if the firm you ordered from has gone bust or refuses to help sort out your problem.

If you don't have a credit card, use a cheque or postal order. Never send coins or notes through the mail.

AND THAT'S IT! ARMED WITH THE GUIDELINES ABOVE AND YOUR OWN COMMON SENSE, YOU CAN NOW VENTURE CONFIDENTLY INTO THE REALMS OF MAIL-ORDER PURCHASE!

If you've got something you want to get off your chest, something you want to ask (so long as it isn't "Can I connect my Star LP1080A to my Mega Drive") or something you wish to share with the world, drop us a line. We're especially keen on pictures of Sonic and Mario being horrible to each other, and we're always interested in pictures of your favourite Streetfighter characters. Oh, and pictures of Game Boys with arms and legs beating up Game Gears always make us chuckle. The address is Letters, GamesMaster, Future Publishing, 30 Monmouth Street, Bath, Avon, BA1 2BW.

CONGRATULATIONS

Congratulations on a superb mag and I hope it puts the naff old CVG to an early grave. Seriously, though, I have a few questions and suggestions for you:

1. Why aren't you reviewing PC games, as I see it as a serious gaming machine?
2. Will the Amiga 1200 be in the same league as PCs in terms of graphics, speed etc.?
3. Why did a lot of reviews in the first issue only have a single page?
4. Also neither these games nor the one-page reviews had the two monitors or the dials for graphics, sound etc. Why is this?
5. Will you be reviewing Streets of Rage for the Game Gear?

James Shaw
Moss Side
Manchester

Okay - we're not covering as many PC games as those for Sega, Nintendo and Amiga, but we are covering the machine. This month we've got the Maelstrom 3D Challenge game, Starfighter Ace, which is on the PC, and there's info about Alone in the Dark and three pages about the PC-based flight game, Air Warrior in our Global Warring feature; plenty to be going on with! As far as the A1200 goes, it's bloody great, and makes quite a lot of PCs look plain crap.

We've got to give some games less space than others in order to, er, give the others more. It's quite simple. The shorter reviews

(less than a page) don't get the dials since there isn't enough space, unfortunately. JD

COMISERATIONS

I bought your magazine and I think it's the best. But some cack-filled git tore off my poster and took my handbook so I was wondering if you could send me them. By the way, tell Dominik his jacket's cack.

Paul Corrigan
Glasgow
Scotland

Respect, Paul. Unfortunately, owing to the great demand and the fact that we can't be arsed to find an envelope, we are unable to send you a new poster and book. Sounds like what you need is a binder to keep your mags nice and safe from your thieving mates. Check out page 94, why dontcha? JD

COMPARISONS?

I was in WH Smiths when I first saw your mag. I picked it up and almost dropped it again because it was so packed with pages. I turned to the Contents page and looked round all the cubes of writing and then down the list of reviews. So far I was impressed. I flicked through the first couple of pages.

The first thing I noticed were the nice borders with the numbers clearly printed. One thing I often notice about mags is that half the pages don't have page numbers on, usually because half the pages are just adverts. I went on through the mag quite quickly and stopped on one of the reviews. I had a look around and the things I especially noticed and liked very much were the small boxes at the top of the page with all the data on them. In fact I found the whole review faultless. I always imagine myself designing a mag and cutting out all the faults I normally see. If I did your mag would be perfect and your one is: 10/10.

After flicking through all the pages I was thinking the mag would cost me about £3.00, but to my surprise and relief, I found it was only a stunning £1.75. After buying it and having a proper look at home I found it was even better than I thought and me and my sister had a good laugh over the board game.

One thing which I think would improve the mag would be if there were a few pages of letters in which people could write in asking questions like, "What's the difference between PAL and SCART?" (Not that I don't know).

Please would you tell me what is better - the SNES or the Amiga 600. Maybe in your next issue you could compare the two. I am thinking of getting one or the other. Or could you just tell me what you think? Please don't say they're hard to compare because they do different things!

Paul Matthew

There's a great career in advert copy writing for you, Paul. Now, as for your suggestions. A Questions and Answers page is fair enough, so long as you'd be happy losing a page of reviews, news or tips; we're only allowed to do so many pages a month, you see. As for your SNES and Amiga comparison article, 'fraid not.

SADDO CORNER

RUNNER-UP

Dear Whoever

Please could you send me a list of all the Mega Drive games which are out and which are coming out with the prices beside them. If you do not send me one within 28 days I will not buy GamesMaster magazine or any computer magazine again!

Chris Holliss

OUTRIGHT WINNER

I would like to say how much I've enjoyed watching the show on Channel 4 on Thursdays because you have ace challenges with some of the most fabulous, dynamic game gadgetry and all the other fine pieces of equipment you have to host and explain on your show. Your stand at the NEC from the 4 to 6 December 1992 was pretty astonishing I must say and it just looked a tad like the show you have on Channel 4. To say the least, I was gobsmacked on how much realistic it was and the diver you have on your show looked fab and wicked, sexy, fit and a right tall beauty I must tell you. And I don't know how you can work with a lass like that, because I don't think she will be blowing on the air supply because she will be blowing on something else, excuse me!

Anyway, let's cut a long story very, very short (Please - JD) Unlimited thanks for Dominik's autograph which said, Les Cheers, Dominik Diamond and a strong firm shake of the hand which goes to show what a guy you are. Apart from that - (Oh shut up you wretched boy- JD)

Leslie Squiggle

Are you a pulsating boil on the upper lip of humanity? Are you a piece of odorous fluff from the sweaty crevice of existence? If so, drop us a line at Saddo Corner with the most aggravating and unrealistic suggestion/demand/letter you can manage, and if your missive is sufficiently knock-kneed and lank we'll give you a name check. JD

It's like comparing a Formula One car to a Rolls Royce. It's a meaningless comparison. Certainly for the foreseeable future, there'll be no Which Machine Is Best features in GamesMaster. Anyone asking in future will be dealt with most severely.

CHOMP CHOCCIES

Wow! I'm stunned! The show is great, but the magazine is something else! Until now, I've had to put up with a really low quality mag called... (well, I think you know the one) which hardly has any Amiga reviews in. I own both a Super Nintendo And Amiga and I think you've got the balance just right. Anyway, to the point:

1. What exactly is Press Corner? Is it meant to have a dig at company's poor wording?
2. Please cover the A1200 in future issues.
3. Why are SNES games so expensive? For the price of Streetfighter 2 on the Super Nintendo, I could buy Amiga Pinball Fantasies (£30), Zool (£25), Ik+ (£8) and 20 Chomp chocolate bars. I know which gives me better value for money! I only have one game for my SNES (Mario World) - and that came with the pack! I doubt I will be able to afford a new SNES game for ages - in fact, I might even sell the machine (it's gathering dust at present). For example, what's the point in having a Jaguar XJ220 if you can't use it?

4. Which machine - Mega Drive, Amiga etc do you think has the best... (That's enough of that - JD).

5. Cut down on the ads a bit please - let's have more fab reviews!

Nathan White
Walsall

1. Yes. Press Corner is the possibly ill-advised part of the mag where we have a pop at mistakes in press releases in order to look big and clever.

2. Okay.

3. SNES games are expensive. But some of them really are worth the cash. Choose your games carefully and they'll give excellent value. Otherwise it's like owning a Jaguar XJ220 and complaining about the gas mileage.

CHEATCO INC?

Please could you help me. I would like to start up a cheats company on Amigas, Nintendos, Segas, PCs and Ataris. And I would like to know if it is legal, what age you have to be and what you would need to start it up. I am 13 years old. I own an Amiga 500, a black and white printer, a word processor, spreadsheet and a lot of software and accessories. I am pretty good with the working of computers. I would be advertising the cheats in magazines, then when people reply, I would send them to them for a small charge of 10p or 20p plus about 30p to cover package and posting. Could you tell me if this is possible at my age or does it require an adult?

David Kane

An interesting plan, holed somewhat by the facts that:

1) The law takes a dim view of companies run by people under 18.

2) Every games magazine on the shelves runs cheats sections.

3) There are about a dozen books full of cheats and playguides currently available.

4) You'd have to sell an inordinate amount of cheats to cover the cost of a £2000 ad.

THE BIG CONSPIRACY

I would like to start off bluntly by saying your magazine is crap! It appears from the contents of your magazine that it is sponsored by Commodore. All the biased opinions show Commodore as the best thing ever to appear in the world. You totally ignore all Atari products.

A quote from the mag said "This may look like another wonky ST, but it's not". I found this offensive and ludicrous. What rights have you to go around criticising the ST. You definitely have a conspiracy against the ST. The STE can do things the pile of crap will never be able to do. You even tried to claim the Falcon is crap and has not been released yet. These comments are totally unfounded. For your knowledge the Falcon has already been released and despite what you say it is not crap. I am sure it will prove itself in the near future and you will be made to eat your own words.

I also noticed that the best mag in the world ST Format didn't even get a mention even though you have mentioned PC Format and other PC mags. Is it in your contract with Commodore to put down the ST all the time? Everyone puts down the ST because it is not as popular as that other pile of crap, but how can it get anywhere if people always ignore it?

I would like to tell Dominik Diamond to go sit on a flag pole. How can he expect Celtic to get into a European Super League when they are so crap. I will be spreading bad things about your magazine in future.

Hope I never see your magazine again.

We pointed out that the Falcon "looks like a wonky old ST, but is in fact, Atari's new 32-bit wonder" because it comes in a case virtually identical to a wonky old ST. In the same way that if Ford put a new RS2000 engine in a Fiesta Finesse body, we might say "looks like a wonky old Fiesta Finesse, but is in fact Ford's new 135bhp wonder". We're sorry if it's confusing for you. As for our rights to go around criticising things, I rather thought that was the point of the magazine. And as you correctly point out, the STE can do things the pile of crap will never be able to do. So you can feel superior to owners of piles of crap. Now go away quickly. JD

CASH CONCERNS

I'm writing to congratulate you on your first magazine and how good I think it is. I first heard about your magazine at the Future Entertainment Show and to tell you the truth I didn't think much of it. I'm a proud Amiga owner and hope to become a SNES owner as well. I was pleased to see that your magazine was not entirely about consoles because that's why I did not think much of it when I heard about it.

I've got a few questions though...

- 1) Will the magazine's price increase rapidly?
- 2) Why is your magazine's price much less than all the others around?

I do have a moan about something as well. I do find your rating system a bit hard to follow.

If the GamesMaster show finished, I think I'll kill myself. But if you get rid of Patrick Moore, I promise to reconsider.

No plans for a price hike yet - but you know what we're like... JD

CURLEY IS MY HERO

I watch your series of GamesMaster every week (excellent) and as soon as I heard about the mag I just had to get it. Please can you tell me how to get a job like Danny Curley's. I'm only 13 years old so I know I'm too young, but as I get older I would like to do this as I play on different computers all the time. I have only got a Master System and a Game Boy, but my cousin has a Super NES and my two best mates have got a Mega Drive and a Game Gear.

Last of all I read an article in the Sunday Times about the CD ROM. Please could you tell me whether it would be a good idea to get it.

Rickey Thomas

In order to get yourself a dream life like Danny C, you should first make yourself into a world-class games player, then write to all the software companies. The important part of games testing is clearly explaining the faults you find, and then re-testing them. This is unfortunately a complete slog and by the end of each test, you'll probably never want to see the game ever again. Unfortunately, everyone always forgets about this part and still applies for testers' jobs. JD

HANDBOOK SEQUEL?

I just thought I'd drop you a quick line to congratulate you on the mag in general and, most importantly, thank you for the Winner's Handbook. I've been stuck on so many games for so long, and it really helped me out. I've got lots of games, and so it's always easy to abandon them half way through, as soon as life starts to get a bit difficult. Now, however, I'm pleased to be able to say that I've progressed significantly thanks to your book.

I realise that it was just a cunning plot to make us buy the first issue of the magazine, and must have cost a fair bit to make, but are there any plans for follow-up editions?

Maybe you could sell some through the pages of the magazine if sticking them on the front is too expensive?

Anyway, it was just a thought. Many thanks for the book and congratulations once again on a fine magazine. If you can maintain the same levels of quality as went into the first one, you'll have a hit on your hands!

Jeremy Briers

Aw, shucks. Well, at the moment there aren't any plans for a sequel to the Winner's Handbook. To be honest, We're just not sure if there are enough tips out there at the moment. However, your idea of selling books through the magazine is an interesting one. What do other readers think? You already have the chance to buy T-Shirts and a rather attractive binder, but is there anything else to do with GamesMaster that you'd like to see offered?

VERUCCA CORNER

I am writing to you because I am in the picture taken at Earls Court shown in your mag. I am 9 years old and have a Master System. I watch GamesMaster every week and enjoy it. The Earls Court show was mind blowing! I rushed out to buy your mag and couldn't believe my eyes when I saw it was me in your photo. I have enclosed a photo so you can see it's me! I am wearing the same shirt.

Mark Potter

Very interesting, Mark. We have a picture of plenty of people in Earls Court, and we have a picture of you, in the same shirt, in your garden. Unfortunately, you aren't the person with your thumb "aloft" are you? No. So by rights we shouldn't be the slightest bit interested in your letter. However, since you have managed to get your foot into such a peculiar position, and seem so relaxed about it, we have decided you're a bit of a geezer. And so we'll be sending you some games.

STREETFIGHTER - XMAS 93 EDITION?

Being the immensely popular international playboys that we are here at GamesMaster, it came as absolutely no surprise when our top drinking mates at Capcom sent us a Christmas card.

What did surprise us was that the card took the form of an incredible first glimpse of next year's winter blockbuster, Streetfighter - Christmas Edition.

Apparently, the game will feature a number of opponents representing different aspects of the festive season. As well as Santa and Rudolf pictured here (very much a Ryu and Blanka situation) players will be able to take the role of Elf, Snowman, Fairy, Turkey and Senile Aunty Maud. Each has a set of special moves like snowballs and, er, other things. And there are even rumours about the bosses being invisible ghosts of Christmas Past, Present and Future. We'll be bringing you more information on this hot new title as we receive it!

Oh, alright. The card in fact came from Paul Kidby, who does our front cover artwork, but it's a nice thought, isn't it?

NEXT MONTH

It's hard to believe that anything could be in any way superior to or more satisfying than the glorious fun-packed organ you're holding at this moment (oh dear), but it's true. The name of this mysterious and incredible item? Well, it's obviously the next ish of GamesMaster, or we wouldn't be writing about it in the Next Month page would we? Be realistic.

Anyway, the next issue is full of all the same stuff that you've had this time (you know, news, previews, letters and all that) except we'll be writing about different games. There will be a review of Streets of Rage 2, the sequel to the most bone-crunchingly excellent beat-em-up on the Mega Drive. We'll be bringing you info on Microprose's latest flight sim Harrier, and Mick and Mack (the Global Gladiators) will be put through their paces by the demanding GamesMaster team. Most exciting of all, though, is Walker: a completely obscenely violent shoot-em-up featuring a 20 foot tall robot.

Everything apart from that, as us magazine folk are prone to say when we haven't the faintest idea what else is in the next issue, is top secret. Rest assured though that it'll be great and everything, so make sure you buy it.
